Dialysis Support Program

Dialysis needs can often pose a special hardship for those patients who are in a short-term or extended stay, as they travel back and forth to a dialysis center and undergo time-consuming treatment. At The Laurels of Mt. Pleasant, we are pleased to be able to offer our guests the convenience of an on-site dialysis center that helps to reduce some of the strain, stress and time loss normally associated with this type of treatment regimen.

Program Protocol

The on-site dialysis is an integral and unique portion of our comprehensive Dialysis Support Program. This program offers respite, short-term skilled and long-term residential services designed to meet the needs of patients with end-stage renal disease. The Laurels' Dialysis Support program is appropriate for adult patients who have an established diagnosis and who are currently stabilized in their general medical condition (e.g. stable cardiac status). Attending physicians are welcome to follow their patient's participation in our Medically Complex Programs, but if that is not feasible, a member of the Laurels' medical staff will attend to the patient.

Program Design

The Laurels' staff trained in the special dietary requirements, fluid management and common needs of end-stage renal patients. The Laurels can further offer end-stage renal patients:

- IV Antibiotic Therapy
- Enteral Nutrition
- Wound Care
- In-house rehabilitation for any related neurologic disorders and/or general deconditioning

We work closely with our guest, family, attending physician, consulting nephrologist and the dialysis center team to deliver a comprehensive plan of care designed to maximize the guest's quality of life.

Short-Term Nursing and Rehabilitation

The Laurels of Mt. Pleasant cares for individuals with a wide variety of illnesses or injuries. Our short-term stay programs offer comprehensive care in the following areas:

- Orthopedic Unit
- Neuro Rehabilitation Program
- IV Therapy
- Cardiac Recovery Program
- Infection Resolution Program
- Wound Healing & Wound Prevention Program
- Respiratory Program
- Post Surgical Delirium Program
- Digestive Diseases Program
- Alzheimer's Skilled Services Program

Extended Stays and Long-Term Care

Extended and long-term care stays are appropriate for individuals that require greater level of care and support than can be provided at home or within an independent living setting. Laurels guests typically need assistance with their daily activities due to physical and/or cognitive limitations

At The Laurels of Mt. Pleasant, our guests receive around-the-clock nursing care, nutritious and appetizing meals, and a broad variety of recreation and leisure opportunities. Our goal is for our guests to achieve their highest possible level of independence and quality of life within a comfortable living environment. We refer to this as the Laurel Way of Caring.

Respite guests choose which types of activities they wish to participate in, determine how much or how little they wish to socialize with other guests, and enjoy the selective dining menu available at The Laurels of Mt. Pleasant.

Palliative Care and Hospice

Palliative care provides symptoms management along with guest and family support when cure-oriented treatment is no longer possible or desired. Within a palliative plan of care, emphasis is placed on guests comfort and emotional well-being.

Palliative care may be delivered as part of a short-term stay following a hospitalization before a guest returns home. A short-term palliative care stay may be covered by Medicare or other insurance. Palliative care may also be delivered on an extended stay basis.

If an extended stay guest is receiving palliative care for a terminal illness, they may elect to enroll in a Medicare certified hospice program and receive additional services from a local hospice provider during their stay at The Laurels of Mt. Pleasant.

A list of local hospice organizations that provide services to guests is available at the facility.

Making a plan for retirement now will pay off years down the road

By Jane Peterson
Special to Digital First Media

Preparing for retirement can be an overwhelming task. Without the benefit of a good pension, most Americans are left to build wealth and save for retirement on their own — and many are unprepared to do so.

When you're young, it seems like there is all the time in the world to get ready for a retirement that is decades away. Instead, paying off student debt, raising a family, buying a home and enjoying vacations, dinners out and entertainment options may be a priority.

As you get older, you know you need to save for retirement, but life may get in the way of good intentions. Death, divorce, job loss, illness, injury — these are all unexpected situations that can put a serious dent in your financial planning efforts.

