Organization's Name Says It All

Build A Better Broken Arrow Committee Helping City Stay Ahead of Rapid Growth Needs

Special to the Broken Arrow Express

It likely ranks as one of Broken Arrow's most "invisible" community service organizations - invisible, that is, until the city or school district comes up with a bond issue proposal and needs a helping hand in getting voters to approve it.

That's when the Build A Better Broken Arrow Committee, an organization created in 1991 by local attorney and civic leader Russell Peterson, comes alive. Its mission is both simple and straight-forward: "support efforts to bring the best infrastructure, services, and amenities to our city and make it thrive.'

This year, the not-for-profit organization is being led by Peterson as president, Air Assurance Vice President/Owner David Rampey as vice president, retired educator Hazel Koehler as treasurer and newspaper editor Bob Lewis as secretary.

Peterson notes that by law, city and school officials cannot ask citizens to vote yes on any bond package. All they can do is present information to help voters make an informed decision.

"That's where we come in," he said. "As concerned citizens we have every right to endorse these measures and urge our friends and neighbors to do the same. That's exactly what we are here to do.'

None of that means the organization is a rubber stamp. In fact, it feels one of its most important responsibilities involves analyzing all aspects of proposed bond packages and suggesting modifications if it thinks they are necessary.

It is a formula that has proven to be highly effective.

Its most recent success involved helping shape and promote the largest general obligation bond issue in the city's history -- a $210 million package designed to help fuel community growth for the next 10-plus years.

Since 1991, Broken Arrow has grown from a community with 60,539 residents into the state's fourth largest city with a population in excess of 108,300 people. It is the millions of dollars made available by passage of periodic bond issues that have allowed education and city leaders to stay ahead of the physical needs of this rapid expansion.

Our goal is to help keep this momentum going," Peterson said ...

KUDOS of the MONTH: American Legion Post 1

Tulsa's American Legion Post 1, located at 1120 E. 8th St., is celebrating its 100th anniversary this year.

Known as the Carson-Wilson-Rigney-Forrester-Shoemaker American Legion Post 1, the post is named after local military heroes Joseph C. Carson, Sergeant, Company D, 358th Infantry Regiment, 90th Infantry Divi-sion, United States Army; Alex E. Wilson, Jr., Private Eisert Clear, Company L, 28th Infon Private First Class, Company I, 28th Infantry Regiment, 8th Infantry Division, United States Army; Keith Belvin Rigney Sergeant, E5, United States Army; Jordan Duayne Forrester, Specialist 4, Company C, 2nd Bat-talion, 7th Cavalry Regiment, 1st Cavalry Division (Air Mobile), United States Army; and Jared Shoemaker Corporal, 1st Battalion, 25th Marine Regiment, 4th Marine Division, 1st Marine Expeditionary Force, United States Marine Corps

The Tulsa American Legion post began in 1919, the same year the American Legion was founded as a patriotic veterans organization devoted to mutual helpfulness. It is the nation's largest full-time veterans service organization, committed to mentoring youth and sponsorship of wholesome programs, advocating patriotism and honor, promoting strong national security and continued devotion to the nation's service members and veterans.

The Tulsa Post 1 is planning a 100th year weekend celebration, gala and prayer breakfast the weekend of June 22.

Tulsans Stand Proud After Commissioning of USS Tulsa

By MCI WOODY PASCHALL LCS Squadron 1, U.S. Navy

The littoral combat ship USS Tulsa (LCS 16) was commissioned as the Navy's newest surface combatant in a ceremony in San Francisco Feb. 16.

The Independence-variant LCS is the Navy's second ship to be named for the city of Tulsa, Oklahoma.

"She truly is an amazing ship and an amazing addition to the fleet, but as impressive as she is, she would be nothing without the sailors you see lining winduit die sailors you see lining her deck this morning," said Cmdr. Drew Borovies, Tulsa's commanding officer. "And as much as they have already accomplished, they know their true greatness lies ahead as Tulsa enters the fleet and stands ready to answer her nation's call. They are the finest sailors our Navy has to offer. They are tough, able and ready to take our nation's newest warship to sea.' Indeed, in little more than three years, the ship has progressed from its keel laying in Mobile, Alabama, to its commissioning. Kathy Taylor, the ship's sponsor and former Tulsa mayor, was present for both events and many in between.

"I have gotten to know the crew of this exceptional USS Tulsa, and I know they will fight when they must," said Taylor. "I know they will protect this country at all costs, because they know everything they fight for and they protect keeps the promises made to all Americans.'

Current Tulsa mayor G.T. Bynum emphasized the bond between the people of Tulsa and the Sailors who serve aboard the Navy's newest ship.

"Wherever you are in the world, whatever day it might be or whatever hour in that day, we hope you know that there are hundreds of thousands of your fellow Tulsans who are thinking of you, and who are honored to be associated with you and are so proud of you," said Bynum.

The crew visited the city little more than a year ago to learn more about it and its people. Oklahoma Sen. James Lankford recounted some of the characteristics of the city and its people beginning at the city's founding as the destination of a forced migration of Native American people, through booming growth and cultural turmoil and into a city renowned for its diversity and beauty.

"When you arrive at any port of our nation or any port around the globe, you will bear all of our names and all of our history," said Lankford. You are capable of operating in all environments. Your mission is to protect our seas and deter aggression, but when deterrence fails, we also know you are fully capable of restoring the peace. Your actions, your words, your faith, your discipline and your power will reveal to a curious world just who we are as Americans. You are our ambassadors for freedom and you bear the name Tulsa and the United States of America."

NAVAL SALUTE: Distinguished visitors stand and salute for the parading of the colors during the commissioning ceremony of littoral combat ship USS Tulsa (LCS 16). LCS 16 is the 15th littoral combat ship to enter the fleet and the eighth of the Independence variant. It is the second Navy combat ship named after Tulsa. U.S Sen. James Lankford, standing at front, delivered the commissioning ceremony's address, and former Tulsa Mayor Kathy Taylor, third from right, served as the USS Tulsa ship sponsor. "Having the right mix of ships with the right number of ships, to include Tulsa, makes us ready to execute prompt and sustained combat operations at sea to fight and win against any adversary,' said Adm. John C. Aquilino, the commander of the U.S. Pacific Fleet. "Let there be no doubt, that is what Tulsa is ready to do.'

After the ceremony, the ship will transit to San Diego to join Commander, Littoral Combat Ship Squadron One (COMLCSRON ONE) and eight other littoral combat ships currently homeported at Naval Base San Diego.

Tulsa is the 15th littoral combat ship and the eighth of the Independence variant.

Littoral combat ships are high speed, agile, shallow draft, mission-focused surface combatants designed for operations in the littoral environment, yet fully capable of open ocean operations. As part of the surface fleet, LCSs have the ability to counter and outpace evolving threats independently or within a network of surface combatants. Paired with advanced sonar and mine hunting capabilities, LCSs provide a major contribution, as well as a more diverse set of options to commanders, across the spectrum of operations.

We have completed 22 neighborhood street rehabilitation projects and 11 arterial street rehabilitation projects, with 13 projects currently under construction. The rest of the projects are in various stages of design.

The largest Improve Our Tulsa street project that we have completed so far is Riverside Drive between 24th Street and 33rd Place, which opened to traffic immediately following the opening weekend at Gathering Place in September 2018. We also have completed nearby rehabilitation projects on East 31st Street between Riverside Drive and Peoria Avenue, and on Riverside between Joe Creek and 81st Street.

Other completed projects include North Mingo Road, East 36th Street to East 46th Street; the North Mingo Road and East 46th Street intersection; East 51st Street, South Sheridan Road to South Memorial Drive; the East 61st Street and South Sheridan Road intersection, and South Sherterest lately with policy makers at both the state and local levels, Tulsa County has been a leader in addressing this issue for over 50 years. The vast majority of defendants in the jail are waiting for their case to be processed through the courts. This is referred to as "pretrial incarceration.

Even though most of these defendants have a bond set which would allow for their release, a lot of them don't have, or cannot get the money to pay the bond. As a result, they often lose their jobs, are separated from their children, become delinquent on financial obligations, while costing the taxpayers thousands of dollars to pay for their incarceration.

