Route 66 Rises with Sculpture Dedication

Tulsa Mayor Bynum Welcomes Lt. Gov. Pannell to Route 66 Rising Historic Event

Mayor G.T. Bynum welcomed Lieutenant Governor Matt Pinnell to Tulsa July 2 for the dedication and ribbon-cutting at the "Route 66 Rising" sculpture at the Avery Traffic Circle – East Admiral Place and Mingo Road.

"Route 66 is rising in Tulsa right now," Bynum said. "Tulsa is the birthplace of Route 66, thanks to Cyrus Avery. Tulsa is home to one of the world's foremost historians on Route 66, Michael Wallis. And now there is a new sense of revitalization along Route 66, with venues like Mother Road Market drawing new visitors and Buck Atom greeting travelers as they cruise through Tulsa. It is a special time in the history of this American icon, and we are excited for this latest improvement."

Joy Avery, granddaughter of Cyrus Avery – Father of Route 66, was a special guest and speaker at the event. Avery, a former Tulsa County Commissioner and Oklahoma State Highway Commissioner, also served as a Consulting Highway Specialist to the U.S. Bureau of Public Roads. Cyrus Avery lived in Tulsa during the planning stages of Route 66 as a national highway, and he was influential in bringing the highway through Tulsa, including a bridge across the Arkansas River.

"Route 66 Rising" is approximately 70 feet wide and 30 feet high. This $682,000 project was funded by Vision 2025, a Tulsa County sales tax from 2004 through 2016 that provided for regional economic development and capital improvements. Vision 2025 included $15 million for projects on Route 66 in Tulsa. Beginning in 2017, the Vision Tulsa sales tax replaced Vision 2025 within the city limits of Tulsa.

which is another state along Route 66, created the "Route 66 Rising" sculpture. The artist, Eric F. Garcia, said his work was inspired by "a time when the Oklahoma dust bowl was a reminder of the hard times during the Depression and how the Old Route was a symbol of hope."

The intersection of Admiral Place and Mingo Road has been named the Avery Traffic Circle, in honor of Cyrus Avery. This location is on the original 1926-1932 alignment of Route 66.

Avery Traffic Circle also is the former site of Cyrus Avery's tourist court. With full-brick Tudor Revival architecture, the tourist court consisted of an auto service and gas station, the Old English Inn restaurant, and tourist cabins.

KUDOS of the MONTH: Junior Achievement

Junior Achievement, celebrating its 100th year, is a volunteer-delivered organization that encourages students from kindergarten through 12th grade to foster work-readiness, entrepreneurship and financial literacy skills, and to provide experiential learning to inspire students to dream big and reach their potential.

JA volunteers are business people, college students, parents, and retirees. These dedicated individuals are the foundation of the organization. They provide experiential learning opportunities for students, both in and out of the classroom.

be it organizations or individuals, the following statistics below can begin to change in the nation's communities:

JA helps students realize that the education they are getting today will help them have a bright future tomorrow. Its unique, volunteer-delivered programs show students all of the possibilities that lay before them. The students begin to realize they can choose different paths: College? A specific trade? Washed Ashore: Art to Save the Sea Exhibit Appears at Tulsa Zoo

The Tulsa Zoo presents Washed Ashore: Art to Save the Sea through Jan. 5, 2020. Made entirely of plastic debris collected from beaches, Washed Ashore sculptures unmask the impacts of plastic pollution on oceans, waterways and wildlife.

Tulsa Zoo guests can view 11 colorful, larger-than-life sculptures of aquatic animals on display throughout the zoo. This temporary exhibit is included in the cost of regular zoo admission.

The artwork was created by the non-profit organization WashedAshore.org dedicated to educating about plastic pollution through art. Oregon-based artist Angela Haseltine Pozzi and her team of volunteers constructed each piece from plastic litter collected on West Coast beaches.

Guests are invited to get up close to view the sculptures, which range from a 10-foot-tall Adélie penguin, a 6-foot-tall river otter, to a 6-foot-long clownfish with anemones, multiple jellyfish and more.

"We want everyone to examine the artwork closely. You can find everything from flip flops, toothbrushes and bottle caps, to combs, pails and shovels, and plastic bottles, all collected from beaches," said Washed Ashore Executive Director John Tannous. "The goal of the art is to get people to think about what they buy. When you are no longer using a package or product, it does not disappear. Every piece of plastic in the exhibit was once purchased by somebody."

The poignant sculptures represent the more than 315 billion pounds of plastic in oceans today. "Exhibits like this are a way to connect our actions to wildlife conservation," said Terrie Correll, Tulsa Zoo president and CEO. "These sculptures are a powerful reminder of our personal responsibility, even in landlocked Oklahoma. Bringing together art and conservation, Washed Ashore will visually represent why reducing one-time use plastics is vitally important."

The zoo is in a unique position to educate guests about how their actions impact wildlife and lead the community in conservation. As part of the zoo's green practices, the Tulsa Zoo is moving away from plastic that is used once and thrown away.

The zoo's efforts to reduce its ecological footprint were recognized by the Metropolitan Environmental Trust, which granted the 2018 America Recycles Award to the Tulsa Zoo. Also in 2018, the zoo received the Henry Bellmon Sustainability Award for mid-sized businesses from Sustainable Tulsa.

About the Tulsa Zoo

The Tulsa Zoo is Green Country's largest paid daily attraction, welcoming more than 700,000 guests each year, it is owned by the City of Tulsa and managed by Tulsa Zoo Management, Inc., a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization. Weathering the Storm After Historic Flooding

If there's one thing Tulsans do best, it's our ability to overcome obstacles. The resilience and will-

Yet, it's in trying times when you see what a community is really made of. Following days of severe ingness of everyone who worked long hours and helped others during Tulsa's May flooding has been inspiring.

From mid-May to early June, Tulsa experienced severe weather and historic flooding. The Arkansas River was flowing at its fastest rate in more than 30 years, putting lives, structures and areas along the river at risk. Widespread rainfall created a flooding emergency, multiple tornadoes left behind damage, and a 70-year-old levee system put Tulsa to the test. The night of Monday, May 20, severe storms and an EF-1 tornado hit North Tulsa. Then Wednesday, May 22, an EF-0 tornado struck south Tulsa leaving downed power lines and widespread tree limb debris.

weather, storms, hail, downpours, and fear that the Arkansas River was going to expose Tulsa's earthen levee system, Tulsans and all of our responders worked together to help our fellow neighbors in these trying times. With patience and after 10 straight days of disaster response, we caught a break in the weather, allowing Lake Keystone to dip below its flood pool, alleviating flooding issues downstream.