That's why it is critical to save sooner rather than later, said Sandra D. Adams, CFP®, lead financial planner and partner at The Center for Financial Planning, Inc., in Southfield.

Not only will you save money that you likely won't be able to get your hands on until you actually retire, you'll also form good saving habits early on.

She said a 401k and employer plan are the best way to start saving for retirement because the contributions come directly from your paycheck and if there is any employer match, that's free money for you to take advantage of. In lieu of an employer plan, a Roth IRA, if you qualify based on income, is the next best step, said Adams.

"The contribution limit is currently $5,500/year plus $1,000 catch up contribution for those over age 50," she said.

If you plan to depend on Social Security, consider waiting until age 70 to receive maximum benefits if you can, said Frank Pare, CFP®, national president of the Financial Planning Association. Also, make sure you have accumulated assets and not bad debt liabilities, he said. While you may be concerned about a lack of retirement planning and funds, it is never too late to get started as any amount does help.

"However, if you wait until you're 60s or 70s, you may never truly be able to 'retire,'" said Adams.

If you continue working during retirement, you'll likely not be alone. Many retirees choose to work part-time because they like to be around energetic people or to fund their dream vacations. Others volunteer their time and talents in a workplace atmosphere or start their own business.

"Retirement today is not like retirement of yesterday," said Pare.

BEYOND DOLLARS AND CENTS

As you prepare for retirement, remember there are other items to consider beyond just how much money you have saved.

You need to look at protecting your assets and everything you have worked so hard to build and achieve, said Pare. Just as important as Social Security, pensions, life insurance and personal savings are estate planning, medical directives, trusts and wills.

The time to put these into place, he said, is when you are in your peak earning years, typically your 40s and 50s. Beyond this, look at downsizing, he said. Take a good look at your current living situation and decide if you want to make a change. You could opt to stay in the same area, move to a warmer climate, trade in your home for a condo, move in with your children or find an assisted living or senior community apartment.

Don't wait until it's too late before finding the right financial planner

By Jane Peterson
Special to Digital First Media

For the most part, people think that they only need a financial planner when they are either seriously in debt or have an abundance of money. While it's true that a financial planner can help you formulate a budget to pay off debts as quickly as possible and find the right investments to help your net worth grow, they can also provide you with a fresh perspective on your daily spending and help you zero in on your financial goals.

"Many folks think they may not have 'enough' to work with a financial planner when they are younger, but in reality it makes so much sense to get guidance early, have a plan and to be on track to avoid the pitfalls that so many people make. We find that so many people wait to come in and are already in their 50's before they start real planning and then are in reality behind in many areas when that is not necessary," said Sandra D. Adams, CFP®, lead financial planner and partner at The Center for Financial Planning, Inc., in Southfield.

Another myth is that working with a financial planner has to cost a lot of money. Some financial planners take pro bono cases while others charge on an hourly basis, said Frank Pare, CFP®, national president of the Financial Planning Association.

However, since most people don't tend to share their financial situation with friends and family, let alone a stranger, it can be challenging to find a financial planner that you trust enough to share the intimate details of your life with.

"You need to find the one you can work best

with, the one (who) hears you, speaks to you and can guide you, engage you," said Pare.

For this reason, it's good to get referrals from people that you know. A few other tips courtesy of Adams:

- Find someone who is qualified and does actual financial planning, not just investment management
- Do your own due diligence to check qualifications

- Meet with the planner to make sure they are a good fit for you and your situation

Remember, a good financial planner that you feel comfortable with will be able to help you reassess life situations like divorce and death. He or she can help you go from Plan B to Plan C when stress kicks in and you feel like you are making one financial reaction after another. Financial planning can be a process, so start by focusing on what's important to you, said Pare.

"Talk to a financial planner to visualize what you want to achieve," he said.

Questions to ask a financial planner

Deciding to work with a financial planner is just the first step. Finding a good financial planner that you can work with, who has your best interest at heart, who listens to your goals and dreams, is your second move.

