After 23 years, East County Times closes its doors for good

VERSE OF THE WEEK - Philippians 3:13-14

Brothers and sisters, I do not consider myself yet to have taken hold of it. But one thing I do: Forgetting what is behind and straining toward what is ahead, I press on toward the goal to win the prize for which God has called me heavenward in Christ Jesus.

- By Patrick Taylor -

It is with heavy hearts that we at the East County Times are announcing that we are closing our doors for good, effective Nov. 1.

After 23 years of serving east Baltimore County, ownership told employees of their plans for closing down the paper at a meeting on Monday, Oct. 22, which was, coincidentally, the anniversary of the paper.

The paper was founded on Oct. 22, 1995, with the late George Wilbanks leading the way along with Angela Hess, Linda Mrok and the late Jackie Nickel. Wilbanks passed away earlier this year, with ownership of the paper being handled by his family.

It should come as no shock that the East County Times had fallen on hard times. Like many small businesses, we have had our share of issues due to economic forces outside of our control. Those issues combined with problems within our control — including too much overhead and a spate of internal thefts a few years back — have made our ability to function untenable.

When an area loses a newspaper, the whole area suffers. For over two decades we provided a service free of charge for our community, bringing worthwhile news and announcements that often go overlooked by major metropolitan newspapers. For almost the entirety of our existence, our Obituaries and Spotlight sections offered community members a free outlet to share their grief — in the case of the Obituaries section — or share their pride and joy via birthday, anniversary, engagement and other announcements in the Spotlight section. Our Politicians section gave local leaders the opportunity to speak directly to their constituents. Our Community page kept residents abreast of local meetings of community associations and much more.

Over the years we covered a variety of important issues, including the - see CLOSING on page 2 -

redevelopment of the old Bethlehem Steel site, local elections and Annapolis coverage, the midge infestation, school discipline and a whole lot more. We developed relationships with nonprofit groups like Back River Restoration Committee and other conservation groups. And among the hard news we had quality features, like Marge Neal's coverage of Paralympic swimmer Jessica Long.

In the past, our work was recognized with many Mid-Atlantic Community Paper Association (MACPA) awards, and just last year former co-editor Devin Crum and reporter Marge Neal took home Maryland Delaware D.C. (MDDC) Press Association awards for the first time in our paper's history (coincidentally in the first year we had entered the competition). While those awards and honors are always nice, ultimately what was most rewarding was receiving calls or emails about our work, or hearing appreciation for our efforts while out on the streets.

Far more often than not we were hearing good things about the product we produced, but obviously that's not always the case. Over the years there were plenty of stories we either missed or simply got wrong. Mrok used to muse that her biggest regret was missing out on the Joe Palczynski killing spree story. For me, personally, it was not digging deep enough on Dr. S. Dallas Dance after the first ethics complaint was filed against him.

There were also plenty of other mistakes. Bill Gates of The Dundalk Eagle rightfully took a veiled dig at our lack of equity with high school sports coverage a few years ago, correctly pointing out that our coverage predominantly focused on male sports. And when the preeminent sports writer in the area calls you on your coverage, you better take notice — and we did, and we did better.

And therein lies one of my favorite aspects of this community that I'll miss. Gates and I have always had a friendly relationship, but he wasn't afraid to say what he thought was important. And that is this area in a nutshell. While I didn't always agree with what was being said by members of the community, especially when political rhetoric is involved, there's something to be said about being willing to call someone out and still be kind and friendly in the days, weeks, months and years that follow.

When I was at Loyola University, I heard about Dundalk, Essex and Middle River from locals, and 95 percent of the time the area was being talked about in jest. For the first five years I was in the Baltimore area, the southeast was perpetually the butt of the joke.

And then I took a job here, a year after graduation, and didn't know what to expect. What I found was an area with economic problems, with some people that were certainly at times rough around the edges.

I found an area that took pride in actually making goods — whether it be at the old steel mill, the Glenn L. Martin plant or General Motors. I found a land of winding rivers and streams, with miles of pristine beach front property. I found an area so assured of itself that the words of residents in more affluent places in the county rolled off the backs of locals. I found a once economically great area trying to redefine itself. And if there's anything we as Americans love, it's a comeback story.

While you will no longer see my writings, I will be rooting hard for our readers. Whether it's rooting for the success of the next installment of the Rockin' on the River festival, or rooting for the Middlesex Elementary Sewing Club, I will always have your backs. I'll be rooting for Bowleys Quarters resident Bobby Adams, who has made a name for himself over the last few years as an outsider artist featured prominently at the American Visionary Arts Museum. I'll be rooting for Cliff O'Connell in his biblical war on rats and blight.

For the writing staff at the Times, we will miss going out into the different neighborhoods and hearing directly from you, our readership. We'll miss how kind everyone was, and how understanding (more often than not) when we told you that what you were looking for or had submitted will actually be in next week's issue.

Mostly, I'll miss our election coverage. Over the last few years, staffers would knock out election coverage on election night and into the next morning, with the printing press holding things up for us to ensure our coverage was the latest, most accurate we could get. It absolutely pains me that we will not be able to provide that coverage for you next week.

As far as the staff here, there are so many people to mention. Hess, Jaime Gilliam and Carol Pappas consistently designed great work, so much so that their work was often used in other publications — even if those publications had an in-house art department.

Pam Spittel and Terri Knachel have worked here for decades between them, giving everything they had to this paper. Previous sales folks include Jessica Chaney, Kathleen Meyers, Beth Ritter and more.