I'm proud to say that our operation ran like a well-oiled machine through communication and teamwork to keep residents safe. From different levels of government, to non-profit agencies, to utility companies, the common thread that bound us together was giving everything we had to our community. I'm incredibly grateful for the Army Corps of Engineers who kept us updated throughout the event. I'm also thankful for Governor Kevin Stitt, Vice President Mike Pence, FEMA Director Pete Gaynor, our Congressional delegation, and state legislators for their continued support throughout the event.

At this point in time, we have now turned to recovery. President Trump approved an Oklahoma Disaster Declaration on June 1, making federal funding available for those affected by the storms.

The primary river flood damage we sustained in Tulsa was our infrastructure. I'm told River Parks estimates close to $8 million worth of damages to their trail systems. As a city, we are looking at approximately $5 million that we will be seeking federal reimbursement for and we are continuing to evaluate damages and expenses from the severe weather events — primarily on roads, storm sewers and our parks.

Following disaster assessments, no residential structures in Tulsa took on water, but areas within Tulsa County were affected and some residents lost everything due to substantial flooding. FEMA has set up a Disaster Recovery Center at Case Community Center, 1050 W. Wekiwa Road in Sand Springs for Tulsa county residents. It's recommended homeowners, renters and businesses contact their insurance company and register with FEMA prior to visiting the center. To register, visit disasterassistance.gov.

For those interested in volunteering, please call 211. You can also contribute to local non-profits helping in recovery efforts, by visiting tulsacf.org/2019storms.

Tulsa Area Emergency Management Agency (TAEMA) Gave Tulsa County True Leadership During Flooding

During the recent horrific flooding which impacted hundreds of homes and businesses, many public and private agencies stepped up to help those affected. The task of pulling all these responsive agencies and people together to provide a coordinated and effective response requires there to be a single point of contact that oversees the relief efforts. A single point that can prioritize where resources should be deployed, can communicate both the current situation and the expected next events, and answer all the questions from both responders and the citizens.

In Tulsa County, those leadership responsibilities fall to the staff of the Tulsa Area Emergency Management Agency (TAEMA), formerly known as the Tulsa City-County Civil Defense Agency. Under the skillful and steady hand of Director Joe Kralicek, TAEMA mobilized a massive effort to warn, protect, remove, and coordinate evacuations throughout the areas flooded.

From the Emergency Operations Center (EOC) Joe and his team brought together the federal, state, county and city elected leaders to stay on top of the minute-by-minute changes in the flood waters and to strategically deploy information and resources as the impact of the flooding changed hour by hour.

TAEMA's role is to ensure that Tulsa's governmental leaders, who routinely make decisions on their own, come to a decisive consensus on an action plan to address the state of affairs.

Very few citizens probably know about TAEMA until a crisis hits and the TAEMA team rolls into action. TAEMA provides services which include emergency operations planning, staffing the EOC, coordinating emergency services, as-essment of damages, providing public information about personal safety procedures during the disaster, etc. They are also responsible for Tulsa's emergency siren and public address system.

Educating us on our personal responsibilities to be prepared and protected is at the heart of TAEMA's mission. They do this by conducting area training all year long, speaking to community organizations, keeping up with the latest technology designed for disaster responsiveness, and bringing Federal recourses when we need it.

Recently TAEMA released a family preparedness app for mobile devices known as "Tulsa Ready," designed to help citizens create family plans for dealing with disasters.

To stay up to date on the latest information, training, and technology for the management of emergencies, the staff at TAEMA participates in training provided by FEMA, Oklahoma's Department of Emergency Management, Homeland Security, and other sources to keep up with the latest developments in emergency management.

While each weather event creates unique and unknown threats TAEMA knows any response activity will require an immediate and coordinated response. TAEMA continues to prioritize monitoring weather and activate the warning system when needed. Response readiness requires not only TAEMA but also many response partners to be prepared to accelerate operations with little or no notice.

The citizens of Tulsa County are in good hands and well protected thanks to the skills, dedication, and faithful discharge of duties by the team at TAEMA.

Regional Leaders Bring Waterway Concerns to D.C.

More than 80 business and community leaders carried the region's call for levee repairs, waterway infrastructure and flood relief to Capitol Hill as part of the Tulsa Regional Chamber's June One Voice Washington D.C. Fly-In.

The timing of the fly-in carried significant influence as federal officials discussed ongoing flood relief in the wake of historic flooding along the Arkansas River and in northeast Oklahoma.

In addition to meeting with Oklahoma's congressional delegation, trip attendees met with James C. Dalton, director of civil works for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. Dalton leads, manages and directs the policy development, programming, planning, design, construction, operation and maintenance activities of the Army Civil Works Program, a $6 billion annual program of water and related land resources.

Dalton announced he will reevaluate the Tulsa area's $158 million in backlogged projects, particularly the west Tulsa levee, which he said will likely move forward as a higher priority. To put the Army Corps priority list into perspective, the agency has nearly $100 billion in unfunded construction backlogs across the nation, Dalton said.

"Mr. Dalton addressed our concerns with careful consideration for Oklahoma's flooding and candor regarding his agency's own need for funding," said Elizabeth Osburn, senior vice president of government affairs for the Tulsa Regional Chamber. "Mr. Dalton and our elected officials from Oklahoma were attentive due to recent events and gave us a chance to make the case anew for these vital needs."

Another highlight was a conversation with Rep. Markwayne Mullin, whose district contained some of the worst flooding in Oklahoma. Mullin discussed his work connecting state leaders to federal officials as flood waters rose. Mullin said he and others identified previously unknown hurdles that slowed reaction time between agencies. He also promised to clear those obstacles to speed coordination in the future.

NASA Administrator and former U.S. Rep. Jim Bridenstine addressed the group on the final day of the trip. He discussed plans to go back to the moon and eventually inhabit it as a launching point to Mars and beyond. He said he hopes the moon will soon be looked at as more than a refueling station to Mars, suggesting the world's first trillionaire would be the person who figures out how to mine the moon for rare metals and return them to Earth at a profit.

The OneVoice Washington D.C. Fly-In is the Chamber's signature federal advocacy trip on behalf of the regional business community. The annual event helps build collaborative relationships between federal elected officials and the northeast Oklahoma business community. Business leaders, local elected officials and regional suburban chamber leaders have the opportunity to speak to Oklahoma's congressional delegation about the federal priorities included in the OneVoice Regional Legislative Agenda, a list of policies endorsed by a coalition of more than 75 cities, counties, economic development organizations and education institutions across the Tulsa region.

The OneVoice agenda is now in its 12th year. The document has become a well-respected resource for state and federal policymakers.