This is where the pretrial services offered by Tulsa County can help those defendants, waiting for their

> its name to Tulsa County Division of Court Servic-

> Today, Court Services operates a comprehensive pretrial/community supervision program offering services such as electronic location and alcohol monitoring, jail diversion for those with mental health issues, community service programs, risk and needs assessments, urinalysis testing and investigations for the courts. Court Services also utilizes resources in the community for defendants to get assistance with mental health and/or substance abuse needs and employment opportunities.

The Court Services division helps between 400 and 500 individuals each year through pretrial release, court-ordered supervision and community service work programs, providing support to the Drug/DUI Court, Mental Health Court, Veterans Court, Community Sentencing, Women's Justice Team, 1st Step Male Diversion Program and Women in Recoverv.

Recently, Tulsa County, along with private sector partners, commissioned a comprehensive analysis by the Vera Institute, to examine the incarceration procedures at the county jail. After the study was completed, one of Vera's key recommendations to reduce unnecessary pretrial incarceration was to develop a pretrial release process that is individualized and not based solely on one's ability to pay the bail fee. Vera recommended, and Court Services embraces, a shift to a riskbased system.

Using highly advanced and proven methods, Court Services is now equipped with a very effective risk assessment instrument that enhances the pretrial evaluation process. This pretrial evaluation assesses the defendant's current life situation, available personal and financial resources, support systems, transportation, medical and mental health needs, substance abuse needs and past criminal history

Court Services is more than a pretrial release service. Once the defendant is determined not to be a risk to public safety and deemed likely to appear in court as required, they monitor the defendant based on their risk and supervision level to assure that the defendants follow their court ordered pretrial release plan. This may mean staying drug and alcohol free, remaining employed or gaining employment, keeping required appointments, and abiding by other terms and conditions of their court ordered pretrial release.

====== GREATER TULSA PERSONALITIES Broken Arrow's Mike Cooper Continues a Family Tradition that Began in the 1700s

Community Service Includes Mayorship of Enid, Oklahoma, B.A. Chamber Board Chair

> Former AT&T Executive Forms Consulting Firm

By BOB LEWIS Contributing Editor

Editor's Note: Greater Tulsa Personalities is a monthly feature in GTR Newspapers that focuses on interesting people making important contributions in the Greater Tulsa region.

Anybody seeking to write a comprehensive biography of Broken Arrow resident Michael G. "Mike" Cooper better make sure they have plenty of time and a good supply of paper. He is an exceptionally busy man devoted to extending a family tradition of business leadership and community service that dates back to the 1700's.

In researching his family tree, Cooper found one of his relatives fought in the Revolutionary War and was later credited with founding the city of Holden, Maine. Others served as decorated soldiers, aldermen, state senators and educators. The first members of the clan to move to Oklahoma settled in Wagoner where they became the city's first blacksmiths, established a hatchery and were community leaders. A great uncle was mayor of Bixby.

"I guess public service is just something in our genes," he said. Currently Board Chairman of the Broken Arrow Chamber of Commerce and a director of the Broken Arrow Economic Development Corp., Cooper's resume includes a dazzling array of contributions at local, state and national levels.

After serving as chairman of the Enid, Oklahoma Chamber of Commerce, he burst upon the public scene in 1995 when he was elected mayor of that city. One of the biggest challenges he faced during his four-year term came when Vance Air Force Base, the community's largest employer, landed on a federal list of military facilities to be closed

To help keep that from happening, Cooper was instrumental in creating the Vance Development Authority and served as its chairman for five years. Not only did his actions save the base, they helped create a national model that continues to guide local, state and federal lawmakers in finding ways to help military facilities fulfill their missions.

Furthering his military and community contributions, from 2001 to 2003 he served as chairman of the U.S. Air Force Association's Texas/Oklahoma Region.

"One of the really great things about running for mayor was the fact my children had the opportunity to get involved in our campaigns. They saw first-hand how government works and the importance of giving something back to the community," he said.

In addition to leadership of the B.A. Chamber and EDC, Cooper's resume includes chairmanship of the Oklahoma Strategic Military Planning Commission, presidency of the National Association of Defense Communities and director positions with the Tulsa Region Chamber of Commerce, Oklahoma Academy, Tulsa Community College Foundation, Northwest Oklahoma State University Foundation and Tulsa Better Business Bureau.

Additionally, he served as U.S. Air Force Honorary Commander from 2003-18, was a member of Leadership Oklahoma Class of 2004 and was honored as a Distinguished Graduate by Tulsa Community College. During his time in Enid, he was named one of the state's five outstanding mayors by the Oklahoma Municipal League. In 2005 he was recognized for "unique and lasting contributions to the community" by being part of the Enid Walk of Fame.

Growing up in Skiatook, Cooper said he gave almost no thought to what the future held in store for him. "Give me a ball and mitt or a football and I was a happy guy," he recalled. All that changed during a career days assembly at his high school.

"One of the presenters was a repairman for Southwestern Bell," he said. "The guy had a tool belt around his waist and talked about his job and the career opportunities offered by the telephone company. I thought to myself 'I can do that' so I went to work for Ma Bell as a lineman."

Following a government ordered breakup of Bell, Cooper found himself on the payroll at AT&T. 'My field experience really helped when I entered the management ranks because I knew how to do many of the jobs I was overseeing," he said.

After a 45-year career with AT&T, Cooper "retired." That word is in quotes, since he continues to serve the company by spearheading its community and government relations activities. Only now he does it through Cooper Public Strategies, a Broken Arrow-based consulting firm he founded in 2006.

To say that Cooper is bullish on Green Country and its prospects for the future would rank as an understatement.

Pointing to the redevelopment of downtown Tulsa, the explosive growth of Broken Arrow's Rose District, the strength of the city's manufacturing companies and advances being made in the education establishment, Cooper believes Eastern Oklahoma is one of the most dynamic locations in the region.

"We have a strong corps of energetic young leaders eager to make their mark," he said. "I truly believe we are on the leading edge of great things happening. I'm just proud to say I have been part of it all'

Entertainment For Cold-Weather Blues

Winter is wearing thin, and I couldn't be happier. This is the time of year when we dream of spring, and when indoor entertainment is a great diversion. Here are some suggestions for those cold-weather blues.

hasn't opened its

Margaritaville pool vet, but there is a selection of hot entertainment in the casino's Paradise Cove. Comic Wayne Brady appears, Mar. 23. Maybe you know from his Brady guest TV appearances on several including shows, "How I Met Your Mother," "The Bold and the Beautiful" and improv comedy's "Whose Line Is It Anyway? Possibly you will recognize him from TV's "Let's Make a Deal," for which he just won a Daytime Emmy Award as the show's host.

Also coming to Paradise Cove are Paquita la del Barrio and Angela Aguilar. Barrio is a campy Grammv-nominated singer, songwriter and actress whose onstage persona has made her a favorite of women. She is prone to joke about what she finds to be sexist behavior, and she incorporates teasing male audience members into her act. Appearing with her is 16-year-old vocalist Angela Aguilar. Raised in a family of singers, Aguilar has been around showbiz for most of her life. She was nominated for an American Grammy and two Latin Grammys, including 'Best New Artist." Aguilar and Barrio perform at the River Spirit on March 29.

The Brady Theatre hosts The John Mellencamp Show, Mar. 16 and the BOK Center welcomes Travis Scott, Mar. 26. Scott had to cancel an earlier gig at the BOK because of technical difficulties. This appearance of The Beach Boys will feature Love and a solid group of musicians performing Beach Boys hits.

Gladys Knight, "The Empress of Soul," is known for her "Midnight Train to Georgia" and "That's What Friends Are For." If you have been watching TV's "The Masked Singer," you will know that recently she was unmasked as the show's bee.

The supremely elegant Diana Ross was honored at this year's Grammys for an outstanding career that includes 14 Top Ten albums and 18 No. 1 singles. She was nominated for an Oscar and won the Golden Globe award for her turn as Billie Holliday in "Lady Sings the Blues.

DIANA ROSS: The Motown diva comes to Hard Rock's The Joint. Apr. 13.

GLADYS KNIGHT: "The Empress of Soul" brings swank and style to the Hard Rock, Apr. 11.