In the writing crew over the years, we have seen incredibly talented writers like Crum, Neal, Ben Boehl and Emily Blackner, who now works at The Hill. Teddy Durgin became a trusted voice, along with other freelancers like Virginia Terhune and Michele Wojciechowski.

There are far too many people to thank than can fit here. But we absolutely must take time to thank the Wilbanks family. Endings are never easy, but the Wilbanks family gave a lot of time and money, and showed a lot of patience over the years. George Wilbanks should always be remembered for his tireless work for this community. He stands as an example of what it means to be an eastsider, despite being a Georgia native.

So what comes next? Who knows. I have a feeling that if someone were interested in starting a paper of their own, there are plenty of freshly unemployed workers who would jump at the opportunity to get that going.

While the future is uncertain, what is certain is that this area is a special place, one that will always have a place in my heart. And with that, I'll bid you all adieu.

Edgemere's BayVanguard Bank to merge with Canton's Kopernik

- By Marge Neal -

Citing numerous benefits to customers, officials at BayVanguard Bank and Kopernik Bank have announced a merger of the two financial institutions that should be completed in the first quarter of 2019.

Kopernik, a longtime Canton-based business, will merge with and into BayVanguard, a community bank headquartered in Edgemere, according to a joint press release issued by the banks.

David M. Flair, president and CEO of BayVanguard, and Timothy L. Prindle, president of Kopernik, will serve as co-presidents and chief executive officers of the resulting, larger BayVanguard, according to the statement.

"This merger will result in a larger, stronger bank for our clients and will provide three additional branches, with two in Dundalk and one in Canton," Flair told the East County Times.

Both banks enjoy a long and proud history of serving the community, according to Flair. Bay Federal was founded in 1873, with headquarters on Light Street in Baltimore, he said. Bay merged with Edgemere's Vanguard in 1996 to become Bay-Vanguard. Federal savings Bank. The bank's most recent acquisition was Vigilant Bank, which BayVanguard merged with in 2012.

Kopernik was founded in 1924 as the Kopernik Building and Loan Association of Baltimore City. In 1989, Kopernik Building and Loan converted to Kopernik Federal Savings Association and in 2012, Hull Federal Savings Bank merged into and with Kopernik. The institution converted to Kopernik Bank in May 2015.

The merger of the two banks comes at a time of growth for Kopernik and institutional strength and stability for BayVanguard, according to Flair. Kopernik was going to need to add a layer of executive oversight positions to its staff to meet some regulatory requirements based on growth, while BayVanguard already had that staff in place, Flair said.

Prindle, as president of Kopernik, was wearing many different administrative hats as he carried out the leadership of that bank, and the merger will allow him to hand off some responsibilities to existing BayVanguard staff, according to Flair.

"It really is a great move that just strengthens both institutions and improves what we can offer to all of our clients," Flair said.

Flair said the bank has a "very good executive team" and emphasized that "everyone will remain in place." There will be "no rank-and-file layoffs," and while there might be a couple of positions eliminated, that will be accomplished by attrition through a couple of retirements.

"We have always focused on our customers' and communities' needs," Prindle said in a statement about the merger. "We feel that the combined bank will be stronger than each was separately, allowing us to provide more services to and convenience for our customers and the communities we serve."

The merger will result in seven full-service branches with consolidated assets of $326.1 million. The bank's headquarters will remain on North Point Road in Edgemere in BayVanguard's flagship branch, according to Flair.

"That we are in the heart of the community is very important to us," Flair said. "Anyone can walk in and talk to me as president of the bank and we think that's a vital part of community banking. We have no desire to change that."

BayVanguard also announced the completion of its conversion from a federal savings bank to a Maryland savings bank, effective Aug. 23. To reflect that conversion, the name changed from Bay-Vanguard Federal Savings Bank to BayVanguard Bank.

As a result, the Maryland Office of the Commissioner of Financial Regulation will be the bank's primary regulator with additional oversight provided by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, according to the statement. Bay-Vanguard, M.H.C., and BV Financial, Inc., the bank's holding companies, will continue to be regulated by the Federal Reserve Board.

The merger has been approved by the board of directors of both Kopernik and BayVanguard, Flair said. Kopernik's account holders were to have submitted their votes by Oct. 31, and the customary regulatory approvals are expected to allow the transaction to be completed in early 2019.

"We are quite excited about this merger," Flair told the Times. "It was important for us to have like-minded individuals mesh with our bank and Kopernik is very community-oriented — this is a great fit for everyone and makes us a stronger bank for all of our customers."

Beth Steel lamp posts will brighten footpath, shine light on history

- By Marge Neal -

For years, as Bethlehem Steel's Sparrows Point plant chugged and steamed and boiled to churn out steel that helped build the Golden Gate Bridge, became automobiles and formed Folgers coffee cans, many items dotting the plant's landscape became engrained in hearts and memories.

Now owned and being redeveloped by Trade-point Atlantic, the approximately 3,100-acre campus is establishing its own identity.

But as a new identity is forged, many people believe it's important to preserve the history of the once-proud steel mill and its role as a economic driver in the community and region.

Edgemere Keith Taylor, founder and president of the Sparrows Point/North Point Historical Society, is working on a project that will see 10 lamp posts from the steel mill campus retrofitted for solar power and installed on the Sparrows Point High School campus.

While Taylor is busy with details like project plans and seeking financial backing, other community members have equally embraced the concept.

