An article recently published in Scandinavian Journal of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry and Psychology reviewed the existing evidence between various psychotic symptoms such as hallucinations, problems with concentration or anxiety with methylphenidate, a drug commonly prescribed as a treatment for attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD) and narcolepsy. Methylphenidate is a stimulant that increases the activity of the central nervous system, helps to combat fatigue, improves attention and maintains alertness. Its medical use began in 1960 and has continued to grow since, reaching global consumption of 2.4 billion doses in 2013. Currently, around 5.3% of children and adolescents worldwide suffer from ADHD. Psychostimulants, including methylphenidate, are a first-choice drug treatment. The research suggests that adverse symptoms may affect around 1.1% to 2.5% of ADHD patients treated with methylphenidate.

Is the standard treatment for hypothyroidism-insufficient thyroid hormone-inadequate in controlling some crucial aspects of the condition? That's the provocative question asked, and answered affirmatively with objective data, in a study in The Journal of Clinical Endocrinology & Metabolism. A research team found higher cholesterol levels in the blood of hypothyroid patients treated with appropriate doses of levothyroxine (Lt4)- a synthetic version of the human thyroid hormone that is the standard treatment for hypothyroidism-than in healthy control subjects. The statistically significant difference held both in terms of total cholesterol (TC) and serum low-density lipoprotein (LDL), the so-called "bad cholesterol," which increases the risk of heart disease.

IS WHAT WE ARE ALL ABOUT

SHOP TODAY'S LOW PRICE TAGS:
We have HUNDREDS of non-advertised items marked down throughout our entire store. More savings passed on to our customers. Just look for blue tags on the shelves.

NO LIMITS:
Our competitors also have advertised specials. The difference is, in most cases, they have a limit on how many of an item you can buy at the sale price...we don't have any limits to family shoppers.