Coming up at the Tulsa PAC is C.S. Lewis' "The Screwtape Letters," Mar. 18-31, staged by Fellowship for Performing Arts. FPA is a New York City-based theatre company that produces work from a Christian world view. In this play, Screwtape shares his schemes for delivering the soul of an unsuspecting human to his master, Satan.

Tulsa Ballet stages a new work, "Tchaikovsky: The Man Behind the Music," Mar. 29-31, choreo-graphed by Tulsa Ballet resident choreographer Ma Cong. People know Tchaikovsky from his large body of work, especially his ballets, "Romeo and Juliet," "Sleeping Beauty" and "The Nutcracker." What people don't know is the anguish he suffered from trying to surmount a secret life that could result in imprisonment and an end to his career. This piece includes music from Tchaikovsky and other composers, including Óliver Peter Graber.

NOW AND THEN: Led by Mike Love, "The Beach Boys-Now and Then" revisits the band's big hits, Apr. 5 at the Hard Rock.

THE WEDDING SINGER: Theatre Tulsa presents this light-hearted comedy/musical Apr. 5-14 at the Tulsa PAC.

Theatre Tulsa, which has a musical theatre Midas touch, returns to the PAC stage with "The Wedding Singer," April 5-14. Based on the 1998 film of the same name, the story follows a wannabe star who is not quite ready for the bigtime. He gets jilted at the altar but finds love elsewhere in this comedy, with music by Matthew Sklar, lyrics by Chad Beguelin and book by Tim Herlihy and Beguelin.

Two fascinating speakers come to Tulsa in early April. Former Tulsan Frank Abagnale became known through the "Catch Me If You Can" movie (starring Leo DiCaprio as Frank) and musical, based on the book Abagnale co-wrote that details Abagnale's life as a con artist, impersonator and forger. After doing time for his misdeeds as a young man, Abagnale became a renowned cybersecurity and fraud prevention expert. The OSU-Tulsa Business Forums hosts him on Apr. 10. Welcome home, Frank!

Tulsa Ballet Tells Story of Tchaikovsky

'The Man Behind the Music' Runs Mar. 29-31 at the Tulsa Performing Arts Center

Emanating from the romantic era of music, the work of composer Peter Tchaikovsky is high theatre. Audiences know his sensitive "Sleeping Beauty Waltz," the swelling love theme from "Romeo and Juliet," and "The Nutcracker's" luscious "Waltz of the Flowers." Along with his famous ballets, Tchaikovsky created the impassioned "1812 Overture" and the tender Violin Concerto in D Major. In total, his oeuvre encompasses 169 works, including concertos, cantatas, ballet, symphonies, opera and songs.

Who is the man behind this music?

Having danced and overseen productions of Tchaikovsky's ballets over many years, Tulsa Ballet Artistic Director Marcello Angelini knew the composer's heart. Love and pathos abound in Tchaikovsky's music, but how and why did those feelings originate? Angelini was keen to have others know and empathize.

"I always felt his story had to be told because it shapes, molds and encompasses the diversity of his music," suggests Angelini. "Once you know the man behind the music, you can actually hear his words through his melodies whether those are words of passion or an expression of struggle, or a sign that he is giving up on life and society."

Angelini first had an idea for a ballet based on Tchaikovsky's life in 1999. For several reasons, he thought Tulsa Ballet was not ready to tackle the subject matter. He revisited the idea ten years later, but still hesitated. Then, two years ago he felt it was time to move forward, "to create a non-judgmental work. One meant to open a conversation for whomever chooses to come see it," he says.

Tulsa Ballet's resident choreographer and former dancer Ma Cong was chosen to create movement that could best convey the story. Oliver Peter Graber, who had composed music for Tulsa Ballet's "Dorothy and the Prince," was asked to construct a score around the piece. He pulled from Tchaikovsky's music and added compositions from Alexander Glazunov, Mikhail Glinka and Fritz Kreisler, along with original music of his own.

The team of Angelini, Cong, Graber and Russian historian Daniela Kolic met last summer to assemble the various pieces into a whole. After reviewing the most important influences in Tchaikovsky's life, they decided to center the ballet on three of Tchaikovsky's relationships. One was with the Belgian opera star Desiree Artot, with whom Tchaikovsky was smitten. The woman he did marry for a short time was one of his former students, Antonina Miliukova. She had pursued the composer through passionate letters.

A relationship that was most troublesome for Tchaikovsky at the time, and illegal, was his liaison with the violinist Iosef Kotef. It is said that the composer wrote his Violin Concerto with Kotef's help, or used him as an inspiration, or both. "They were very private, but very loving," says Cong of the relationship.

"This ballet is trying to tell people not all, but something about Tchaikovsky's struggle — what was troubling him at the time he composed his music," explains Cong. "Those relationships somewhat changed his life and pushed him further artistically. They inspired him to create the most beautiful music."

Tchaikovsky was the toast of Russia for a time and revered around the world. He famously came to the United States in 1891 to conduct his music at the grand opening of what would become Carnegie Hall. In 1893, at age 53, three days after premiering his Sixth Symphony, "Pathetique," in St. Petersburg, he became ill and died. The circumstances surrounding his death are suspect. Some speculate suicide, but the mystery persists.

"I am so happy with the team we assembled, one that I am confident can make this ballet a success," adds Angelini. "It has been great working with and leading this creative team to arrive at the story we wanted to tell. What is this story? One of judgmental societies. With their taboos and fears of what is different, they destroy the lives of others who are loving human beings just like the rest of us." Tulsa Ballet presents "Tchaikovsky: The Man Behind the Music," Mar. 29-31 at the Tulsa Performing Arts Center.

Consumers often see ads promoting pharmaceuticals and the list of side effects can be anywhere from minor to life threatening. The media reports how the opioid crisis is being addressed, and how new state laws are placing safeguards to help curb the potential for opioid abuse. To avoid these possible dangers, more and more people are looking for natural ways to feel healthier.

Our bodies have the extraordinary ability to heal themselves. Through the natural healing arts that have been practiced for thousands of years, people are discovering this natural alternative to modern medicines and medical procedures that is virtually free of side effects and is a relatively inexpensive form of treatment.

Acupuncture/Oriental medicine (AOM) is an ancient and empirical system of medicine based on the concept of qi (pronounced "chee"), which is usually translated as energy. AOM treatments identify a pattern of energetic imbalance within a patient and redress that disharmony through a variety of therapies that may include acupuncture needling, handwork, acupressure, exercises such as taiji and qi gong and Chinese herbal preparations.

According to Michael Brestel, licensed practitioner and certified acupuncturist at Natural Health & Acupuncture, "Acupuncture can help in healing pain such as headaches, chronic pain, joint pain, and back pain, even emotional imbalances and addiction. There are no narcotics involved and everything is completely natural."

Herbs were commonly used before western pharmaceuticals were introduced. Treating and preventing medical conditions with herbs is naturally safe, as an overdose would cause irritation or nausea instead of a trip to the emergency room. Natural Health & Acupuncture offers a variety of Chinese herbal medicine and herbology formulas for colds, flu, neuropathy, arthritis, allergies, weight loss, smoking cessation and more.

Natural Health & Acupuncture offers extensive in-depth specific treatments plus community-style treatments for acupuncture-only treatment on limbs and the head. First timer community treatments are provided free of charge. Additional services include diagnosis, sound therapy, moxibustion and reflexology.

The success of acupuncture today is due to its efficacy, remarkable safety record, cost-effectiveness and growing public demand. Natural Health & Acupuncture is located on the second floor of the Sharp Clinic Building just east of 106th Street and Memorial Drive (7914 E. 106th St.) and is open Thursday through Sunday. Appointments may be scheduled by calling 918-321-0888 or online at naturalhealthandacupuncture.com.

OSU-Tulsa to Celebrate Community Support During A Stately Affair at Cox Business Center

Oklahoma State University-Tulsa and OSU Center for Health Sciences are hosting their fifth bien-nial fundraiser 'A Stately Affair in Tulsa' on May 16 at the Cox Business Center.

This year, the gala marks the 20th anniversary of the founding of Oklahoma State University-Tulsa and the 30th anniversary of OSU Center for Health Sciences joining the OSU system.

