In 2001 the U.S. Food and Drug Administration granted priority review for imatinib mesylate, sold under the name Gleevec®, as an oral therapy for patients with chronic myeloid leukemia, or CML. The New England Journal of Medicine has now published results from a nearly 11-year follow-up study, that showed an estimated overall survival rate of 83.3 percent. According to the National Cancer Institute, prior to Gleevec's 2001 FDA approval, fewer than 1 in 3 CML patients survived five years past diagnosis.

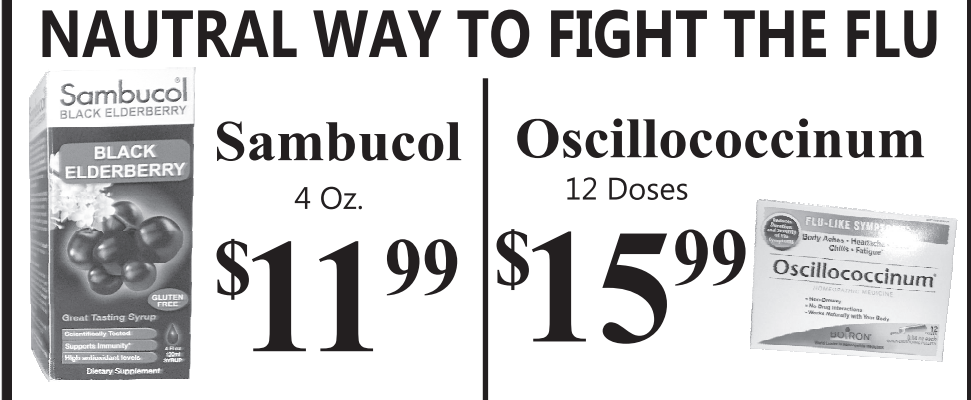

Bisphosphonates and denosumab are the most commonly prescribed treatments for osteoporosis. Protection from fractures occurs within the first few months of treatment and persists as long as treatment is continued. Upon stopping bisphosphonate therapy, protection from fractures is gradually lost over three to five years. Treatment for more than three years has been associated with an increasing risk of unusual or "atypical" fractures of the femur (thigh bone). The combination of increased risk of atypical fracture along with a relatively slow offset of the protection from fractures due to osteoporosis led to the confusing concept of a "bisphosphonate holiday." The American Society for Bone and Mineral Research has recently provided clear recommendations about "bisphosphonate holidays." After three to five years of bisphosphonate treatment, a patient's risk of fracture should be reevaluated. For patients remaining at high risk of fracture, continuing treatment or changing to a different drug like denosumab is important. For patients whose risk of fracture is lower, stopping treatment for two to three years (the "holiday") can be considered but is not mandatory. The beneficial effects of these other medicines, including raloxifene, teriparat, and denosumab, are lost quickly when treatment is stopped.

FREE BIBLE READING SCHEDULE

This time of year many of us will be making those "New Year's Resolutions." Do you want to have a working knowledge of the Bible? The Bible answers questions such as, "What must I do to be saved?" "How can my conscience be cleansed?" "How can I have the peace of God that passes understanding?" "How to prepare for eternal life" and more!
We have a 5-days-per-week reading schedule which will enable you to read through the entire Bible in one year.
That is a resolution you will never regret!
We will mail or email you this schedule for free:
email leon.mauldin@gmail.com or phone/text 256-339-0755.
You are invited to visit with the
HANCEVILLE CHURCH OF CHRIST.
Our building is located at 812 Commercial St., beside the school.
Schedule: Sunday 9:45 & 10:45 AM; 6:00 PM - Wednesday 7:00 PM
Our website is: www.hancevillechurchofchrist.com
(Our services are live streamed)