"The OneVoice Regional Legislative Agenda is the foundation for all of our advocacy efforts," said Mike Neal, president and CEO of the Tulsa Regional Chamber. "That agenda is assembled collaboratively, and regionally endorsed, and it enables us to maximize our impact every time we meet with federal and state legislators. Those legislators see the agenda as a direct reflection of our region's most pressing needs, and it forms the basis for all of our discussions, especially during this important annual trip to Washington." In addition to meeting with Dalton, Bridenstine and members of Oklahoma's federal delegation, trip attendees met with policy experts from the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the Economic Development Administration and the Department of Energy. Attendees also heard from Florida Rep. Francis Rooney.

HONORING VETERANS: The Military History Center in Broken Arrow hosted a Flag Day ceremony June 15. In the photo, Oklahoma's First District Congressman Kevin Hern honors World War II veteran Oscar "Junior" Nipps. The event included ceremonial raising of the American flag, flags of each service branch, Medal of Honor flag, and flags of the Army Reserve, Air National Guard and 45th Infantry Division.

Tulsa's Summertime Entertainment Peaks

The Tulsa Awards for Theater Excellence (TATE) held its annual gathering in June, recognizing theatre organizations in our area for quality work presented last season. Theatre adds so much richness to our cultural scene, and this was a great year. If you are not a regular at theatrical performances, I hope you will be in the future. If you are an aspiring thespian, or raising one, please contact local theater companies to see when auditions or workshops are scheduled.

Youth theatre takes the spotlight in the weeks ahead. Theatre Tulsa's summer programs for children include two shows. The company's Broadway beginners' program welcomes children, ages 5 to 8, in addition to an older group, ages 8 to 14. No theatre training or audition is required. This summer, the students will perform Disney's "Aladdin Jr.," July 12-14. Advanced teenagers are part of Theatre Tulsa's Broadway Bound bootcamp. Their project is "RENT, the School Edition," July 19-21. All programs will take place at the Tulsa PAC.

Capping the month of July at the PAC is Choregus Productions' Summer Heat International Dance Festival. I missed this festival in 2017 and regretted it even more when I heard about the marvelous dancers and fascinating programs. Manuel Vignouille is an award-winning French choreographer, now based in New York. He formerly was with the Ballet du Grand Theatre de Geneve and Cedar Lake Dance companies, which we have enjoyed at Summer Heat in the past. The Manuel Vignouille-Motions company will demonstrate their honed technique and athleticism during a world premiere slated for July 25.

Giordano Dance Chicago is featured on July 27. The company was founded by Gus Giordano in 1963. He specialized in jazz dancing and appeared on Broadway. The troupe, now run by his family, is referred to as "America's original jazz dance company."

On July 28, Fly Dance Company closes Choregus' festival with its electric blend of street dance and classical music. They call their style "theatrical hip hop."

The Exchange Choreography Festival, in conjunction with Summer Heat, returns July 26-27. It draws dance-makers from across the country who put on new works and participate in a conversation with audience members and each other about the performances and contemporary dance.

no man Michael Cavanaugh pays tribute to the music of Billy Joel and Elton John at the PAC on Aug. 1. Cavanaugh was handpicked by Joel to appear in Broadway's "Movin' Out," which showcased Joel's music. Cavanaugh was the centerpiece of that mega-hit show.

Two Canadian heartthrobs appear at the BOK Center in July. Michael Buble's appearance several years ago at the PAC, before he was over-the-moon popular, was one of the best pop concerts I have ever seen anywhere. This is Buble's "Love" tour, and I know there will be lots of love to go around. His setlist includes "My Funny Valentine," "When I Fall in Love," "Sway" and "Cry Me a River." Catch his show, July 15.

Like Buble, Shawn Mendes hails from Canada. He attracted fans in 2013 with a Vine clip he shared covering a Justin Bieber song. He's only 21, but has racked up one hit after another, including "Stitches," "Lost in Japan" (my favorite), and currently, "Senorita" (with Camila Cabello) and "If I Can't Have You."

In addition to his own music, the 25-song set will cover tunes by Coldplay, Whitney Houston and others. Along with his singing and songwriting, Mendes models for Calvin Klein and Armani. His concert is July 20.

Singer and TV personality Cardi B also garnered an audience through Vine. She's the only woman to win the Grammy Award for Best Rap Album as a solo artist, and the only woman to have 10 singles simultaneously on the Billboard Hot R&B/Hip-Hop chart. The BOK Center welcomes Cardi B on July 23.

The River Spirit Casino Resort roars back with actor Tony Danza, July 19; REO Speedwagon, July 27; and the band Chicago, Aug. 1. Best known for TV's "Taxi" and "Who's the Boss," along with a memorable presence on Broadway in heavies like "The Iceman Cometh." Danza presents a light-hearted show that blends storytelling and American Songbook music.

Both REO Speedwagon and Chicago have toured every year they have been together. REO Speedwagon marked its 40th anniversary in 2007. Chicago's music spans six decades!

Formed in 2009, The Head and the Heart, an Indie Folk band from Seattle, plays at the Brady Theatre, July 15. Country music and folk singer Robert Earl Keen appears at the Cain's, July 19.

Across town at The Joint at Hard Rock Hotel and Casino, The Marshall Tucker Band takes the stage on July 28, followed on Aug. 1 by Sugarland. Jennifer Nettles and Kristian Bush of Sugarland won five consecutive CMA Awards for Vocal Duo of the Year. I enjoy Nettles work. She has the most pleasing, engaging voice and great stage presence.

For other summertime options: spend evenings listening to music (free) at the Guthrie Green, attend a Drillers' game, and join the Circle Cinema in celebrating its 91st year. Tulsa's only non-profit theatre stages a film festival, July 11-15. Festival programming will have an emphasis on independent films and filmmakers who have an Oklahoma connection. Films include documentaries, silent films and classics.

The livin' is easy this time of year. Have fun tasting, exploring and savoring the entertainment coming our way in the weeks ahead.

Tulsa Sound Goes International; Fall Festivals on the Horizon

"When the flower's in bloom, the petals feel like wings"
 — Paul Benjamin

The Paul Benjamin Band is in full bloom and spreading its wings to bring the Tulsa Sound to France during a three-week tour in July.

"Thank you all for your support through the years," said Benjamin on a recent Instagram post. "I never thought anything like this would ever be possible."

Drummer Patrick Ryan and bassist Paul Wilkes round out the European-bound trio that has been described as "the new Tulsa Sound."

"New Tulsa Sound" does not mean reinvented Tulsa Sound. The band stays true to the groove-based genre founded by its heroes J.J. Cale and Leon Russell with a style Benjamin describes as "boundary-free, 70s-style rock."

The band leaves for France on July 15, and as of press time, the tour dates have yet to be posted. Check paulbenjamin.com for dates and other news about the tour.