This will really be a night to celebrate OSU in Tulsa," Jay Helm, co-chair for the benefit gala and chairman of the Oklahoma State Regents for Higher Education, said. "OSU's presence in Tulsa is strong and we want to recognize the great impact both Tulsa campuses have made in our community and across the state.³

As a business administration graduate of OSU, Helm has long provided leadership and support for the university and its efforts in Tulsa. He previously served on the OSU/A&M Board of Regents and the OSU-Tulsa Board of Trustees before being appointed in 2013 to uest Scholarships elebrates 1 Years of

Ten years of the Quest Whole Person Scholarship means nearly 6,000 Oral Roberts University students have benefited from this amazing program.

To celebrate a decade of helping students, ORU's Alumni Association hosted a scholarship dinner Feb. 18 in Lippencott Auditorium at the Global Learning Center. The dinner featured the two people responsible for helping launch the scholarships, Mardel CEO Mart Green and Jamie Weathers, class of 2008 student response speaker. It was Weathers' inspiring speech that prompted Green, who was chair of the Board of Trustees at the time, to launch the program.

"I felt very strongly: here is a moment in time that we have an opportunity to actually inspire and motivate people," said Weathers. "I thought, why not make this moment really great?"

Currently, 75 percent of ORU students benefit from a Quest scholarship and even more students will benefit from the International Quest Whole Person Scholarship, which ORU launched last year in honor of the its founder, Oral Roberts' centennial birthday.

Students from around the world can now earn a whole person education.

'Green's goal in establishing the scholarship program was to recognize students who are tireless in their quest for wholeness,' said Johnie Hampton, Chair of the Alumni Association Board of Directors. "Because of Green's generosity and an amazing faculty and staff, students emerge from ORU as servant leaders who are spiritually alive, intellectually alert, physically disciplined, socially adept, and professionally competent.

Hampton encouraged alumni to attend the dinner, which also served as an opportunity to raise funds for ORU scholarship programs.

Tulsa Tech Expanding to Meet Student Needs

For more than five decades, Tulsa Tech has include Creek, Okmulgee, Osage, Pawnee, been preparing students to enter the work- Rogers, Tulsa, Wagoner and Washington.

force in a variety of industries. Once they graduate, students are qualified for a successful career.

"Tulsa Tech averages a 96 percent positive placement rate for all fulltime students," said Steve Tiger, superintendent and CEO."Our mission of educating people for success in the workplace is showcased by the skilled workforce we place throughout the region and beyond with our business, industry, education and military partners."

Students can choose from a variety of programs, including aerospace, automotive/alternative fuels, health sciences, information technology and pre-engineering. Tuition is free for public, private and home-schooled high school students with low-cost tuition for adult learners.

Tulsa Tech currently serves nearly 6,000 high school and adult students exploring more than 90 full-time career majors in addition to providing training for more than 31,000 customers in both part-time classes and customized business and industry training

Students from 27 public high schools and 24 private schools are served. Tulsa Tech has 409 students in grades 9-12 enrolled in preengineering with an 85 percent retention rate this year, which is more than any CareerTech in the state. Counties served

Once those students graduate, they can seek job opportunities across an extremely large network due to the hundreds of partnerships that Tulsa Tech has developed with regional companies to provide student placement and workbased experience. In fiscal vear 2018, Tulsa Tech's economic impact to the re-gion was $675 million.

"I am very excited about the number of companies that we are partnering with to improve our region's workforce as well as working with economic development partners to attract new companies to our region,' said Tiger."Last year, Tulsa Tech served over 750 companies. We are not only improving thousands of lives through preparing them for workplace success, but we are truly an economic growth driver."

Like the trade skills they teach, Tulsa Tech's campus is evolving to fit the needs of today's world. In 2021 Tulsa Tech will unveil the latest addition to Lemley Memorial Campus when the Client Service Center opens. This expansion will streamline services and consolidate classrooms into the new state-of-the-art facility

The center will be 199,813 square feet of diverse space and home to updated training classrooms, large and small group meeting spaces, admission and testing areas, various district departments, administration offices and board of education meetings.

The expansion project comes at a time when Tulsa Tech has seen what Tiger calls "significant growth" in enrollment the last three years across instructional delivery arms: full-time career majors; Adult Career Development, Business and Industry Services; and extension programs located in Tulsa County public high schools

"When I say significant, I really mean it," said Tiger."We have increased student enrollment by 39 percent over a three-year period. People are beginning to realize the importance of workforce training and the ability of our state's CareerTech system to deliver.'

The Lemley Memorial Campus spans more than 40 acres and includes 10 instructional buildings featuring more than 238,000 square feet of classes, laboratories and shops.

"If individuals want to be successful in the job market, they should consider Tulsa Tech," said Tiger. "We are extremely affordable, student focused and provide exceptional instruction which result in positive student outcomes.'

Tiger said he and the rest of the staff are excited about what the future holds for the campus and for the students who will utilize the facilities to advance their careers.

'The impact Tulsa Tech is having on lives and our region's economic growth is tremendous," said Tiger.

'The rebuild of our Lemley Memorial Campus, including the new Client Services Center, will provide an opportunity to continue our growth and student success well into the future.'

BROKEN ARROW NEWS B.A. Schools, Mullin Plumbing Create Partnership

Broken Arrow Public Schools has teamed with B.A.'s Mullin Plumbing to create a unique program designed to provide high school students with paid apprenticeships while earning elective credit hours to prepare them to enter the skilled workforce upon graduation.

Under the agreement, Broken Arrow High School students will earn $10 an hour while working under a maximum student to supervisor ratio of three to one. The program is believed to be the first partnership in the state between a private business and a school district to provide paid apprenticeship opportunities as part of an educational curriculum.

"This is an incredible opportunity for our students who are seeking an innovative and challenging program to prepare them for a career in the local workforce," BAPS Superintendent Dr. Janet Dunlop said. "Mullin Plumbing came to us looking for ways to increase the number of prospective workers in the area and partnering with a Broken Arrow-based business is something we are honored to do."

"Plumbers are in high demand now and will continue to be in the future," Mullin, Inc. CEO Robert Morris said. "The plumbing industry provides an opportunity for young people to enter the field in a paid training environment and the potential to triple their pay over a three-year period."

Prospective licensed plumbers must initially complete three apprenticeship years before applying for a journeyman license from the Oklahoma Construction Industries Board. Under the agreement, Mullin Plumbing will subsidize the CIB apprenticeship application fee for students in the program which is open to juniors and seniors.

Participating students will get specialized training and instruction designed by Mullin Plumbing and spend approximately three hours at the start of their school day at the company before returning to the high school for lunch and afternoon classes.

that contribute to state graduation guidelines.

"Our goal is to make sure every student has a pathway tailored to their interests and their future plans," Executive Director of Secondary Instruction Sharon James said. "Broken Arrow graduates will be prepared for whatever comes next, whether that's going to college, straight into a successful career in the workforce, the military or anything in between."

By partnering with Tulsa Tech, Broken Arrow High School is helping students prepare for some of the 3.5 million manufacturing industry jobs expected to open over the next ten years.

On-site programs at BAHS are being designed to prepare students for careers in fields averaging $60,000-$65,000 a year for skilled workers.

B.A.'s Jim Rector Named Epic Principal of the Year

Broken Arrow's Jim Rector has been named Special Education Principal of the Year by EPIC Charter Schools.

Rector is in his fifth year of working at EPIC. Prior to joining EPIC, Rector worked as a teacher and principal at Broken Arrow and Tulsa Public Schools.

"I am honored to have received the Special Education Principal of the Year Award," Rector said. "I have a wonderful family of dedicated teachers with whom I am privileged to work. These teachers are compassionate, accessible, intelligent and diligent. They always hold their students accountable, but they do it with a great deal of professionalism and empathy. We are changing lives every day."

The award ceremony, which was held at the National Cowboy and Western Heritage Museum in Oklahoma City, also recognized other members of the EPIC staff, including Covington's Natalie Heim for her work as a special education teacher; Amber Grigsby, Jenks, as Rookie of the Year; Jodie Shupe, Cushing, as Principal of the Year; Donna Thornton, Mustang as Teacher of the Year; and Shawna Salkil, Piedmont, Administrator of the Year.

"The work our teachers and staff put in an effort to ensure student success is inspiring," said David Chaney, EPIC superintendent. "The majority of students who come to EPIC are behind their peers, and our goal is to not only get them up to grade level but to help them excel. Over time, we do that. Statistics show that the longer they're with us, the better students do. That's a testament to our staff."