"We are absolutely behind it all the way and excited for it to happen," Sparrows Point High Principal Emily Caster told the East County Times on Tuesday. "I'm excited about the history and tradition that this will bring to our campus, and also the educational component of how it will tie into so many of our programs."

Sparrows Point is home to an environmental science magnet program and also offers building construction and design courses.

"With our science and technology courses, environmental technology and construction and design, there are many opportunities with this project to have our students involved in course-related projects," Caster said.

Taylor's plan calls for the 10 lamp posts to be rewired for solar power. Two concession stands will have solar panel packages installed on the roofs, with each set producing enough energy to power five lamps.

Taylor is working with DMW, a Towson-based architectural and design firm, and Alpha Landscaping, to create plans for the project.

In what he describes as a catch-22 situation, he said he needs plans to procure funding and needed funding to commission plans.

In stepped Eric Hadaway, vice president and director of environmental services at DMW, and preliminary plans are just about complete. Those plans, Taylor said, will allow him to take the next steps in procuring funding and Baltimore County Public Schools approval in terms of construction and engineering.

Taylor got emotional as he talked about the sacrifices made by Sparrows Point-Edgemere residents, beginning with playing a key role in saving Baltimore during the War of 1812 through creating the steel that fought wars and saved democracy.

"This project is much deeper than just putting up a few light poles to make it safer to leave after a football game," he said. "This is about preserving some of the history of the community that started out saving Baltimore and ended up saving the USA with its steel."

"We have this chance to preserve and house a piece of our community's heritage," Caster said. "And we will be able to share it with thousands of students who will come through these halls in the years to come."

Solid waste plan heads to County Council

- By Virginia Terhune -

Ever wonder what happens to the more than 350 tons of trash that Baltimore County residents put outside their doors for pickup and disposal each year?

In 2016, about 60 percent went to the Wheelabrator incinerator in southwest Baltimore and about 40 percent went to the Eastern Sanitary Landfill in White Marsh.

Trucking so much trash out of the county for processing involves paying fees to Wheelabrator, but the cheaper alternative of disposing of it in White Marsh shortens the life of that facility is the county's only remaining landfill for disposing of residential trash, Balancing rising costs against shrinking capacity, while also investing in a "source reduction" campaign to reduce the overall flow of trash generated by residents, business and institutions, are all discussed in DPW's draft Solid Waste Management Plan for 2019 to 2028.

Required by state law every 10 years, the management plan needs approval by the County Council and the County Executive before going to the Maryland Department of the Environment for final review.

The Council is expected to introduce the plan at its meeting on Nov. 5, followed by a work session and discussion on Nov. 13, followed by a Council vote on Nov. 19.

The 112-page plan, which was put together over two years with the help of a citizen advisory group, includes dozens of recommendations, including county participation in a state-wide look headed by MDE at incorporating food scraps into a composting program.

Baltimore County already recycles yard waste, and that could conceivably be expanded to include more organic materials, including food waste.

Other ideas to reduce the trash volume include boosting the existing recycling program by adding more county buildings to the program and also installing recycling containers at county Recreation and Parks centers.

Speakers at a public hearing in March recommended that Baltimore County consider not renewing its contract with Wheelabrator when it expires in three years.

The incinerator produces useful steam and electricity, allows for metal recovery and recycling, and reduces the amount of trash that would go to the Eastern Sanitary Landfill, according to the plan.

But Wheelabrator also generates ash, some of which is sent to the landfill in White Marsh, and air pollutants that some say are a health hazard to city residents, factors that also should be considered when weighing the pros and cons of renewing the contract.

You won't miss the 'mid90s'

- By Teddy Durgin -

As an actor, Jonah Hill has proven to be an effective dramatic and comedic presence in films as diverse as "Moneyball," "The Wolf of Wall Street," and "War Dogs." As a director, his debut film "mid90s" shows occasional flourishes of some of the top directors he has worked with over the years, namely Martin Scorsese, Judd Apatow, and Greg Mottola. As a screenwriter? Well, let's just say Jonah's never met a line of dialogue he didn't think he could make better with an "f" word ... or two ... or three ... or 14!

Hill's "mid90s" is a profane, yet affectionate snapshot of Southern California's skateboarding culture of the mid-1990s. Three decades earlier, there were good-hearted beach bums looking to surf, sand, and sex, many of whom became hippies. This flick shows the same sort of fun-loving, unmotivated ne'er-do-wells who replaced surfboards with skateboards ... yet didn't really amount to much in the pre- or post-9/11 era.

Hill has a lot of affection for them, though, his band of chatty, teen losers he centers his flick around. His failing, though, is that he doesn't get his audience to feel as much for these characters as he does. Hill's "mid90s" is a directionless film about directionless boys. Nobody or nothing amounts to anything. I'm not taking off any points for a lack of ambition here. I like slice-of-life movies. But, generally, I want such movies to ultimately be about some sort of forward progress. Think "American Graffiti." Think "Boyz N the Hood." Think "Good Will Hunting."

The film is certainly cast well enough to resonate. Sunny Suljic is the lead, playing a 13-year-old named Stevie who gets in with a local group of older skateboarders to escape his troubled home life. He particularly looks up to Ray (Nakel Smith), who has the skills to be a skateboarding pro. And he is amused by Ray's profane, motor-mouthed best friend (Olan Prenatt) with a nickname too crass and profane to be printed in a family newspaper. Soon, Stevie is attempting dangerous skateboard jumps, guzzling beer, and smoking cigarettes, then running home and swigging mouthwash and spraying Lysol on himself to hide the smells of youthful debauchery from his single mother (Katherine Waterston) and hot-headed older brother (Lucas Hedges).

