Better Days Lie Ahead

January 6th seemed like a normal Tuesday until I received 3:00 pm text message about Goodman’s future closing. I attended a meeting later that day, in which Goodman management gave our mayors, state representative and IDB director a summary of the Goodman plan for the next two years. I left the meeting partly confused, angry and sad. I still can't say I've fully grasped the announcement and exactly what it means because how our community works together will define the impact. I do have a deep belief our community's greatest days are ahead because of our people.

We’ve been through plants closing before and recovered very well. In the 1990’s and within a few years of each other, Elk Yarn Mills, Eagle Snacks and Lee all closed, which eliminated 1,300 jobs from our community. We have ample opportunity to thrive and be a leader in southern middle Tennessee. The Industrial Development Board (IDB) has submitted 19 proposals within the last 90 days to companies that are interested in the attributes of Lincoln County. We would have only been able to submit proposals for 32% of those requests, if our community, with the lead of IDB, had not built a new industrial building. Another way to look at the percentages is we more than doubled our chances over the last 90 days of attracting a new employer to our community by having this new industrial building.

Frito-Lay will include characteristics of our workforce as hardworking, dependable and skilled for reasons to expand here. While we have enjoyed one of the lowest unemployment rates in the state for over five years, local companies have recognized the values of our community by investing more than of $100 million in capital and creating over 350 new jobs. Frito-Lay built an $80 million dollar high tech sorting and distribution center that opened last year. Franke last year built a 78,000 square foot shipping and receiving center, which gave them the ability to hire and produce more stainless steel fixtures. C&S just finished their expansion, which resulted in 75 new injection molding related jobs. IDB passed PILOTs that helped Franke, Frito-Lay and C&S with each of their expansions.

Hired by the State of Tennessee, Austin Consulting certified part of our FLC Industrial Park last year as a “shovel ready” building site. This took two years of hard work by the IDB director and board to achieve this accreditation. This certification gives us an advantage over surrounding communities because thus far we are only one of three sites certified in our region. To make it through these rounds, we had to submit countless documents and host Austin Con-sulting for several evaluation visits.

The IDB was the conduit for the Tax Increment Financing (TIF) used by the developer of the new Hampton Inn. Since the Hampton Inn opened, Lincoln County has seen a significant increase in occupancy tax revenue, which means more people are staying here and subsequently spending money on food in Lincoln County.

I can assure you the director and all appointed members of the IDB board, which are appointed by the Lincoln County Commissioners and Fayetteville City Alderman, will continue to work diligently and efficiently the next two years to help mitigate the possible negative economic impact the Goodman closing could have on our community. Our director has built strong relationships throughout the TN State Economic Development Office and thoroughly understands how to present our community to prospective companies. She has a presentation in Atlanta this week to a prospect from Europe and will be hosting an Asian company for a final visit to our spec building in late February. Lincoln County will most likely realize new commercial and industrial projects this year and the IDB has been continuously involved in these plans.

Our community has great pride and hardworking people. Because of those qualities, we will move forward and our better days lie ahead.