EPIC is the state's fifth largest school system with more than 23,000 students and teachers and principals are located throughout the state near the students they serve.

All of the instructional awards are based on performance factors such as student achievement, attendance and retention.

______ BROKEN ARROW SPORTS = Tiger Linebacker Headed to University of Kansas

By MIKE MOGUIN GTR Sports Writer

Gavin Potter came in a Kansas State hoodie to Broken Arrow's signing ceremony early last month. He had made a verbal commitment to the Wildcats last fall.

But when he sat down to pose for a picture, he peeled off the purple hoodie to reveal a Texas Tech T-shirt, indicating, at the moment, he was bound for Lubbock. Then, he immediately removed the shirt and revealed with his chest painted blue and the letters KU in red. His back had the Number 12, his jersey number with the Tigers, painted with Jayhawks written above. It was his way to tell everyone he flipped to Kansas, where he will play for new Head Coach Les Miles.

When Potter announced he was going to Kansas State last fall, the Wildcats were the only D-I school to offer. But the legendary Bill Snyder retired from the helm after the season ended, which factored into Potter's decision. Around the same time, Miles was hired to be the new Jayhawks head coach.

"It's close to home," Potter said of Kansas. "So, I feel a lot better. And there were a couple of coaching changes at K-State, and for there to be coaching changes both ways, it just seems like KU was the right mesh for me.'

Potter made a big impact in Broken Arrow's state championship football season that also came with a perfect 13-0 record. As a linebacker, he recorded 92 tackles -- 52 solo and 40 assists -- with 23 of those stops for negative yardage, three fumble recoveries, two blocked kicks and an interception.

As a standout wrestler, Potter won state titles his sophomore (182 pounds) and junior (195) seasons before finishing third as a senior, while helping the Tigers to the dual and team state championships in both duals last month.

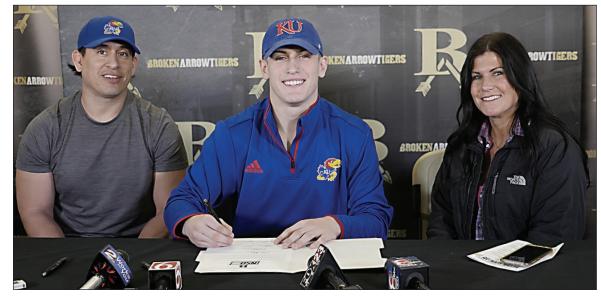

The new Kansas coach flew down to visit him in December, Potter told reporters on signing day. He later posted on his Twitter feed a picture of him with Miles, announcing he had been offered by the Jayhawks. He later announced receiving offers from Colorado State, Texas Tech and Oklahoma State.

But in the end, Kansas won the battle for his services.

"He's a funny dude," Potter said of Miles. "It just kind of seemed like our personalities matched, like we went together real well. He actually came in and was wearing his big national championship ring (which he won as coach at LSU in 2007) and that was a cool thing to see. That is something that is a pretty good recruiting tool, to get other kids to see a big ring like that. I think he is ready to change that program around.

"I like the fact that (Miles) likes to win," Potter added. "You can get a vibe from a person, you can feel them out and really feel if they're wanting to win or not. You can feel if they're the right coach for you. So, I just got that feeling about him and I feel like I'm going to have a good time when I go up there," Potter said. The Jayhawks are expecting Potter to come in and play imediately. He'll likely be rotating between linebacker and safety, he said.

JAYHAWK LINEBACKER: Gavin Potter, center, is donned in Kansas attire after announcing his decision to play college football for the Jayhawks at Broken Arrow High School's athletic signing ceremony. He is joined by his father Wes Ontiveros and mother Angie Potter.

Potter said he'll look forward to the encounters against the encampments in Norman and Stillwater.

"OU and OSU made the worst decision they have ever made letting me leave Oklahoma," Potter said. "I'm going to look forward to playing them. That's what I love to do. I love to prove people wrong. That's going to be two games I'm going to have a lot of fun playing.

Recognizing the basketball tradition KU has, Potter looks forward to going to a lot of games at Allen Fieldhouse in the upcoming winters.

"I actually got to go to one when I was up there and it was great. I'm hoping the KU fans up there realize what Les (Miles) is doing and they start supporting football the same way as they do basketball, because I've seen how crazy those (basketball) games get, and it's something that is different. It is something that you'll never see.'

12 Other Tigers Sign

While Potter was in attendance revealing his choice to attend KU, 12 other Tigers were in attendance to sign with their respective schools.

Colton Collier and Noah Cortes signed with Northeastern Oklahoma A&M while a vast majority of the other Broken Arrow football players are headed north of the state line to play at small colleges in Kansas. Matt Kaiser, Kaizer Newell and Aaron "Trickey" Stokes penned letters of intent with Pittsburg State, Quintevin Cherry is bound for Independence Community College, Trevon Klint and Kalen Scott are headed for Fort Scott Community College, and Demeco Roland signed with Hutchinson Community College.

Tate Robards is going to Morningside (Sioux City, Iowa) College and Daxton Wilson will be playing at Evangel University (Springfield, Mo.).

Zach Marcheselli, who became BA's second four-time state champion wrestler on Feb. 23, was the only other Division-I signee. He attended the event although he had a ceremony in December announcing his signing with TCU.

Isabelle Packard won another pair of state championships at the Class 5A state swimming meet last month in Edmond, taking home first-place medals in the girls' 200-yard and 500-yard freestyle races.

The win in the 500 was her fourth straight gold medal for the Metro Christian senior, which means she accomplished the rare feat of being a four-time state champion, a first in school history. Packard finished the 500 freestyle with a time of 5:13.94, winning by nearly 27 seconds over runner-up Kylie Allemeier of Altus (5:40.84).

"It's an accomplishment that I can be proud of," Packard said. "It's just exciting."

In the 200, Packard's time was 1:54.67, finishing nine seconds ahead of Kyle Catton of Harrah (2:03.91), who placed second. That was her third first-place finish in that event, marking seven gold medals in her high school swim career.

"I give the Glory to God," Packard said.

Her sophomore season was the only year she didn't win the 200, when she finished runner-up. Rebounding to win it last year is what she considers among her most memorable moments in high school. Another came when she anchored the 200-yard freestyle relay team while setting a state record time of 1:43.03 in a first-place finish.

With graduation looming, Packard will be taking her swimming endeavors up north to the University of Illinois. She toured the campus in November then made the decision to go in early January. She chose the Fighting Illini over Air Force.

"I have family there, so that's always a good thing, and whenever I went to talk to the coaches and met the team, it just felt like a really good fit." Packard said. "It felt like I belonged there."

As Packard reflects on her time at Metro. She said that the sport has taught her to have a hard work ethic.

"I work really hard to be dedicated," she said. "Swimming has really helped me with being focused and being able to take constructive criticism in the pool and it has transferred into school, from projects to being able to accept that you don't know everything, that you are not always right, and just learning from other people."

Packard hopes her accomplishments can give the Metro swim team some recognition, "so, maybe we can grow. It gives people something to look up to and try to achieve and to win state."

For any young person who wants to swim, Packard's advice is to "Work really hard, even when you don't feel like it," she said. "It doesn't always have to be ef-

Always try your hardest and don't give up whenever you feel like you're failing because I had a three-year period, where I didn't go with any best times at all and still kept trying to work hard and not give up, and eventually, I started dropping time again. Just keep a positive attitude and hard work ethic."

Holley Hollan Gaining National Racing Fame

By GLENN HIBDON GTR Sports Writer

Seventeen-year-old Holley Hollan doesn't mind recognition. In fact, she's craves it. Fame and fortune are her goals and she's just getting started.

"I was on TV during the Chili Bowl," said Hollan, a midget car racer from Broken Arrow. "I was eating lunch and some people came up to talk to me. They had seen me on the news. I want to make it known that I'm from here and I hope to motivate people.³

Called "Holleywood" by her fans, Hollan has the pedigree to succeed. A fourth generation racer and the daughter of Tulsa businessman and racer Harley Hollan, the personable blonde has her career already mapped out: Become the first female to win a national midget event and then it's on to NAŠCAR. No big deal.