Stevie's home life is sketchy at best and plays right out of Dysfunctional Indie Family Movie 101. The heart of the film is in his interactions with Ray and the gang. At times, the lines play like imitation Kevin Smith dialogue. At other times, like in a quiet heart-to-heart scene between Ray and Stevie, Hill and his young actors nail the moment perfectly. I just never knew if Hill wanted some of his key moments to play as drama or comedy. Hedges' Ian, for instance, struts around like Bill Paxton's Chet from

"Weird Science" at times ... er, until his demeanor turns on a dime and becomes something quite scary. But then Hill has him walking around guzzling orange juice all of the time.

Funny? Pathetic? I dunno.

Hill's natural instinct is to go for the laugh, and I wish he skewed more towards comedy than drama here. It would have made for a better film. Even the ending kind of irked me. Did Hill really plan to end his film there? Or did he ... just run out of money? "Mid90s" is a noble first-time effort, but I'm not sure it's worth your money, dear readers.

Thom Yorke's 'Suspiria' score a haunting, mesmerizing whirlwind

- By Patrick Taylor -

When I first heard that Radiohead singer Thom Yorke would be scoring a remake to the classic horror film 'Suspiria' I was a little thrown off. The original score is a muddled mess of cacophonous sounds and grating melodies, in the best way. The score of the original really propels the film into another world.

So when I heard that Yorke would be taking the reins, I was intrigued but kind of confused. While Radiohead certainly have some creepy songs, Yorke predominantly lives in a dreamy falsetto draped in melancholy.

Not exactly horror movie material, on its face. But if Radiohead bandmate Johnny Greenwood can pick up extra work scoring P.T. Anderson's films, well then why can't Thom get in on the action?!

Anyway, the 'Suspiria' score was released last Friday, and while it's a bit jumbled and bloated, overall it's a very strong album.

The song "Suspirium" is among the finest Yorke has created during his extensive career. A lilting waltz meditation with Yorke on piano accompanied by flute is something I never knew I needed until I heard it. "Unmade" is grandiose in its vocal delivery, but sparse elsewhere. "Has Ended" sounds like his attempt at The Beatles song "Tomorrow Never Knows," while "Open Again" provides some nice acoustic guitar covered in eerie sounds. And of course, there's a 14-minute drone track.

There's so much going on with this score that I'd recommend it to anyone, regardless of whether or not you're a Yorke fan. How it holds up in the film remains to be seen, but on its own it's a quality work of art.

'Hunter Killer' is thankfully NOT sub-standard

- By Teddy Durgin -

"Hunter Killer" is a combination of "Crimson Tide," "Lone Survivor," and "Air Force One" all rolled up into one. It has the tense submarine thrills of "Tide" or "The Hunt for Red October" with Naval seaman, slight beads of sweat on their foreheads, barking out such tried-and-true lines as "Torpedo in the water!" "Launch counter measures!" and (my personal favorite) "Dive! Dive!" Elsewhere, a small platoon of Special Forces goes on a suicide mission to rescue the Russian president, the target of a military coup. And back in the halls of power in Washington, there are bureaucrats and war-hawk military types eager to either start or stop World War III ... if this mission doesn't go as planned!!!

OK, yes. All cliches. Everything in this film, you've seen before. And, man, are there some hammy performances mixed in with completely believable ones. But I dunno. "Hunter Killer" caught me on just the right night. It's a rah-rah, jingoistic American military thriller, and some will blast it just for that and that alone. But on its own terms, it's pretty darn entertaining. I was never once bored. And there are a couple of sequences that are exquisitely filmed.

Gerard Butler stars here as Captain Joe Glass. Yes, Joe Glass. Just accept it. Glass is the untested commander of the USS Arkansas, an American submarine ordered to investigate the disappearance and likely destruction of another U.S. sub off the coast of Russia. En route, Glass and crew get new orders. Navigate a dangerous fjord into Polyarny where they will rescue the Navy SEAL team that has hopefully extracted the recently ousted Russian president.

The overall mission is pretty involving ... eh, if you just sort of ignore that this isn't our real world at stake here. The Russian president is a young, buff beefcake of a man. The American president (Caroline Goodall) is a blonde older woman, completely calm-headed under pressure. And the U.S.-Russian power struggle is more 1980s-era Cold War (or, at least, '90s-era Cold War remnants a la "Crimson Tide" and "Air Force One") than today's geopolitical dynamic.

Oldman is laughably over the top as the war-mongering Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Completely evading direction, Oldman has one trick in this movie that had audience members around me guffawing. He says one line very quiet. Then immediately follows that by saying the same line REALLY LOUD!!! So, you'd have a scene play out like this, Oldman to Linda Cardellini's NSA agent: "You have no exit plan ... YOU HAVE NO FREAKIN' EXIT PLAN!!!" Or Oldman to Common's Pentagon commander: "You just started World War III ... YOU JUST STARTED FREAKIN' WORLD WAR III AND LOST IT!!!"

I wanna try this in real life. It could be effective. I'm always looking for new ways to command respect in my household. How about at the next family dinner? "Would someone please pass Daddy the salt? WOULD SOMEONE PLEASE PASS DADDY THE FREAKIN' SALT?!!!"