Just as if you were looking for a new doctor, consider interviewing financial planners you want to work with. Ask them these questions, said Frank Pare,

CFP®, national president of the Financial Planning Association:

- Are you a Certified Financial Planner™?
- Do you believe in the fiduciary standard for your clients that puts their needs in front of your own?
- Describe the financial planning process. What should I expect by the end of this process?

Who's in control?

You or your money?

I can help put YOU in control with a practical saving plan. Call me today – I can help you plan for life.

New retirement hotspots emerging for Michiganders ready to make the move

By Jane Peterson
Special to Digital First Media

Many people dream of moving to a warmer climate when they are ready to retire. That's why states like Florida, Arizona and Nevada are popular with retirees who want to spend their days lounging by the pool or playing a round of golf.

Others, however, find it difficult to leave the Great Lakes State. Whether they want to spend time with friends and family or enjoy all four seasons without the threat of hurricanes, wildfires and alligators, there are plenty of good places to retire to in Michigan.

Popular regions include northern and western Michigan. Both have an abundance of natural beauty as well as access to a wide variety of leisure activities, whether you prefer sports like fishing, tennis, skiing and golfing or relaxation time on the boat, in a winery, at a campground or in the garden.

In fact, U.S. News & World Report named Grand Rapids one of the 2018 Best Places to Retire in the United States. It ranked high in meeting Americans' expectations for retirement in areas such as housing affordability, health care and overall happiness. However, it's the warm, friendly atmosphere in Grand Rapids, combined with its scenic location, craft breweries and art events that make it a great place to enjoy retirement whether it's warm and humid or cold and snowy outside.

Saugatuck, with its numerous galleries, studios and art festivals is also a wonderful retirement destination for seniors who have a strong appreciation for the arts.

"It's the beauty of the natural area, our beaches, such (as) the famous Oval Beach, and our wonderful downtown shopping with more than 30 art galleries and some amazing dining options as well," said Josh Albrecht, executive director of the Saugatuck Douglas Area Convention & Visitors Bureau.

Ann Arbor is also attractive because of its cultural offerings, array of restaurants and access to high quality health care. It combines big city culture with the neighborly values of a small Midwestern town and was ranked the #1 Best Place to Live in the U.S. by Livability.

Must-see attractions, according to the folks at Destination Ann Arbor include a tour of Michigan Stadium, a reuben sandwich at Zingerman's Deli and a live performance or movie at the historic Michigan Theater or State Theater.

Traverse City is a great place for active adults who enjoy outdoor activities like cycling and boating.

Jenifer Rachel, associate broker at Keller Williams Premier in Clarkston and president of North Oakland County Board of Realtors 2018, said many people from Oakland County are also moving to up and coming areas in the northern part of the state, like Gladwin. This community has a lot to offer.

"Gladwin as a retirement community is an appealing place for those who live downstate," said Yvette Keast, executive director for the Gladwin County Chamber of Commerce, in an email. "It is only a few hour drive from their families for an easy day trip for visits or special events."

The community has a new state-of-the-art urgent care facility with Mid-Michigan Health and housing available for seniors in the area varies from condo-style living, cottage, lake homes, apartment living or a single family home to assisted living, in-home care, assisted living centers and nursing/rehabilitation facilities.

Amenities include outdoor activities like fishing, hunting, biking and horseback riding; events such as fish fry Friday nights that benefit local non-profits, arts and crafts in the park, outdoor theatre, Fall BBQ at our local mid-Michigan College, Blues & Rib Fest, ORV Fun Fest, huge July 4th parade and fireworks, Christmas parade of lights, raffles, bake sales, sidewalk sale

Plan Ahead

We'll take the first step with you.

A plan for the Future is A plan for Peace of Mind

Most of us plan ahead in life. We plan for our wedding, our children's education, family vacations, and other significant expected life events. We also plan for the unexpected events of life by purchasing home, auto and medical insurance.

Understanding the benefits of pre-planning has prompted many to take the step to plan their own arrangements.