"This is the year my career is taking off. This is the year to make some things happen," Hollan said. "I've been competing consistently and I'm working toward winning a national race. That would do a lot for me. I have top notch equipment and it's only making me better.'

Hollan is in the midst of her first full season on the USAC Nos Energy Drink National Midget Championships series. Over 80 races are on her schedule and she must also find the time to complete high school and work for her father's business Hollan, who attended Broken Arrow schools until her freshman year, is a senior online at the Depic Charter Schools. She said after turning 19, she will move to North Carolina full time and pursue the NASCAR ranks, all under the watchful eye of her father.

"I grew up around race tracks

KEEPING THE TRADITION: At 17 years old, Holley Hollan is a fourth generation racer and the daughter of Tulsa businessman and racer Harley Hollan.

and watched him race. When I turned five I saw other kids race and I wanted to do it. I won the Port City junior sprints championship when I was 12," said Hollan. "Even now my dad answers questions for me and a lot of times he races with me. He does a good job of giving me information and I definitely have an advantage because he races mini sprints. He's my best friend.'

As a freshman in school, Hollan followed in her father's footstep and began doing mechanical work on her race cars. Now she builds them professionally for Driven Midwest, her dad's company. She also sells racing parts to customers

Christopher Bell of Norman, winner of the last three Chili Bowls, saw Hollan compete and she was subsequently invited to ioin Keith Kunz Motorsports' Toyota team. Last year she ran five times. This season she's running the full circuit in the Bullet Toyota.

In January's Chili Bowl, Hol-

lan advanced to the D feature and ranked as the highest finishing female in the event. She said with the team and equipment behind her, she felt fast and confident. "We had bad luck," Hollan said.

"A car crashed in front of me and I stalled in the D feature. I thought we could have done better than we did. My goal coming in was to make a feature on prelim night and I did. I was happy with it (her finish) because with all that competition, you have to take what you can get.

With experience in both stock cars and midgets, Hollan said she enjoys racing, no matter the class. She enjoys speed, pure and simple. And the transition from dirt to asphalt has been challenging.

"I'm still learning both of them." she said. "In midgets you get sideways at full throttle and it's completely different, but I do enjoy both of them.'

Despite her burgeoning talent, Hollan said one of her biggest adjustments moving up in the sport the USAC Nos Energy Drink National Midget Championships series. Over 80 races are on her schedule and she must also find the time to complete high school and work for her father's business.

FAST LANE: Harley Hollan is in the midst of her first full season on is competing against drivers she idolized as a child.

'I have to put that in perspective," she said. "But I run 110 races a year and the more laps I run the better I feel. My goals are to consistently get better and, obviously, to be the first female to win a national USAC midget race. That's my ultimate goal this year."

There are other goals for Hollan to consider. One of them is being accepted by both male and other female competitors. She said sometimes that proves difficult at best.

"Being a female in a male dominated sport, for obvious reasons, sets me apart," noted Hollan. "I don't have pink on my suits or my car. Even when I was five I didn't want to look like a girl racing. In some ways it gives me an advantage. Toyota is trying to find a female to win a national race and they put me in a perfect position to win. "There two or three other girls I race with and winning is good for me and there are some keyboard warriors out there who are jealous. A lot of girl racers don't like to see me where I am. I've been exposed to that ever since I was younger and it gets worse the higher up you go. There are people who don't want you to get higher and then there are other drivers who are happy to see a girl do well. I do feel like I've made a positive impact in the sport.'

Hollan has found it's a constant struggle to make believers out some naysayers who doubt her ability and the legitimacy of the sport itself.

"People I went to school with contact me. A lot of them used to think that what I do is not a sport," Hollan said. "Now they see me doing well in racing and they step back and see it in a different way.

Holleywood is hoping that someday her critics and scoffers see her on the podium at a NA-SCAR event. That would be the ultimate proof of her racing talent while also serving as her sweetest revenge.

Zoe's Kitchen a Win for Healthy But Flavorful Food

Local Dining

By BLAKE AUSTYN Contributing Editor

Zoe's Kitchen boasts a handful of greater Tulsa locations, with four Tulsa-area restaurants, including Tulsa Hills and south Tulsa, and a fifth in Broken Arrow.

Its menu consists of a variety of healthy, fresh mediterranean items of starters, bowls, salads, pitas, kabobs, sandwiches and more in a fast-casual dining setting. Zoe's began in Alabama over 20 years ago and is currently in 20 states throughout the country.

A friend and I recently visited Zoe's Brookside location at 3629 S. Peoria Ave.

Its interior is bright with plentiful seating located in a convenient spot along Peoria Avenue.

My party began with the Pesto

Basil Hummus, which comes with the dipping choice of cucumbers, pita bread, or both. I enjoyed the bright pesto basil flavor, which is a bit of an untraditional hummus flavor. Other hummus options are Classic and Harissa Red Pepper.

For our entrees, we chose the Mediterranean Salad Trio Bowl with Baked Falafel added for an additional dollar. Grilled Chicken, Lamb Kafta and Harissa Salmon are also available as add-on proteins for an additional charge. Like so many of Zoe's dishes, it was flavorful and fresh. The dish is a combo of pesto farro, quinoa, and cauliflower rice with house-made Greek tzatziki, Italian salsa verde, feta, cucumbers and fresh dill. At first, I figured that it would be fairly dry, but the tzatziki, salsa and feta added the needed moistness.

Our other main dish was the Spinach and Mushroom Piadina-a flatbread sandwich with mushrooms, spinach, feta, parmesan and mozzarella-and our chosen side of marinated slaw. Other side options include roasted vegetables, fresh fruit, pita chips, pasta salad and baked falafel.

This sandwich was suggested as a favorite of the server who took our order at the front counter. Its most noticeable flavors were mushrooms and spinach, which I love. The other flavors served as side notes. So, if you aren't into mushrooms and spinach, unless you're trying to be, choose another sandwich.

Regarding the marinated slaw, while I love cole slaw (and was expecting a version of that), this proved to be simply cabbage with feta cheese. Though the feta proved to be a welcome added flavor to the cabbage, most people would find it to be bland. While I appreciated the healthiness of the side dish. I too found it to be a bit too bland for my liking.

We selected, as our dessert, the pre-boxed chocolate cake, which sits in the grab-and-go area and is a great value—a nice gooey slice of chocolate cake for under $3.

And it is delicious!

As I prepared to order, an older man walked up to the counter-a "regular" by the way that he was greeted—and purchased two cake slices to go.

The grab-and-go area also features various snack boxes and salads.

More information about Zoe's menu and its locations can be found at zoeskitchen.com. Depending on the locaation, Zoe's is open approximately 11 a.m. to 9 p.m.

THE ECONOMY ORU Entrepreneurial Program Receives $1 Million Gift

Stovall Center Added to College of Business

Oral Roberts University has received a $1 million donation, along with a $500,000 matching grant, to launch the Stovall Center for Entrepreneurship. Known for their entrepreneurship. Known for their entrepreneurial spirit, ORU Alumni Jim and Crystal Stovall (1981), along with the Tulsa Community Foundation, have made this generous donation because they know the power entrepreneurship can have in transforming lives, especially among the disadvantaged and underserved.

"The Stovall Center for Entrepreneurship will enable ORU to continue building whole leaders for the whole world who are equipped with new and innovative business ideas that transform not only people but also communities and nations," said ORU President Dr. William M. Wilson. "This amazing gift will allow ORU to aggressively pursue our commitment to developing leaders in business and entrepreneurship."

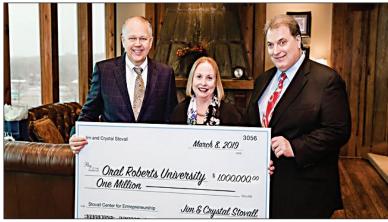

The Center will reside within the College of Business and allow ORU to attract and retain students with exceptional abilities to create new business concepts, start-up incubators, accelerators and launchpads. It will also host workshops, boot camps, and lectures; set up networking with entrepreneur collectives; provide space for entrepreneurial faculty and professionals to mentor and coach students; and allocate resources for mission-based entrepreneurial initiatives such as micro-financing and venture capital.