Ahem. It appears this film has been on the shelf for some time. Goodall's U.S. president is more than a bit "Hillary-esque." The filmmakers and screenwriters probably thought Hills had the 2016 election in the bag when crafting their story. The end result? Whoops! Goodall is now in the finished movie for just one scene. There's a "blame the Russians" joke here somewhere, but I ain't touchin' it. Also ... uh ... Nyqvist died of cancer in — what — June of 2017?! How long has this movie been done?!

So, I concede, "Hunter Killer" is a bit stale and more than a bit hackneyed. But it's really well-paced, Butler is a solid lead, and I particularly loved the sequence where the Arkansas has to navigate an underwater minefield. I'm making a command decision and holding my fire on this one. It entertained me!

"Hunter Killer" is rated R for violence and some language.

Police identify suspect in Dundalk shooting

A thorough investigation led Baltimore County Police to quickly identify the suspect in a shooting in the 500 block of Main Street in Dundalk during the evening on Oct. 21.

Although police have received varying accounts of the events, they believe the suspect knocked on the victim's rear door around 7 p.m. and entered the home. The suspect and victim engaged in a verbal altercation that escalated when the suspect pulled out a gun and struck the victim in the head, causing the firearm to discharge into a wall of the home. The victim retrieved his own firearm, firing multiple rounds at the suspect, who fled on foot through the rear door.

The victim, a 27-year-old man, was transported to an area hospital with a minor injury to his head and released.

A short time later police were notified of a shooting victim that responded to a hospital in Baltimore City with multiple gunshot wounds. This person was ultimately identified as the suspect in the Main Street shooting by the primary responding officer and detectives from the Dundalk Precinct Investigative Services Team. An arrest warrant was obtained, pending the suspect's release from medical care. The identity of this suspect will be released following formal charging.

Anyone with additional information regarding this incident is urged to contact Baltimore County Police at 410-307-2020, or call Metro Crime Stoppers and leave an anonymous tip.

Police seek help identifying burglary suspect

Baltimore County Police are asking for help identifying a man who robbed the 7-Eleven store in the 7600 block of Belair Road on Sept. 23.

The suspect entered the store around 7:53 p.m. that Sunday and spoke with the clerk briefly, but then left the store. He re-entered a few minutes later and approached the counter to make a purchase but then demanded money from the cash register instead, implying he had a weapon. He fled toward Fowler Avenue.

Anyone who can identify this man is asked to contact the Baltimore County Police Department Robbery Unit by calling 410-307-2020.

Precinct 9/White Marsh

Second Degree Burglary: On Oct. 25, officers from the White Marsh precinct responded to a burglary call in the 8200 block of Perry Hall Boulevard. At 3:25 a.m., a suspect broke into Boscov's, stole clothing and then fled. The suspect was apprehended.

First Degree Burglary: Early in the afternoon on Oct. 23, Baltimore County Police were called to the unit block of Leatherwood Place. Sometime between 9 a.m. and 1:43 p.m. an unknown suspect entered the victim's apartment through the front door and stole a television.

Robbery: Officers from the White Marsh precinct were dispatched to Overlea on Oct. 19 after receiving a call about a robbery. At 8:55 p.m., the victim was walking when three suspects exited a vehicle and approached him. The suspects robbed the victim of his cash at gunpoint and then fled in their vehicle. Anyone with information should contact the police.

Election guide: One last look at the candidates

With election day just days away, we at the East County Times wanted to give our readership one last look at the candidates. We reached out to them and asked them each for a profile, headshot and key endorsements. Many responded, but not all did. Over the next few pages you will find the candidates, in their own words, giving a last ditch effort to win your vote. Enjoy.

Board of Education

Ed Kitlowski, Board of Education, District 6

Many of the problems in education are the result of decisions made by people with no classroom experience. To them, the school building and the students are things and numbers. The result is education by data management. Education has become part of political agendas and profit making.

Teachers, on the other hand, refer to their students as "my kids." We spend hours with them. We celebrate their triumphs and experience their pains. Education is not a numbers game. We need teachers with experience in the classroom and with Baltimore County to make educational decisions. Experience matters.

Baltimore County has a unique opportunity. We are starting something new and can create an education system that genuinely prepares our students for life, not just graduation. We can expand educational options for our students so that they feel school is their agenda. We need a Board with experience in education to ensure accountability and transparency.

My commitment in education has spanned over 30 years. That is 30 years working with our children to prepare for their futures and sometimes just listen. That is 30 years working for what is best for our kids.

Will Feuer, Board of Education, District 7

Oversight, accountability, and transparency! BCPS is a runaway train. Rein in wasteful spending and have an outside audit. More teachers are needed in the classrooms, along with more Pupil Personnel Workers, Social Workers, and Counselors. We need to bolster resources for discipline and mental health.

A laptop for every student is a waste of money. Parents demand accountability and consequences for behavior. There needs to be a clear and consistent discipline policy. When there are no consequences, the behavior not only continues, it escalates! Administrators need to be able to suspend without the threat of retaliation. The southeast area's buildings, teachers, and resources have been neglected far too long. As a Southeast Area Education Advisory Council member the last two years, I have seen and heard the complaints and the lack of response from Central Office. When classrooms are evacuated when it rains for fear of flooding, we are doing a disservice to our kids. Or the first day of school when 4 out of the 10 schools unable to open because of the heat were in the southeast! I've been active in the community for years, I see this as a natural progression of my service, vote Will Feuer!