Peace of Mind

Many who have undergone the emotional strain of arranging a funeral within hours of losing a loved one have made the choice to pre-plan their own funeral. Doing so lifts the burden from their loved ones by relieving decision-making pressure at a time of grief and emotional stress.

Personal Choice

Funeral arrangements are a deeply personal choice. Pre-planning provides you with the time needed to make practical, detailed decisions that reflect your standards, lifestyle, taste and budget.

Lower Costs

You do not have to set aside funds for your plan, but doing so protects you against escalating funeral costs. By locking in rates at today's funeral costs and ensure that the necessary funds are set aside.

In Person

Please call us today to set up an appointment to discuss pre-planning with a caring professional.

Five life insurance myths busted: why you need it

By StatePoint Media

Life insurance. It's something that most people need but a topic that no one wants to discuss, leading to many misconceptions.

To help you make sense of it all, here are five common myths debunked — just in time for National Life Insurance Awareness Month in September:

1. I'm single; I don't need life insurance.

Most people think life insurance is more necessary for married people than for singles, according to the 2017 Insurance Barometer Study by Life Happens and LIMRA. But even if you're single and don't have children, you may still leave behind loved ones who would have to pay your debts. For example, if you have a cosigner on a loan, he or she would be responsible to pay it back.

Life insurance can provide peace of mind by potentially paying off any remaining debt. Or, if you want to leave money to a charity, life insurance can help ensure your wishes are carried out.

2. It's too expensive.

Cost is one of the top reasons people don't purchase life insurance. Sixty-six percent of participants in the Insurance Barometer Study said it's too expensive. The same consumers overestimated the price by more than three times the actual cost. It can cost as little as $14.24 per month for a $250,000 policy at Erie Insurance, for example. That's less than 50 cents a day. Millennials can get an even bigger break by purchasing while they're still young. Premiums are typically less expensive since they're generally healthier and have fewer assets.

3. My employer provides life insurance; I don't need my own.

While it's great to have coverage through an employer, it often isn't enough. "A typical group life benefit is two times your annual salary, but you may need more like six to eight times your salary just to break even," says Louis Colaizzo, senior vice president for Life at Erie Insurance.

What's more, if you take another job, your policy may not be transferable.

4. I'm a stay-at-home parent.

If you're not the breadwinner in your household, you may think your family doesn't depend on your income.

However, think about the value of all the unpaid services that would need to be replaced, such as childcare, household cleaning, transportation and cooking.

A stay-at-home parent in 2018 contributes a salary of $162,581 annually, according to research by Salary.com.

5. I don't have the time to research this or sign up.

An insurance agent can quickly walk you through the process to identify what you need and your options, as well as explain the terms. Think of your agent as a trusted partner who will keep an eye on how your policy is keeping up with your life.

Plus, the application at such providers as Erie Insurance only takes about 15 minutes, doesn't include complicated forms and may not require doctor's visits.

Bottom line: most people could benefit from life insurance, but it's not a one-size-fits-all scenario.

The amount needed really depends on individual circumstances.

To protect those who matter most, check with your insurance agent to make sure you get the right coverage.

HOW TO CHOOSE THE RIGHT LIVING ROOM FURNITURE

Your living room is one of the most important spaces in your home. It's often the first room guests encounter upon entering, and it's probably where you and your family spend the majority of your time together.

It's a good idea to create a floor plan on paper so you can figure out different ways of fitting in the furniture that's caught your eye. Planning helps you efficiently utilize all available space, while avoiding cluttering. It also helps you to include room for walkways around your furniture.

A handy checklist to follow for planning your living area could be:

- Take measurements. Using a tape measure, calculate the dimensions of your room, remembering to take any recesses into account.
- Draw up a floor plan. This allows you to see how much space you have to work with. Draw out a few different ideas you have for furnishings, ensuring you some space around each furniture piece.
- Measure your doorways. If the furniture you've ordered comes assembled, be sure that it is able to fit through your doorways when delivery time comes.
- Consider what color you would like your furniture to be. Color profoundly affects the mood of your room. With this in mind, neutral woods work every time. For pops of color, think about buying a few throws or cushions.
- Purchase good quality pieces. By buying solid, sturdy, investment pieces, you'll find that your furniture has a very long life, and you'll save on the expense of replacing each item every few years.