"We envision the Stovall Center for Entrepreneurship will provide the essential knowledge, skills, and ethics needed to equip ORU students to engage the world's biggest challenges with God's best solutions," said Jim Stovall. "In this extraordinary age of entrepreneurship, our desire is to unite and champion a thriving entrepreneurial spirit among all ORU students."

Stovall is founder and president of Narrative Television Network, which has made television and media accessible to the 13 million blind and visually impaired in the United States. He founded the network in 1988, just a year after fully losing his sight at age 29. He's the recipient of the President's Committee on Equal Opportunity Entrepreneur of the Year award and the International Humanitarian of the Year award, joining Jimmy Carter, Nancy Reagan, and Mother Teresa. Stovall is also a recipient of ORU's Lifetime Global Achievement honor and a member of the University's Board of Reference. Stovall is the bestselling author of over 40 books including The Ultimate Gift, The Ultimate Life, and The Lamp, all of which have been made into major motion pictures.

In the years ahead, the Stovall Center for Entrepreneurship will feature an array of new academic programs including undergraduate and graduate degrees in entrepreneurship, a major in social entrepreneurship, an entrepreneurial executive certificate program, and certificates for entrepreneurial enterprises in healthcare, technology, ministry, and others. The Center is also committed to applying advanced technology such as artificial intelligence, augmented and virtual reality, and ORU's Titan supercomputer to enhance product development and business success.

Oral Roberts University (ORU) is a world-renowned Christian university located in Tulsa, Oklahoma. Founded in 1963, ORU serves students from 50 states and 103 countries, representing over 51 denominations. ORU offers 77 undergraduate majors, 65 undergraduate minors, 14 master's programs and three doctoral degrees, plus NCAA Division I athletics. For more information on ORU, visit oru.edu.

Junior Achievement Announces 2019 Tulsa Tycoons and Centennial Celebration

Junior Achievement of Oklahoma announced the honorees for its 4th Edition of Tulsa Tycoons, A Night of Monopoly fundraiser. The 2019 honorees are:

- Dr. Clarence Oliver-JA Centennial Honoree
- Lynn Flinn, Rowland Group-Work Readiness Honoree
- Pat Piper, Bank of Oklahoma-Financial Literacy Honoree
- Dana Weber, Webco Industries-Entrepreneurship Honoree

This year, Junior Achievement of Oklahoma's largest fundraiser is both a chance to honor local business leaders and celebrate a significant milestone. JA was founded in 1919, so this year's Tulsa Tycoons event will include commemoration of the organization's centennial.

"Very few organizations make it to 100 years, much less continue to grow and thrive like Junior Achievement has," said JA of Oklahoma President Shannan Beeler. "We are taking this opportunity to celebrate and honor what's come before, but also look toward the future as we work to inspire and prepare our young people to succeed in our ever-changing world. We've selected companies and Honorary Tycoons this year who represent each of the three pillars - financial literacy, entrepreneurship and work readiness upon which JA was built."

Tulsa Tycoons, a Night of Monopoly, 4th Edition, includes a mobile auction, live auction, networking, stories of JA impact, and amazing food. In addition, attendees can engage in low-key Monopoly-themed activities.

The event will be held on Thursday, May 2, from 6 to 8:30 p.m. at the Cox Business Center in downtown Tulsa.

Funds raised from the event and auction will support Junior Achievement programs, which will bring lessons on financial literacy, entrepreneurship, and work readiness to more than 58,000 students this academic year. Fi nancial literacy prepares students to manage resources effectively through courses on budgeting and planning. Entrepreneurship lessons focus on what it takes to start, manage and grow a business. Work readiness helps ensure students understand the skills they need to successfully enter the workplace.

"We look forward to honoring this year's Tulsa Tycoons because of their commitment to business, education and the Tulsa community," said Beeler. "Their leadership in the community should be an inspiration to any student now learning about business and entrepreneurship through Junior Achievement.'

Sponsorships and tickets are now available. For more information concerning Tulsa Tycoons, A Night of Monopoly, 4th Edition, contact Martha Rongey at mrong-ey@jaok.org, call 918-663-2132 or visit tulsatycoons.com.

Oklahoma's Green Deal Includes Natural Gas Natural gas is relatively abundant, ies. In 2019, NET will continue

By MARK A. STANSBERRY

Oklahoma's Green Deal: Natural Gas. The Green New Deal proposed by New York Congressional representative Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez has recently gained national attention. Her main emphasis is on the need to battle global warming and the answer is a "massive government intervention."

The Green New Deal proposes to increase funding in billions of dollars to eliminate fossil fuels, to implement better energy efficiencies especially regarding buildings, and to have air travel replaced with rails. Is this proposal to be taken seriously? A recent survey by programs at Yale and George Mason Universities showed that 92 percent of Democrats, and 64 percent of Republicans support the Green New Deal.

The deal is a 10-year governmental intervention program which has a goal of achieving 100 percent of U.S. power demand from clean, renewable and zero-emissions sources. With the 2020 elections before us, and the outcomes uncertain, energy education is needed more than ever

Across the State of Oklahoma, from Tulsa to Elk City, there are reserves of natural gas. Net exports of natural gas continue to export. Lique-

TCCFoundationNames Leadership for 2019

Community College Foundation has named a new executive committee and new members to the Foundation Board for 2019.

TCC Foundation Chair is Phil Lakin, Jr., Tulsa Community Foundation chief executive officer. He previously served on the executive committee for two years. The executive leadership committee also includes Vice Chair David Stratton, BOK Financial Executive Vice President and Tulsa Commercial Banking Director and Secretary/Treasurer Tim Lyons, TTCU Federal Credit Union president and chief executive officer. Konnie Boulter, program director, The Oxley Foundation will serve as past chair.

"We value the time these dedicated business and community leaders give to the TCC Foundation," said Leigh B. Goodson, TCC president and chief execu-tive officer. "The Foundation's role is essential to the success of our students and we have an ambitious year ahead with the on-going Campaign for Completion, TCC's first multi-year campaign, and the upcoming 50th Anniversary celebration."

New TCC Foundation Trustees for 2019 include: Scott Asbjornson, AAON, Inc.; Jeff Brooks, Muscogee Creek Nation Casinos; Kevin Gross, Hillcrest Health-Care System; Jennifer Jezek, York Electronic Systems, Inc.; Sean Kouplen, Regent Bank; and Jackie Price Johannsen, Price Family Properties. Each trustee is appointed for a three-year term.

The chief purpose of the foundation, founded in 1970, is to support the college in its mission to provide university transfer and workforce development degrees and certificates. Each year, the foundation raises approximately $2 million for scholarships, programs and student development activities at TCC. Last year, the foundation launched its first ever multi-year fundraising campaign to remove navigational, financial and physical barriers while continuing the important work of support for scholarships, internships and projects.

heck Group, a global manufacturer of commercial air movement, control and conditioning equipment, has hired Rachel Anderson as director of its new Tulsa campus to lead community integration and employer-of-choice initiatives in the Tulsa region.

Anderson has more than 15 years of public relations, leadership consulting and community relations experience in Tulsa. Previous roles include vice president of inclusion and account services for Schnake Turnbo Frank, and vice president of communications and marketing for the Tulsa Regional Chamber.

Greenheck Group broke ground on its Tulsa campus in December 2017. Production of the company's first business line in Tulsa, the Accurex brand, launched in November 2018. The number of Greenheck employees could grow to more than 600 in the next five years, and the company has created the campus director role to serve as the primary leader and point of contact for Greenheck Group within the community.

As director of business development for Big Elk, Fagan will be responsible for the development and performance of all sales activities, with a primary focus on new business growth.

"We've experienced national, record-breaking growth at our company and its because of our people. With the addition of Jamin, we'll not only continue that trend, but take it to the next level," said Geoff Hager, CEO of Big Elk. "We're excited about the depth of knowledge and industry relationships he brings to our company. He's a perfect fit for our culture, and we're just getting started!"

that James Wagner will serve as the chief financial officer for the City of Tulsa and oversee the finance department. The Finance Department administers centralized public financial functions for the city through seven divisions: accounting, administration, budget and planning, city clerk's office, purchasing, treasury and utility services.

