GREENBELT CLASSIFICATION AVAILABLE TO PROPERTY OWNERS

According to Paul Braden, Lincoln County Assessor of Property, qualifying Tennessee property owners can reduce their property tax bills in 2015 by taking advantage of the Greenbelt Law. Property taxes are normally based on what a property is worth in the market. The Agricultural, Forest and Open Space Land Act of 1976, known as the Greenbelt Law, allows certain land to be taxed on its value on its present use instead of its market value.

Tennessee's Greenbelt Law is designed to preserve farm and forest land for valued food and fiber and to maintain open space for public enjoyment by easing some of the burden of property taxes. There are three types of land which may qualify for greenbelt classification; agricultural (farm), forest, and open space land. Most of the property classified under greenbelt is agricultural land, which requires at least 15 acres to qualify.

Property owners wishing to qualify their land for greenbelt must apply to the County Assessor of Property using a form provided by the state before March 1, 2015. Any property owner registering for greenbelt must certify in writing that the property is used for a specified greenbelt purpose. If greenbelt property is later converted to non-greenbelt uses, the owners may have to pay back up to three years of the taxes saved on agricultural or forest land and up to five years of the taxes saved on open space land. These additional taxes are known as rollback taxes.

Since rollback taxes are in lien against farm and forest tracts, purchasers of property are wise to research the property background.

There is no fee to apply for greenbelt; however, property owners must record their application in the County Register's Office, if it is approved. The property owner is responsible for any recording fee.

County Assessor of Property may ask property owners to supply information about the property income, use and ownership either when the property owner applies or later. State law requires the Assessor to make sure that only qualifying properties benefit from greenbelt.

A brochure titled "Greenbelt: A Tax Payer's Guide" is available in the office of the Lincoln County Assessor of Property. The brochure covers what property qualifies for the greenbelt classification, how to apply for greenbelt, "use value", and rollback assessments.

All property owners should get a copy of the brochure and acquaint themselves with the greenbelt program. Property owners in Tennessee can pay less property taxes if their property is dedicated to farm, forestry, or open space.