I would be hard pressed to find a better international ambassador for the Tulsa Sound both on and off the stage than Paul Benjamin. The people of France are getting a truly authentic dose of Tulsa music as well as the spirit and vibe that goes with it. Way to go Paul!

Fall Festival Season Around the Corner

The dog days are officially here. And while it's worth it to brave the heat for incredible outdoor music like the recent Woody Guthrie Festival in Okemah, by the time August gets here, it's time to start looking ahead to the lineup of festivals that coincide with the highly anticipated cooler weather.

Here are a few of the upcoming festivals on my radar:

MisFEST

Not quite fall, but hopefully more fall-like weather will be in store for this year's MisFEST: Music is She and She is Music Sept. 14 at Guthrie Green.

This is year three for the one-day festival that celebrates women in music by providing a platform to help women succeed in the music industry. This year, MisFEST is moving from River West Festival

Park to Guthrie Green in downtown Tulsa. The lineup is still forthcoming, but if it's on par with the last two years, which featured acts like Branjae, The Golden Ones, Lauren Barth, Nightingale, Rachel Bachman, Lincka, Faye Moffett, and more, you won't be disappointed. Check out MisFest.com for more information.

Searching for The Sound

By BRYAN CANTRELL

Medicine Stone

This is year seven for the premier Red Dirt music experience. With a lineup hand picked by festival founders Jason Boland (Jason Boland and the Straglers) and Evan Felker (Turnpike Troubadores), the festival draws thousands of Red Dirt fans from all over the country for three days of music and camping along the Illinois River.

In addition to the annual appearance by the organizers, Jason Boland and Turnpike Troubadores, this year's lineup includes Parker McColum, Todd Snider, Cody Canada and the Departed, John Fullbright, American Aquarium, and many more.

The seventh annual Medicine Stone will be held Sept. 20-22 at Diamondhead Resort in Tahlequah. For the full lineup, visit medicinstoneok.com.

VIVA LA TULSA SOUND: Paul Benjamin, pictured here at a recent Fourth of July gig, is taking his three-piece band to France for a three-week tour in July.

Stone River

Medicine Stone is not the only must-see festival being held the first weekend of Autumn. Sept. 20-22 is also the date of the 10th Annual Stone River Festival, held on 40 acres of private wooded land three miles north of Chandler, Oklahoma.

Stone River, which features a playground and other play areas for children is a more family friendly gathering than the aforementioned Medicine Stone Festival. It's a weekend of grassroots music, showcasing primarily Oklahoma bands/musicians, as well as food trucks, and arts and crafts vendors that the whole family can enjoy. A portion of the proceeds from this year's festival will be donated to the Little Light House in Tulsa, an organization that provides aid and support for young children with physical and mental challenges.

MOJOFest

Tulsan Jamie Oldaker and his wife Mary, along with the legendary Church Studio are hosting the third annual MOJOFest on Oct. 5. This year's festival, held in the Pearl District of Tulsa, just off Leon Russell Road at 3rd Street and South Trenton Avenue, comes on the heels of Oldaker reuniting with his old bandmate Eric Clapton, which will happen Sept. 20-21 at the Crossroads Festival in Dallas. And while Oldaker's MOJOFest lineup may not compare with Crossroads in terms of star power, the Tulsa Sound Pioneer puts his musical connections to use to book acts from around the country, as well as some local favorites.

Oldaker's original Sand Springs band, the Rogues Five are expected to play, as is John Fullbright, The Subduces out of New Orleans, and, the High Priestess of Soul herself, Ann Bell.

MOJOFest benefits Tulsa Day Center for the Homeless, so go to facebook.com/MOJOFestTulsa/ and get your tickets. It's good music for a good cause.

MEDICINE STONE: Ben Han of Red Dirt Rangers entertains fans from across the country at last year's Medicine Stone Festival at Diamondhead Resort on the banks of the Illinois River. This year's festival, held at Diamondhead again, runs Sept. 20-22.

Brad James: At Fellowship Hall

No, that's not the name of a Fall festival. I'm switching topics before I run out of room to give a quick shout out to Brad James Band for recently completing the studio album, Brad James Band at Fellowship Hall Sound in Little Rock Arkansas, a recording studio famous for great sound engineering and one of the best two-inch analog tape machines in this part of the country.

The official release date is Aug. 9, but you can preorder your digital album, cd or vinyl today. Congratulations to Brad James and the rest of the band. I can't wait to hear the full album. You can listen to one track and preorder the album at bradjamesbandtulsa.com.

Stay cool out there music fans. It won't be long before cooler temperatures arrive, inspiring us all to get outside and keep searching, keep listening.

DINING OUT IN GREATER TULSA

Tulsa Club Chamber an Impressive Downtown Addition

Local Dining

By BLAKE AUSTYN
Contributing Writer

Downtown Tulsa's Deco District welcomed a long-time friend back to the neighborhood, with the reopening of the revitalized Tulsa Club Hotel, 115 E. 5th St., which opened in May of this year. The hotel's restaurant, Chamber, opened in mid-June.

Tulsa Club's history began when it was founded in 1925 as a high-society club for wealthy oil barons. It moved into the Tulsa Club building after construction was completed in 1927. The club continued to be profitable for many decades until economic decline caused it to close its doors in 1994.

However, after the purchase of the shuttered building by the Ross Group, it is experiencing a rebirth as a boutique hotel in a revitalized downtown.

The Chamber restaurant is located slightly below the hotel's main entrance level. The restaurant also has its own entrance near the corner of 5th Street and Cincinnati Avenue.

Chamber opens daily for breakfast and remains open for lunch and through the evening hours.

Its dinner menu features appetizers, soups and salads, and entrees, plus a la carte sides.

I started with the drink menu, which features a number of specialty cocktails. I chose the First Lady - grapefruit vodka, St. Germain, prosecco. This drink, the bartender said, is very popular and, I learned, for good reason. It comes with edible flowers in an ice cube; it's a beautiful drink both for the eyes and the tastebuds, refreshing and effervescent.

For our appetizers, we chose both the Fried Pimento Cheese and Shrimp Cocktail Tostados.

If you like cheese and pimentos, you will like the Fried Pimento Cheese. The app is pretty straight forward: two cheese balls with nice seasonings and jalapeño pepper jelly to add moistness.

The tostados were delectably delicious. I could have done with another plate of them. The combination of shrimp, guacamole and cocktail sauce make for a beautiful flavor, sitting atop a tostado and a bed of micro greens. A refreshing combination.

For our entrees, we chose the Seared Scottish Salmon and the Pepper Lavender Seared Ahi Tuna Salad.

The salmon had a skin that I needed to take off, but after that was done, the warm spinach, cherry tomatoes and roasted cauliflower combined for a tasty flavor complimented nicely by the fennel apple relish and pomegranate balsamic.