Rodney McMillion, Board of Education, District 7

For the first time in 170 years Baltimore County registered voters will have the opportunity to elect seven Board of Education members. In the past members were appointed by the Governor.

It is my opinion that under the old system there has been no accountability. If I am elected I will represent the citizens of District 7 to the best of my abilities. If the voting public is not pleased with my performance, then I recommend you vote me out of office in 2022.

I have worked for Baltimore County Public Schools for 35 years and 10 months as a Physical Education teacher, coach, and athletic director. I am certified to teach K-12. I taught elementary school for ten years before transitioning to Chesapeake High School. I have my commercial driver's license. I periodically drive sports teams to away games and drive students on field trips.

We need to get back to teaching basic reading, writing and math. BCPS brags about graduation rates going up, but in my opinion the amount of knowledge students are learning is going down.

Lastly, college is not for everyone. We need to provide more opportunities for hands on learning experiences. Thank you very much!

County Council

David Marks (R), County Council, District 5

For two decades, I have worked across party lines to improve northeastern Baltimore County. We've advanced eight new parks, three new schools, and improvements throughout Carney, Perry Hall, and Kingsville. At the same time, I have been an independent voice on the County Council, protecting more than 2,800 acres from development and blocking plans that could have oversaturated our neighborhoods with Section 8 rentals. I supported the toughest ethics law in county history and passed reforms that make government more accountable to taxpayers.

That blend of bipartisanship and independence is exactly what you need in a County Councilmember. My opponent has been invisible, skipping six community forums.

Because of my record, I have been endorsed by Democrats, Republicans, and Independents alike who value honest government and hard work. I am the only Republican endorsed by unions representing the police, firefighters, teachers, and organized labor.

I will push for the resurfacing of Joppa Road and a new northeastern high school. I continue to oppose oversaturating our neighborhoods with Section 8. We need to focus on homeownership, job training, and economic development.

Cathy Bevins (D), County Council, District 6

Councilwoman Cathy Bevins is running for reelection in the Sixth Council District. Since taking office Councilwoman Bevins had focused on constituent services, open government, and sponsoring legislation to improve the quality of life for all Sixth District residents.

As Councilwoman, she instituted a unique tracking system that helped her successfully handle over 6,000 constituent issues ranging from code enforcement to roads. Through her hard work and advocacy the Sixth District was the first district to have 100% of it's schools air conditioned. She was also able obtain funding for three brand new schools to be built in the district over the next three years adding over 3000 new seats.

She supported legislation banning campaign contributions during the Comprehensive Zoning Map Process (CZMP) and requiring council members and senior county officials to take an annual ethics training class. She also sponsored and passed legislation safeguarding children by requiring background checks for Rec and Parks volunteers and to remove synthetic marijuana from convenience stores.

Councilwoman Bevins is working to bring new jobs and businesses to the district and has helped bring 10,000 high paying jobs to MD. RT 43. She has always voted to fully fund Education the Baltimore County Police Department and in her next term she will bring two new Police Athletic League (PAL) Centers to the district.

Please vote for Councilwoman Cathy Bevins on Nov. 6.

Endorsements: TABCO - Teachers Association of Baltimore County; Baltimore County FOP Lodge #4 (Police); Baltimore County IAFF Local 1311 (Fire Fighters); CASE - Council of Administrative & Supervisory Employees for Baltimore County Public Schools.

County Executive

Al Redmer Junior (R)

Al Redmer, Jr. is running for Baltimore County Executive to fix our schools, revitalize neglected communities, and improve public safety. A lifelong resident of Baltimore County, Al has more than 45 years' experience serving our communities, and a lifetime of executive experience in both the public and private sectors.

Al has more executive-level leadership experience than any County Executive in the history of the office. He is a proven businessman who knows what it takes to create jobs and sign the front of a paycheck, having started two successful businesses right here in Baltimore County. He is the only candidate with experience managing multi-million dollar budgets, and has run both large companies and small businesses. He spent thirteen years representing Baltimore County communities in the House of Delegates, including two years as the House Minority Leader, and has served in the Cabinets of two governors as Maryland Insurance Commissioner, a position he currently holds in the Hogan administration.

Al has been enthusiastically endorsed by Governor Larry Hogan. As County Executive, he will work with Governor Hogan to demand accountability in our schools, encourage job creation, and make Baltimore County safer and more affordable.

Johnny Olszewski, Jr (D)
Born and raised in Dundalk, John "Johnny O" Olszewski, Jr. is running to build a better Baltimore County.

A graduate of Baltimore County Public Schools and a first-generation college student who went on to earn his PhD from UMBC, Johnny became a public school teacher to unlock the same potential in our students that education had unlocked in him.

In 2006, Johnny was elected to the House of Delegates where he represented Eastern Baltimore County and fought for working families, helped breathe new life into Sparrows Point, and led the charge on earned sick leave.

As county executive, Johnny is committed to fighting for a better Baltimore County by focusing on practical solutions, not partisan politics and will work across the aisle to:

* Strengthen our schools by investing in infrastructure; expanding access to Pre-K and community college; and creating safer learning environments.

* Create more jobs by increasing support for small businesses; improving employment pathways; and closing the skills gap.

* Make government more open and transparent by leading an audit to identify waste, fraud, and abuse; ensuring development is community-

House of DelegatesJoe Norman (R), House of Delegates, District 8

I am proud to be one of the three Average Joe's who have been endorsed by Governor Hogan to represent our community in the House of Delegates. I am a small business owner with four local employees, a graduate of Salisbury State and Johns Hopkins Universities, and am married to my High School sweetheart. She and I have three young sons, and I am running because I want them to grow up in a safe and vibrant community, and because I want Baltimore County to be the place that they choose to raise their families when the time comes.