Wagner currently leads the Office of Performance Strategy and Innovation (OPSI) for Mayor Bynum, which is responsible for using data to align citywide strategies toward priority goals set by the mayor and city council. Through his team's work, city employees are using data to empower better decision making while lowering barriers to adopting new and innovative practices.

Wagner fills a vacancy left by the passing of longtime City Finance Director Mike Kier in December.

Wagner has been instrumental in creating Tulsa's first performance management system, TulStat, and received national recognition for his role in creating the Civic Innovation Fellowship Urban Data Pioneers.

Most recently, Wagner helped acquire a $1 million grant from Bloomberg Philanthropies for the Greenwood Art Project and works with the Bloomberg Philanthropies and Harvard City Leadership Initiative to create technical approaches in building a stronger animal welfare system. He was also selected as a participant in the Results for America Local Government Fellows Program.

Liberty Tower a Gateway to Tulsa Condominiums

GREATER TULSA REPORTER NEWSPAPERS

Built in the Early 1960s, the High Rise Remains Popular

Following World War II, new construction proliferated in Tulsa to meet a demand which had been growing since the depression of the 1930s. Although many apartments were built, it was not until the 1960s that condominiums became a significant project type. In 1965, Liberty Tower appeared on Tulsa's skyline. At 254 feet, 23 stories tall, Liberty Tower was one of Tulsa's earliest contemporary high-rise condominium tow-

The building and its surface parking lot to the west, occupies an entire city block. The amenities provided at Liberty Tower are numerous. These include, a parking garage at lower level topped by an outdoor pool, designated guest parking, a small due to the slope of the site, this base becomes three stories. Periodic vertical slits every four to six feet provide ventilation for the parking garage.

The tower rises off this base with an aggressive cantilever on the east (Boulder) and south. Four expanses of light gray rubble faced masonry become vertical pylons at the east and west elevations. These elevations are symmetrical. The pylons are separated by three vertical banks of metal railed balconies. Each balcony is separated into two parts with a dividing partition.

Capping the tower is a simple overhanging roof with a thin flat fascia in a shade of pale gray.

One of the notable images of Liberty Tower is its maintenance. The exterior is very clean. The public areas are pristine. They could have been finished out yesterday. Of course, this is an outward expression of a very active condominium association, known

B.A. Chamber Hires V.P. of Economic Development

Darla Heller Brings Strong Background

The Broken Arrow Chamber and Economic Development Corporation have announced and officially welcomed Darla Heller as the vice president of economic development.

Darla Heller is an economic developer with 18 years of experience demonstrating a history of working with state, local and regional economic development organizations to help grow Oklahoma's economy by fostering job creation and capital investment. She has a positive track record of effective organizational management, securing and managing public and private sector funds, advocating for legislative priorities, engaging corporate boards and being accountable to a diverse and engaged public.

Heller graduated from The University of Tulsa, the University of Oklahoma's Economic Development Institute and Leadership Broken Arrow. Most recently she served as the executive director of the Northeast Oklahoma Regional Alliance (NORA). NORA is a regional economic and community development organization focused on workforce development, leadership advancement, legislative advocacy and community building for the 14 counties of northeast Oklahoma. Heller has held positions at the Oklahoma Department of Commerce, Wagoner County, Muskogee Economic Development Authority and the Tulsa Regional Chamber of Commerce. She and her husband, Johnny Heller, live in Wagoner County with their two children, Bruce and Claire.

"I have long admired the work being done in Broken Arrow revolving around job creation and retention," said Heller. "I look forward to hitting the ground running and being of service to all business and industry in Broken Arrow's growing industrial, healthcare, retail and service industries. Furthermore, I am excited to be joining a team environment at the Chamber staff where there is a strong working relationship with city, county and state officials. Broken Arrow has experienced so much success over the years and is now on the threshold of many future wins due in large part to the Chamber, BA EDC and city leadership. To say that I am honored to be of service to this great community would be an understatement."

According to a B.A. Chamber spokesperson, "Broken Arrow is a thriving city with a bright future and we are excited to bring someone on board to help us continue that growth and make Broken Arrow a better place to work, play and live."

The Museum B.A. Hosts Talitha Jacobs Art Exhibit Through Apr. 3

The Museum Broken Arrow is hosting hometown artist Talitha Jacobs in an exhibit which opened March 7 and continues until April 3, according to Julie Brown, executive director.

"The Museum Broken Arrow is thrilled to host Broken Arrow native Talitha Jacobs' first Broken Arrow exhibit. Her talent is something Broken Arrow should take great pride in. Here at the museum, we have a passion for art and history. Our goal is to make the two collide by showcasing a variety of artists and artifacts throughout the year," Brown said.

According to her bio, "Talitha Jacobs is a mixed media artist who specializes in dog and other animal portraits. She is known for using bright, bold acrylics and gains most of her inspiration from nature and her deep Oklahoma roots. She strives to create pieces of art that ensue happiness, hope and wonderment.

"She currently is taking time off from teaching to pursue her dream of being a full-time artist. She resides in Broken Arrow with her husband and three children and works from her home studio."

For additional information, contact the Museum at 918-258-2616.

Motorcycle Safety Course

The Broken Arrow Police Department's popular motorcycle safety course will resume on March 24.

"Share the Road" is designed for experienced riders and is taught by seasoned police motorcycle officers. It focuses on effective turning, obstacle avoidance, braking and more.

Dates are March 24, April 7 and 28. Advanced classes for graduates will be held on June 9 and Sept. 8.

All classes will be from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Events Park, 21101 E. 101st St. For more information go to BrokenArrowOK. gov/Share the Road or call 918-259-2400, ext. 8692.

Statement on South B.A. Reasor's

The following is from B.A. City Manager Michael Spurgeon concerning the South B.A. Reasor's closure:

"City administrators today learned of the business decision made by Reasor's Grocery stores to close its location near Elm and New Orleans in south Broken Arrow by the end of April. While we are not necessarily surprised by the company's decision, we are extremely disappointed to hear the announcement.

"City staff has been in constant communiof the space simply no longer works for their store model, and they made a business decision not to put money into a building (which Reasor's does not own) that does not meet their needs.

"We will continue to work with Reasor's to find a suitable location in the southern part of Broken Arrow so that our residents can continue to buy their groceries conveniently.

"Today's disappointing news does not detract from the City's ongoing commitment to the revitalization of the Elm and New Orleans corridor. Our consultant-led study into ideas for revitalization continues and a report will be available in the coming months. We are excited about what the future of this intersection may hold."

FEMA Approves B.A. Storm Shelter Rebate Program

The Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) has awarded a grant worth $328,000 to the City of Broken Arrow. These funds will offset the cost of installing storm shelters for 164 homeowners.

"This is very exciting, that we have federal tax dollars coming back into our community to help save lives," said City Manager Michael Spurgeon. "We hope to continue participating in this program in the future to allow more residents the opportunity to take advantage of the rebate."

The City of Broken Arrow received more than 300 applications last October, when it held two meetings to announce details of the Safe Room Rebate Program, which is managed by the Oklahoma Department of Emergency Management (OEM). The program allows homeowners who would like to install a safe room the chance to earn a rebate of up to $2,000. Qualifying residents must own their own home, live in the city limits and not be located in a flood zone.

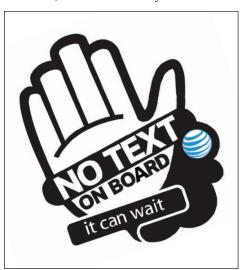

The City will begin contacting homeowners who were approved for a grant. They are required to attend another meeting to get instructions for receiving their rebate check. The meetings will be held on March 28 and April 2 at 7:00 p.m. at the Public Safety Complex, 1101 N. 6th Street. Attendance at only one meeting is required.

Rockets Over Rhema Show Cancelled

One of Broken Arrow's most endearing traditions – Rockets Over Rhema – has been cancelled.

"Thank you for your support over these last 20 years," the organization's website states. "2018 was the last year for Rockets Over Rhema."

The ministry decided to end the show after the last event in July and notified the city of Broken Arrow. A Rhema spokesman said a "number of factors" contributed to the decision to end the fireworks show.

The annual event, which began in 2003, attracted 50,000-60,000 people each year and featured a car show, concession stands, inflatables and games for kids.

It was held on the Rhema Bible Training College's campus at 1025 W. Kenosha.