My partner ordered the Ahi Tuna Salad, with well done tuna. Her reason for ordering the dish was on our server's recommendation due to the dish featuring edible flowers and also the lavender flavoring. Yet, the dish had no noticeable lavender flavor nor edible flowers. (We later found out that they had run out of the flowers.) Despite all of that, the dish still had a very enjoyable flavor with its combination of mixed greens,

PSO Contributes to Adaptive Sports Complex

AEP Foundation Donates $150,000 to The Center for Individuals with Physical Challenges

A $150,000 gift that contributed to the building of an adaptive sports complex at Tulsa's Center for Individuals with Physical Challenges was recognized June 27 during a special ceremonial "big check" presentation at The Center.

The gift from the American Electric Power Foundation (AEP Foundation) was presented by Public Service Company of Oklahoma (PSO) President and Chief Operating Officer Peggy Simmons. PSO is a subsidiary of AEP.

"On behalf of the AEP Foundation, PSO is pleased and honored to formally recognize The Center for the great work it does to address the needs of those who have physical challenges," said Simmons. "The Center's efforts relate directly to one of our core values, which is inclusion, and how our entire community benefits when we seek to provide opportunities that enhance quality of life for everyone."

The AEP Foundation's contribution was part of a capital campaign launched in 2014 that raised more than $12 million. The result of the campaign is the 37,000-square-foot Hardesty Family Adaptive Sports Complex, which opened earlier this year on the northeast corner of 11th Street and Utica Avenue, adjacent to The Center's main facility at 8th Street and Utica Avenue.

"The Center is incredibly thankful to the entire community of supporters who contributed to this campaign. Through the addition of The Hardesty Adaptive Sports Complex, The Center will not only enhance many of our services, but we will be able to expand our reach as well, most notably through the opportunity to serve physically challenged children and youth through summer camps and after-school programs," said Lori A. Long, executive director at The Center.

"We are most grateful for our relationship with the AEP Foundation and Public Service Company of Oklahoma. Their generosity in the Tulsa metro area and support of at-risk and underserved populations truly reflects their value of 'putting passion into action, improving the lives of people living in the communities we serve.' It is because of supporters like them that we can improve the quality of life for many Tulsans, while building a community that fosters hope, health and humanity," added Long.

In addition to the AEP Foundation gift, The Center earned nearly $21,000 in PSO rebates for energy efficiency, and plans to use the funds to continue retrofitting various aspects of its facilities that will qualify for additional rebates and provide ongoing energy savings.

Oklahoma Fund for Teachers Announces Grant In Honor of Teacher of the Year Donna Gradel

B.A. Teacher is a Top-Four Finalist For National Teacher of the Year

The Oklahoma Fund for Teachers has announced the establishment of an annual teacher professional development grant in honor of Broken Arrow High School environmental science teacher Donna Gradel, the current reigning Oklahoma Teacher of the Year and a top-four finalist for National Teacher of the Year.

Gradel, a two-time Fund for Teachers fellow, was honored at a recent reception at the Oklahoma School of Science and Mathematics in Oklahoma City. The event was hosted by the national Fund for Teachers, the Oklahoma Foundation for Excellence and the Tulsa Community Foundation, which partner to administer Oklahoma Fund for Teachers grants.

Gradel received a framed certificate announcing the fund, which will provide a professional development opportunity for an Oklahoma teacher who, like Gradel, is "helping students become problem solvers and world changers."

During the reception, Gradel shared how her Fund for Teachers fellowships to Kenya in 2012 and 2015 helped lay the groundwork for student projects to provide clean water and high protein foods for children suffering from protein deficiency. She described how she engaged students in problem-solving design projects and took student groups to Kenya to build a large-scale aquaponics system and, later, a fish-food system. Last summer, she returned to Kenya with a third student group to build a chicken coop and chicken-food harvesting facility. Her students are now preparing for a large-scale production of low-cost sustainable fish and chicken food with the goal of helping thousands of children suffering from protein deficiency.

"My students who worked on these projects and those who were able to travel to Kenya will never be the same," Gradel said. "Their trajectory in life has changed. They have the mindset that they can make a difference in the world. They have the confidence and grit it takes to work on solving relevant real-world problems."

The Fund for Teachers Reception also recognized a new tribal alliance comprised of the Chickasaw Nation, Cherokee Nation, Citizen Potawatomi Nation, the Ponca Tribe of Indians of Oklahoma and the Muscogee (Creek) Nation who are helping support grants for 27 teachers through the 2019 Oklahoma Fund for Teachers Program.

"The Oklahoma Foundation for Excellence recognizes the tremendous positive influence Native American tribes are to our state's educational endeavors," said Foundation President Cathryn Render, explaining that the foundation reached out to tribes with the goal of encouraging teachers with Native American tribal membership to apply for Fund for Teachers fellowships. "We are very proud of these five founding members for stepping up to recognize the value of the amazing Fund for Teachers program. And of course, we are delighted that over 23 percent of the fellows selected this year were indeed tribal members."

Gradel also thanked the Tribal Alliance for the investment they are making in Oklahoma teachers. "You are going to get an amazing return on that investment in the form of greater engagement in the classroom and greater learning potential for our students."

Since 2002, more than 1,000 Oklahoma teachers have received Fund for Teachers grants totaling over $3.6 million, providing self-designed summer professional development experiences in the United States and around the world. In 2006, Oklahoma became the first state in the nation to offer grants to educators statewide when the Oklahoma Foundation for Excellence joined the national Fund for Teachers and the Tulsa Community Foundation as state partners. Fund for Teachers fellowships empower teachers to explore their academic passions, deepen their scholarship and enhance their craft, said Karen Webb, executive director of the national Fund for Teachers.

"Through experiential learning, bold experimentation and the realization of personal ambition, teachers are better equipped to impart tools and skills which serve their students far beyond the boundaries of the classroom," Webb said. "Fund for Teachers knows that good teachers become great teachers when they have the resources to explore their subject matter in the real world and translate it to their students and communities."

Tulsa Regional Chamber Celebrates Ribbon Cutting For Tulsa Tech Industry Training Center at Lemley

On a bright, sunny June afternoon, dignitaries, elected officials and guests from throughout the Tulsa area recently celebrated a ribbon cutting for Tulsa Tech's newest facility, the Industry Training Center located at the Tulsa Tech Lemley Memorial campus at 3420 S. Memorial Dr. in Tulsa.

The 12,000-square-foot facility is designed to provide training in three main areas: welding, machining and workplace safety. The Industry Training Center had a "soft" opening last fall and is already buzzing with training for multiple companies.