My vision for Baltimore County is simple: 1) improving our public schools by focusing on accountability for spending, student behavior, and results; 2) Stopping the Expansion of Section 8; 3) Making Public Safety a priority by advancing policies that will keep violent criminals behind bars, and by always putting the safety of law abiding citizens first when considering any criminal justice reforms;

4) Growing our economic base and create new job opportunities by saying NO to any new taxes; and 5) Taking back power from career politicians by supporting non-partisan redistricting reform and term limits for state legislators.

Endorsement: Gov. Larry Hogan

Megan Ann Mioduszewski (D), House of Delegates, District 6

I am a conservative Democrat running for a seat in the House of Delegates for district 6. I come from a diverse family of veterans, steelworkers and public servants. I've served 4 years on the Democratic State Central Committee. The main focus of my campaign is cutting spending. Our 3 current Republican Delegates got another pay increase in 2018. They now make over 50k a year for 90 days in session. I will vote "no" to future increases and fight to cut out expensive perks such as food and travel allowances. We must also fight for term limits to keep career politicians from becoming comfortable. Another important issue for me is to work for tax relief for the growing number of seniors and veterans in our district. They are the backbone of our community and we need to do whatever we can to support them. Fighting to get our fair share of school funding is also an important topic for me. 4 of the 10 Baltimore County schools who couldn't open on the first day this year due to no air conditioning, are in our district. That's unacceptable and I will be an advocate for them in Annapolis.

Endorsements: Battle Grove Democratic Club; The Maryland State and D.C. AFL-CIO and their over 700 affiliated unions; American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME); Maryland Council 3; The Baltimore Sun; Riverside Democratic Club; County Seal Democratic Club; Eastern Baltimore County Democratic Club

Robin Grammer (R), House of Delegates, District 6

I was born in Essex-Middle River into a blue-collar family. Many of my family members, including my grandfather, father and myself were employed in the steel industry. I look to my parents as role models and I believe their hard work laid the foundations for my upbringing, education and career.

I attended Essex Elementary, Stemmers Run Middle and Eastern Technical High School. I paid my way through community college and left the steel industry to work in the information technology industry, where I worked for 14 years before I was elected to the Maryland House of Delegates.

I believe in the constitution. I believe in good government that is accountable, transparent and responsive. I believe the best social program is a good job.

Although many of my family members were Democrats for many years, I am a Republican. When I was elected in 2014 as a member of the Hogan Team, the mandate was to Change Maryland. We are changing Maryland. Today we are faced with growing crime that our state and our nation have never experienced. I pledge to fight to uphold the rule of law and to protect our communities! I am married with one child, Robin Leroy Grammer, III.

Endorsement: Governor Larry Hogan

"Robin Grammer is tough as nails and is always fighting for the people of district six. I endorse Delegate Grammer and I ask you to support him so that we can continue our fight to protect our communities and Change Maryland for the better."

Nick D'Adamo (D), House of Delegates, District 6

Nick D'Adamo, Jr. has spent more than 30 years in public service, working for the betterment of his community. As a youngster, he began working with his dad, Nick Sr., at the family business, Shocket's of Highlandtown, a well known landmark for more than 60 years. It was there that Nick learned the value of reaching out to his neighbors and giving back to his community.

D'Adamo graduated from Archbishop Curley and he spent the next 31 years managing the family business while serving in local government as an outstanding member of the Democratic State Central Committee. This was followed by election to six terms as councilman. During his 24 years serving on the Council, Nick earned his reputation as one government official who not only listened, but also acted on his constituent's concerns. If it concerned the community, it concerned Nick.

Nick has also worked in a variety of Maryland state government positions. He has served four years as Director of Community Outreach for both the Maryland State Police and the Transportation Authority Police, and he is a former Baltimore City Fire Commissioner. More recently, D'Adamo has worked as Special Assistant to the Baltimore Fire Department Chief. Throughout his career, D'Adamo has worked diligently in supporting local police and fire departments, while expanding his efforts to include serving on the Anti-Animal Abuse Advisory Committee.

Nick is proud of his membership in the Knights of Columbus, the Holy Name Society, Polish Home and The Sons of Italy.

With nearly 30 years of community service to his credit, he is focused on working hard to help improve the lives of residents in District 6 of Baltimore County. Traditional values, continued improvements in education, the betterment of seniors and individual concerns - all of these play a vital role in his tireless support of the community.

Married to his wife, Susan, for 32 years. D'Adamo is the son of Polish and Italian parents with strong community service. He is also the proud owner of rescue dogs.

And with that, our election profile section is complete. If you haven't utilized early voting, make sure you vote on election day! The only way to ensure your voice is heard is to make your way to the ballot box. So, regardless of who you vote for, just make sure you get out and vote.

CCBC 'Best for Vets'

Community College of Baltimore County is among an elite group of two-year colleges to be ranked on Military Times' Best for Vets: Colleges 2019 list. Thirty-three two-year colleges earned the title with CCBC being the only Maryland community college listed. The rankings are based on comprehensive school-by-school assessment of veteran and military student services and rates of academic achievement – as well as a detailed review of public data.

