Maintaining the Tradition of Community & Family

Cremation... A decision this important should be discussed with experienced professionals.

If you're thinking about cremation, you probably have many questions:

- Will there be a service or viewing?
- How is cremation done?
- What does it cost?

We can answer these and other questions. We're here for you.

Jason Wayne Speakman
April 9, 1980 ~ May 23, 1999

It has been 7300 days since you heard your name called from above. And from this world you were lifted on the wings of a snow white dove. This year is the one you have been living longer that you did here. Even though it seems so long ago certain situations bring it all so near. Those childhood memories of times we shared each hour of every day. Flood my mind from time to time yet now keep sadness at bay. I have a dear friend with two sons sharing the same age difference as us. It calms the waters of my soul as I watch them play, fight and fuss. It's in these moments watching these boys be brothers your energy is strongest, As they catch frogs, play in the woods, or see who can hold their breath the longest. I thank you for your help and direction whenever I find myself at a loss, and appreciate you being the liaison with guidance from the Boss. In closing we all thank you for preventing Papa from being damaged beyond repairs. When he tried one late afternoon in March to fly down the basement stairs!

We Love and Miss You, Dad, Mom, Josh and Family

The use of antibiotics drives the development of antibiotic resistance, a major threat to public health worldwide. But these drugs also carry the risk of harm to individual patients, including children. According to a new analysis published in the Journal of the Pediatric Infectious Disease Society, antibiotics led to nearly 70,000 estimated emergency room visits in the U.S. each year from 2011-2015 for allergic reactions and other side effects in children. Most of the visits (86 percent) were for allergic reactions, such as a rash, pruritus (itching), or angioedema (severe swelling beneath the skin). The risk of a visit varied by child age and type of antibiotic, but for most antibiotics, children aged 2 or younger had the highest risk of an adverse drug event. Forty-one percent of visits involved children in this age group. Amoxicillin was the most commonly implicated antibiotic in adverse drug events among children aged 9 or younger, while sulfamethoxazole/trimethoprim was most commonly implicated among children 10-19 years old.

According to new research from the University of Illinois at Chicago, about one in five children regularly use prescription medications, and nearly one in 12 of those children are at risk for experiencing a harmful drug-drug interaction. The findings from the study, which is published in the journal Pediatrics, indicate that adolescent girls are at highest risk of potential adverse events due to drug-drug interactions, or DDI's. The researchers found that nearly 20 percent of children had used at least one prescription medication. Analysis also showed that medication use increased with age, from 14 percent in children younger than 5 years to 22 percent in adolescents 13 to 19 years. The most common medications were respiratory agents and psychotherapeutic agents. Respiratory agents, used primarily in the management of asthma, included bronchodilators and leukotrine modifiers. Psychotherapeutic agents included CNS stimulants and antidepressants.