"This is the first facility that Tulsa Tech has dedicated to customized industry training and will allow for us to serve our business partners 24/7," said Dr.

Steve Tiger, Tulsa Tech Superintendent and CEO. "And the training that is taking place happens almost that often."

Serving approximately 750 companies over the last year, the training center will help to continue and expand the offerings of customized employee training for companies large and small. Fully adapted training opportunities can be achieved at the new facility, one of six campus locations or on-location at the place of business.

"It doesn't matter the size of the company or the industry, the number one thing that we hear about from companies looking to expand or relocate to our region is 'can you help us find an available, skilled, well-trained workforce,'" said Mike Neal, president and CEO of the Tulsa Regional Chamber of Commerce. "The partnership that we have had with Tulsa Tech and the customized training that it is doing for companies is critically important."

Businesses are one of Tulsa Tech's important stakeholders, as these partners are crucial in the development of curriculum and program opportunities for hiring of new employees through its programs and placement services, and the customized development of training programs for existing employees.

The Industry Training Center is part of a comprehensive remodel of the flagship Lemley campus, established in 1965. The transformation continues with a 199,813-square-foot Client

Dill plans to attend Oklahoma State University this fall. Throughout her high school career, she was involved in several activities including the Spanish Club, Girls Rise Club, National Honor Society, National Society of High School Scholars, National Hispanic Honor Society and was co-editor of the yearbook. She was also very active in her church, serving as a member of the Chapel Choir, Bell Choir and United Methodist Women.

Simon Youth Foundation is a national nonprofit committed to helping students reach graduation day. SYF works toward this mission by partnering with local public school districts to launch Simon Youth Academies, alternative classroom settings located primarily in Simon Malls that provide students at risk of dropping out with the personalized support needed to reach graduation day, and by providing Simon Youth Scholarships to graduating seniors who live near Simon centers. Since its inception, SYF has maintained a 90 percent graduation rate at its 35 Simon Youth Academies in 15 states, helping more than 17,000 students earn their high school diplomas, and has awarded $17 million in scholarships. Visit syf.org to learn more.

Spartan Varsity Wrestler Ainslie Lane Wants State Sanctioned High School Girls Wrestling

After Competing Against Boys in High School, Bixby Senior Joins College Women's Team

By MIKE MOGUIN
GTR Sports Writer

When high school wrestling has a girls' division in Oklahoma, Bixby's Ainslie Lane will be regarded as a pioneer.

Girls wrestling is exploding at the state, national and international levels. It is now sanctioned in 10 states. Oklahoma is not among them, but there is progress. Females wrestling on varsity boys teams has increased in recent years and Lane, a five-time freestyle All-American who graduated in May, is among those who has grappled with guys.

Although lack of a girls program kept Lane from winning state titles, it did not stop her from receiving recognition and awards. As she continues her wrestling career on the women's team at Presbyterian College in Clinton, South Carolina. She is hoping for more girls to achieve their dreams on the mat and more schools, including her alma mater, to launch a program.

Lane took up wrestling when she was 13. Beforehand, she had been involved in Brazilian Jiu-Jitsu, a martial art she started at age 5.

"It is very similar," Lane said. "You have to be able to take them down. The thing is, I needed to learn how to take people down better."

In order to improve her take-down technique, her father decided that wrestling would be the best for her to take.

"He said that if I wanted to get better, I was going to have to do this (wrestling)," Lane said. "I didn't really want to get involved because there wasn't any other girls in it and it just seemed a lot more physical than what I needed. But, I tried and in the first practice, I absolutely loved it."

From there, she took off. Lane has wrestled guys in sanctioned tournaments and has won her fair share of matches.

"I've wrestled through normal high school seasons, just like guys do against guys," she said. "I would have duals Tuesday and Thursday and then I would have my weekend tournament on Friday and Saturday. All those times it was just boys."

"It was pretty even by the time I finished my career. At the Jenks tournament, I was 2-2. So, I won as many matches as I lost," Lane added.

While she had to wrestle with boys in high school, Lane did grapple with other girls in events sanctioned outside the OSSAA.

"The only time I wrestle boys is in Oklahoma. So when I compete on a national or international level, I'm competing against girls," she said.

Lane believes going up against guys has helped her become a better wrestler, but at the same time, it hurt.

"It helped me because I feel like wrestling boys, they're so physical, it made me tough and it made me have to persevere more. So, I had to be super-determined and disciplined. But, at the same time, there is a lot of moves that I could do against girls that I couldn't do against guys because I wasn't physically strong in those moves against male competitors."

With Broken Arrow recently announcing the start of a girls program, along with the hiring of a coach, Lane believes a step has been taken to have girls wrestling sanctioned by the OSSAA and hopes for Bixby to follow suit.

"I can't really speak for other schools in the area. I'm only familiar with Broken Arrow because I know the coach (Cassidy Jaspersen, who was a standout at Oklahoma City University) and I know their female wrestler, Allison (Hines). But, at Bixby, we have all the ingredients that we need to have a phenomenal girls' program and it is ready to take off. The only thing that is really holding all those programs back are administrative issues and other coaches not being open to having girls on their team."

TAKEDOWN: Ainslie Lane battles a female opponent in a club wrestling match. Lane, who mostly wrestled boys during her high school career, hopes for Bixby to have a girls program in the future.

Lane also praises Brock Moore, the Spartans' varsity coach.

"He is so accommodating and very supportive about having girls. There had never been a girl wrestler at Bixby before me. I showed up to one of our Bixby youth practices at the end of the season and there were 13 girls in a practice and that was just three years after having one female athlete. All that needs to happen with all the schools is that someone needs to take a step. Once people see that girls can wrestle and see their coaches are being supportive of it, there is really nothing else stopping it other than administration. All the support is there."

Lane is now spending the summer up north, training with the Badger RTC program at the University of Wisconsin, led by coaches Chris Bono, Matt McDonough, Jon Reader and Ben Askerin, all standout wrestlers in college.

"They coach me for all my tournaments right now," she said. At the end of summer, Lane will then head to South Carolina to compete for Presbyterian College, whom she chose over OCU, McKendree, Augsburg, Wayland Baptist University and Life University. She plans to major in political science.

D.J. Dean Follows His Dream with Roughnecks

Union Graduate Leaves College for Pro Career

By GLENN HIBDON
GTR Sports Writer

Dominique Jeremias Dean, better known as D.J., wakes up every morning thankful for the opportunity he's been given. The 20-year-old Tulsa is determined not to waste it.

Whenever Dean dwells on becoming a professional soccer player seemingly overnight, he pauses to reflect on how it could all go away in a heartbeat.