CCBC offers a variety of supports and resources to its more than 2,000 military-connected students with Veteran Service Centers located on each of the college's three campuses. The centers provide a place for student veterans to not only gather and relax, but also serve as a resource center where they can find academic and student support, community resource referrals, job postings, information regarding military-connected events on and off campus and information respective to military-only programs.

"We are committed to offering a welcoming and supportive environment to our student veterans so they can thrive in our academic setting," said CCBC President Sandra Kurtinitis. "Earning Military Times' Best for Vets ranking confirms we are on the right path. We must continue to expand and enhance our outreach efforts to ensure our student-veterans successfully transition."

As with all Military Times rankings, Best for Vets: Colleges is an editorially independent, objective and rigorous news project that evaluates the many factors that help make colleges and universities a good fit for service members, military veterans and their families. About 500 colleges took part in this year's survey.

"Military Times' Best for Vets designation is trusted throughout the veteran community as the mark of excellence for schools and other organizations that work with veterans, service members and military families. It can't be bought with advertising dollars only earned through a record of steadfast service and dedication to those who have served," said George Altman, the Military Times editor.

"Fewer than half of the roughly 500 colleges and universities that competed for the recognition earned the right to call themselves Best for Vets in 2019. Their efforts should be commended."

Military Times' annual Best for Vets: Colleges survey asks colleges and universities to disclose academic outcome and input data, describe many aspects of veteran culture on campus and meticulously document a wide array of services, special policies, accommodations and incentives offered to students with military ties.

Eight BCPS art teachers honored by MAEA

Eight art teachers from Baltimore County Public Schools were honored by the Maryland Art Education Association (MAEA) during its annual conference.

In addition to six district wide winners, two BCPS educators will receive state-level awards. Stacey Bentley of Summit Park Elementary School, will be named Maryland Elementary Level Art Educator of the Year, and Linda McConaughy, retired visual arts supervisor, will be named Maryland Emeritus Art Educator of the Year.

In nominating Bentley, Sherri Fisher, BCPS coordinator of visual arts, wrote: "Stacey Bentley is a model of finding the possibilities in obstacles. She speaks from a place of experience and compassion about the power of art education. She truly sees student's unique qualities and abilities as gifts and creates a tremendously positive and productive classroom. Additionally, she serves as the lead elementary art teacher on our Special Education Work Group. Stacey leads teachers of varying content areas and collaborates with teachers across the district in improving ways to work with students, their families and adult assistance who represent a broad spectrum of need. She develops ways to empower the artistic development of each student and support every stakeholder. The field of art education is stronger because of voices like hers."

Of McConaughy, Fisher said, "After 31 years of serving in nearly every capacity from teacher and administrator to supervisor in Baltimore County Public Schools and several roles in the National Art Education Association, Linda is now focusing on her career as an artist. Linda loves to investigate the natural world through collecting, drawing, and painting, and growing things in her garden. She has been published in numerous journals and books and exhibits her artwork widely across the US."

The BCPS teachers to be honored with district recognition are:

Novice Art Teachers of the Year

Emma Popp, Grange Elementary School
Karly Rosencrans, Dundalk Middle School
Lindsay Miller, Towson High School

Career Art Teachers of the Year

Kerry Towner, Hampton Elementary School
Camille Gibson, Golden Ring Middle School
Catlin Tellie, Parkville High School

The awardees were recognized at a reception and ceremony hosted at Towson University on Friday, Oct. 19. The ceremony was part of the 2018 MAEA conference, which will be hosted by Towson University and Dulaney High School on Oct. 19 - 20.

CCBC garners national accreditation for dance program

The National Association of Schools of Dance (NASD) has approved the Community College of Baltimore County's Dance program for initial accreditation. This designation is based on an NASD site visit and an intensive self-study.

According to William E. Watson, dean of the School of Liberal Arts, "This achievement makes CCBC one of only two community colleges in the nation to hold national accreditation in all four arts disciplines – Theatre, Music, Dance and Visual Arts."

CCBC President Sandra L. Kurtinitis adds, "This new exalted status for our Dance program positions us to recruit more budding dancers, secure great transfer partnerships, and reflects CCBC's continuing commitment to excellence in all of the Arts."

The CCBC Dance program offers a rigorous program of dance technique, creative courses, performance opportunities and strong dance academics leading to either of two degrees – Associate of Fine Arts: Dance, Fine and Performing Arts and Associate of Arts: Dance, Humanities and Social Sciences. "The majority of students who complete their Dance degree at CCBC transfer to a four-year institution to continue their dance studies," notes Melinda Blomquist, artistic director for the CCBC Dance Company.

The academic mission of the Dance program is to provide students with opportunities to gain personal instruction through small class sizes, study with experienced faculty who are working professionals and be exposed to a broad spectrum of dance – from classical ballet to modern dance.

"Our roads in Goldenwood were in terrible shape for a long time. Cathy listened to our concerns and advocated for paving. The job was done, our roads are beautiful and we are extremely happy!"

Peter Arrey,
Goldenwood Community

"Cathy cares about my community and the environment. She stopped a development in my neighborhood, created green space and worked to secure funding for dredging Bird River. She listened to our concerns and truly made a difference."

Karen Schueler,
White Marsh

"After a serious illness and before my wife Beverly left the hospital, I called the councilwoman to ask if our street could have ADA compliant curbing and ramps installed on the corners. Day's later crews arrived to make the conversion. We were so grateful. Beverly was able to walk the neighborhood unobstructed and that helped her make a great recovery."