“HOW TO ADD A BACKYARD SHED FOR STORAGE”

Most of us can use more space, whether it's for working, storing or doing hobbies. But adding square footage to an existing home can be time consuming and costly. That's why many homeowners are turning to backyard sheds.

These freestanding structures often don't require permits and are quick and easy to set up; their basic construction means a short installation time. So what would you do with an extra room?

First Steps

- 1. Consider size and function. First determine what size space you need and what it will be used for. Do you need just a storage shed for lawn equipment? Will you use it for a gardening and potting? A pool house? A greenhouse? A kids' playroom? This will help drive the design.
- 2. Measure. Measure all the items you plan to store in your shed, then accounting for storage growth over time. People try to go the cheap, small route and come back later wishing they had gotten a bigger one because they ran out of space so fast.
- 3. Check your local zoning ordinances. Every municipality has different restrictions when it comes to sheds and other accessory buildings. Many codes will dictate the size of your structure and how far it must be from your property line. “The vast majority of counties across the [United States] allow up to 120 square feet without a permit,” says Jeremy Horgan-Kobleski, the founder of Studio Shed, which manufactures prefab sheds. “That's why our 10-foot by 12-foot unit is the most popular and one of the reasons we're seeing a surge in the popularity of these structures.”

He says typically these structures must be sited about 3 to 5 feet from the property line. (Even if your city doesn't require a permit, it will still have general rules about where your structure can be sited on your lot, so always check first.)

5 Advantages of a Metal Roof

There are many factors to consider when choosing the right material for your roof replacement. Whether it's assessing how the weather in your region will impact your roof, or considering the longevity of different roof covering materials, weighing your options when it comes to roofing can be a complex process. One type that's becoming more and more popular with homeowners is metal roofing. Take look at what makes metal roofing an architecturally appealing and reliable choice for your home.

1. Longevity

One of the biggest factors to consider when picking out a new roof covering is how long it will last. If you decide to go with metal roofing, you can rest assured that your roof will protect your home for decades to come. This is thanks to metal's ability to stand up to different types of weather conditions, be it severe snowstorms or extensive heat.

2. Safety

A major factor that should not be overlooked when picking out a new roof covering is safety. Picking a metal surface for your new roof is one of the safest decisions you can make for your home. Metal roofs are noncombustible, which means they are a renowned option for fire resistance. In fact, once you install new metal roofing on top of your house, you'll be the proud owner of a surface that boasts a Class A fire rating, the best level of resistance available on the market.

3. Compatibility

You will want a surface that matches any visual aesthetic and style of your home. Fortunately, metal roofing comes in many style options that will enhance any type of architecture or color scheme your home possesses. You can even find a wide assortment of metal roofing accessories, such as color-matched trims, that allow for optimal customization in design planning.

4. Energy efficiency

Another reason to choose metal roofing is that it's an environmentally friendly investment for your property. Many options are made from recycled materials such as aluminum, which is most often 100 percent recyclable; this means you can rest assured you're making an eco-efficient purchase. This type of surface is also energy efficient, as it reflects the sun's rays instead of absorbing heat. This will help keep your home's internal temperature cooler and save you on air conditioning costs.

5. Low Maintenance

Along with being resistant to both rot and extreme weather conditions, metal roofing is easy to keep looking new. With no annual maintenance necessary, you will save time on upkeep over the years. To keep your metal free of debris, simply spray clean with a gentle water hose or pressure washer – your manufacturer will tell you what's best to use.

Since replacing a roof is a big investment for your property, it's important that you pick a material that not only lasts, but will also add architectural value to your home. When your roof is due for a roof replacement, consider going with metal roofing since its beneficial qualities will serve you and your home for many years ahead.