"I know a lot of players my age would love to be in my position," said Dean, an attacker for the Tulsa Roughnecks of the United Soccer League. "Every day I go out and practice and think about that. It keeps me focused and working hard. I know at any time there are kids out there who can take my place.

"I'm just trying to enjoy my time going from no experience at all to playing pro soccer. It's been a mental adjustment playing with these guys, knowing this is what they do (full time for a living)."

Dean's road to the professional ranks began at Union High School. After becoming an all-state performer playing on "the best team in the state" as a senior, he traveled to the University of Central Arkansas. Attending the school's preseason camp, he decided the college route wasn't for him.

"My goal was to play professional soccer and in college I felt like the players were so young, I might as well take the opportunity now to play pro," Dean said. "At first I looked overseas, but then I got in with the Roughnecks and went to their combine. It went well and they invited me to preseason camp last year. I played in a couple of preseason games and they signed me."

Voila! Just like that, Dean is a pro ready to follow his dream. However, finding his niche with the Roughnecks has been another journey in itself. Dean played in 14 games last year in the team's disastrous three-win season. In 2019 he started the team's season opener, only to be injured and miss the next couple of outings.

After returning to the lineup, Dean suffered a shin contusion and was sidelined for a month. As of mid-June, he still had not scored his first goal as a Roughneck.

"It's been frustrating, very frustrating watching from the sidelines," said Dean, who played a full 90 minutes for the first time in his career against El Paso on June 15. "I've gone through a lot of rehab and I'm just now getting back to form. I feel good physically, but I'm not 100 percent fit. I don't have any bumps or bruises, but my endurance is still missing."

While Dean awaits the full return of his physical tools, he reflected on his athletic roots and where they could have led him. Soccer was not his first love.

Courtesy Tulsa Roughnecks

HOMEGROWN STAR: D.J. Dean hopes to help lead the Tulsa Roughnecks to a future championship.

"Basketball was the first sport I tried. My dad played college basketball in Wichita," Dean said. "I found out I was too short and it just wasn't my thing. My mom decided to sign me up for youth soccer and right away I knew it was the sport for me. I think my quickness and skill and patience made me a better soccer player than basketball."

Dean played youth soccer for "every single team in Tulsa" and started as a freshman at Union. Ironically, he even played for current Roughnecks coach Mike Nsien on one youth team.

"I think I played well for him, but he doesn't do me any favors now," said Dean. "He makes it 10 times harder for me knowing the potential I have. If you work hard and do what he says, he will reward you. There is nothing more than I can ask of him as a coach. He has grit and works hard and he really cares about the team. He really wants us to win."

There is one more hidden hero who wants Dean and the Roughnecks to triumph. Flor Dean, D.J.'s mother.

"Growing up, she was a single mother raising two kids and going to school. That really motivated me," said Dean, who has up to 20 family members and friends at every Roughnecks home game. "She gave me inspiration by her example that hard work will pay off. She supported me in whatever I was doing and missed only one game my whole life. If I ever hit it big, the first thing I'm going to do is make sure she is set for life."

Dean wants to pay it forward as an example for Tulsa Soccer Club players. He wants to show them that it's possible to become a professional soccer player. "You're only one step away."

In the meantime, the 5-foot-9 winger hopes to propel Tulsa into the USL playoffs this year. The 2018 campaign led to the coaching staff's firing during the season. Nsien took charge, leading the Roughnecks to all three of their season victories.

"The team didn't mesh together well and it didn't play the style the coach wanted," said Dean, the only 2018 player retained by the Roughnecks this year. "In our meetings before this season he (Nsien) said I had a lot of potential and he wanted to bring me back and that's a good feeling. I have the potential to play in a bigger league and every kid wants that. It's a dream to play for the national team and in the World Cup."

Dean's chance at international stardom begins in Tulsa and leading the Roughnecks to USL success could be the catalyst.

"We've got a lot of work to do. We've got to have the guts and the heart," said Dean, who lists Ronaldinho as his hero. "I think we have a productive team that passes well and we're very smart, but our attitude has to change. We were too comfortable by winning so much early in the season. We've slowed a little bit."

"My goals this year are to score a lot of goals, help the team win and make a name for myself. I want to put Tulsa on the map."

One thing is certain. Dean, Tulsa's homegrown star, knows how lucky he is to have the chance.

Metro Christian Girls Repeat as 4A Tennis Champs

Four Patriot Players Won Individual Titles

By MIKE MOGUIN
GTR Sports Writer

Metro Christian repeated as state champions in girls' tennis when it won the Class 4A meet in Oklahoma City.

The Lady Patriots finished with 33 points. Another Tulsa area private school, Regent Prep, was second with 22. Four Metro players won individual titles.

Sophomore Lauren Michalcik won the No. 1 singles championship with a 7-5, 6-3 win against Beth Bayless of Regent Prep. Freshman Grace Deinger was victorious in the No. 2 singles final, 6-2, 6-1, against Taryn Clark of Christian Heritage, and sisters Hallie and Lauren Sutton, senior and sophomore, respectively, finished as the No. 2 doubles champions by winning over Aubrey Colombe and Treity Miller of Byng, 5-7, 6-4, 6-4.

Sophomore Emma McNeese and junior Arden Row contributed to the cause, placing third in No. 1 doubles.

"I love playing with my team and I was so proud of all of them, that we won again," Michalcik said.

"It's really cool," Deninger said. Michalcik and Deninger swept through their sets en route to their titles.

However, the Sutton sisters were dealt with adversity when they dropped their first set before rallying to win the next two.

"We had to reset and we did a lot better," Lauren Sutton said.

"There was a lot of mental distractions because we were both really nervous and worked up," said Hallie Sutton, who played later at the All-State games. "We both had to sit back and play the best we can."

That they did and out came the victories.

"It's really awesome, because we're so close," Lauren Sutton said.

"When you win with your sister, it is something special and I will always have it as a memory to tell in going forward," Hallie Sutton said. "It is something I'll never forget."

When Hallie Sutton plays at All-State, she will be wrapping up her tennis career as she prepares for college at Oklahoma State.

"I'll definitely remember the people and especially how challenging it was to get this last state (title)," Hallie Sutton said. "It was fun for all of us."

This marks Metro's fourth state championship in girls tennis. In addition to capturing the title last year, it won championships in 2012 and 2013. Having also won last year, Metro has captured state both years in Emily Points' tenure as coach. A few of the girls believe the program is on the verge of becoming something special.

"I love being part of a team," Michalcik said. "I love that I have the opportunity to play with all of them here and I definitely think it is growing."

"I think in the past couple of years, we've had more people come into the program that actually care about tennis," Row said. "Not just as an extracurricular activity, but people who actually put in time and effort, and I think that's still continuing."

"Everybody puts in a lot of time playing tennis. They don't limit it to just school," McNeese said. "They'll play at tennis clubs and put in a lot of effort multiple times per week."

Metro will try to win a third consecutive title next spring. But it will be harder since it will be moving up to Class 5A, where Tulsa's Bishop Kelley won this year.

"It will be more challenging, but at least we have some good players coming up," Lauren Sutton said.

"I think we can (compete in 5A)," Roe said. "We just have to work on our mental games and let (foes) know we're not defeated."

"I'll just practice hard through the summer until next year," Michalcik said. "So it will be tougher competition and a lot more challenging."

Area Private School Athletics – Quick Hits

Bishop Kelley won the tennis state championships in Class 5A. The girls won their title with 33 points, pacing ahead of runner-up Cascia Hall by 27 points. Top-seeded sisters Reagan, senior and ORU signee, and sophomore Kate Miley respectively won the No. 1 and No. 2 singles championships. Sophomore Aubrey Bailey and junior Bailey Wollmershauser captured the No. 2 doubles title. On the boys' side, the Comets shared the title with Oklahoma City Heritage Hall as each school finished with 27 points. The No. 2-seeded team of seniors Matthew Gawey and Zac Vaughn repeated as No. 2 doubles champion.

Kelley also won state in Class 5A boys soccer, as it blanked OKC Northeast Classen in the title game. Sophomore Cooper

Kelley also had a pair of individual state champions in girls track and field. Seniors Tess Crosley and Sadie Boos respectively won the 3,200-meter run (11:59.24) and the shot put (42-11½) in mid-May at the Class 5A meet in Moore.

Junior Nate Gibson won the

1,600-meter run for Lincoln Christian in the Class 4A meet in Catoosa. He ran a time of 4:27.09.

Holland Hall had two champions in track at the Class 3A meet. Junior Carrington Jackson-Jones won the girls' 100-meter run with a time of 12.25 and junior Jake Martens won the boys' 400-meter run with a time of 49.75.

Tulsa Tough Continues to Receive National Attention

Editor's Note: Much of the information in this article is courtesy of Wikipedia

Saint Francis Tulsa Tough Ride and Race again was a successful event in June. The three-day festival features non-competitive riding through scenic areas around the Tulsa metropolitan area and professional level races. It is held each year on Friday, Saturday and Sunday of the second weekend in June.

Saint Francis Tulsa Tough attracts professional and amateur racers from across the country racing criterium style races on three different venues in the streets of Downtown Tulsa and along the Arkansas River. Prize money rivals the largest purses in the nation. The quality of the venues and the top level race operation already has professional teams making Tulsa an important stop on their annual racing schedules.

In 2008, Tulsa Tough's women's pro races were selected by U.S.A. Cycling to be on the prestigious National Racing Calendar. Based on voting by racers, race officials, and announcers, Tulsa Tough was ranked in the top 10 out of 30 NRC races in only its third year. With this proven success, the men's and women's races were again on the National Racing Calendar for 2019 and after the event were ranked in the top four among all NRC events. Top professional cycling teams plan their domestic racing schedules around NRC events, assuring a high level of national attention on the hosting events.

Saint Francis Tulsa Tough offers two days of tour rides with 50 km, 100 km, 200 km, and 100 mi options each day covering nearly 400 miles of Northeast Oklahoma hills and scenery. All routes feature aid stations and rolling support for riders of all sizes and abilities. The tour rides are expected to grow to well over 5,000 riders as cycling enthusiasts discover the challenging, epic riding available in Oklahoma's Green Country.

Saint Francis Tulsa Tough has received national attention from major cycling publications and continues to be a topic on cycling forums and in the media.

It is jointly promoted by the Tulsa Sports Commission and Tulsa Wheelmen and is supported by corporate sponsorship. Guidance for the event comes from an executive committee made up of several Tulsa area cyclists and business people.

Besides the cycling, there are many fun events for everyone during Tulsa Tough, including kids rides, fun rides and serious criterium racing on the streets of downtown and along the Arkansas River.

Cry Baby Hill, the last part of the grueling River Parks Criterium race, serves as the annual finale of the race. There, Tulsans line the hill to cheer contestants on, chug beers and parade around in costumes. Although the event began organically, it has grown to become one of the largest parties and social events in the city. Regardless of age or preference, Tulsa Tough is a great experience for everyone.

Original Home Federal Building Has Staying Power

52-Year-Old Structure Being Remodeled

When I was a young architect, I met and worked (through a mutual non-profit volunteer organization) with a remarkable woman, Phyllis Edmonds.

She had recently retired from a long career with Home Federal Savings & Loan (later to become Sooner Federal) where she was one of the first women to break the glass ceiling of upper management to become head of marketing.

One of her most successful projects was the creation of a new company headquarters building at the corner of Fourth Street and Boston Avenue.

Home Federal was founded in 1920 and grew to be one of the largest savings and loan businesses in Oklahoma with more than 28 branches throughout the eastern portion of the state, some of which were designed by my architectural firm.

In 1965, the company purchased the site of the former Pioneer Telephone Building and retained the architectural firm of McCune, McCune and Associates to design the new Home Federal Savings & Loan Building. The project was completed in 1967.

This building was a handsome 12-story glass curtain wall structure presumed to have been inspired by the Ludwig Mies Vander Rohe's famous 1958 New York Seagram Building on Park Avenue in Manhattan. The McCune brothers (sons of Malcolm McCune who designed Utica Square) had recently designed a major children's wing addition to the Boston Avenue Church, the Shell Building, John Knox Presbyterian Church and had been heavily involved in the design of Tulsa's new Civic Center.

The simplicity of the Home Federal building is striking. Even more so is its color. Its skin was originally bronze aluminum with dark gray glazing and dark gray polished concrete aggregate at its south end. Age and weathering have given the aluminum and concrete exterior a pleasing bronze green color, which boldly contrasts with buildings nearby.

The restroom and elevator core of this structure was placed at its southern end, unlike the typical center core design of most high-rises. At the exterior, it appears as a separate element, which can be identified by its unbroken wrap of concrete. Beyond this element are five bays of slender aluminum faced columns at the east and west elevations and three bays at the north elevation. Within each bay is a pair of single glazed curtain wall glass panels with bronze colored spandrels. The exterior columns create a strong vertical appearance.

There is no penthouse apartment at the top of this building. Rather there is a VIP conference boardroom suite with a pegged oak plank floor, a large fireplace with a brass and copper hood and 18 foot high walnut wall panels.

Sadly, Home Federal is no more. After the name change to Sooner Federal, in the 1990's the company was taken over by BOK and 4th Finance of Wichita, Kansas. BOK acquired 19 Sooner branches and 4th acquired the other nine. The headquarters building was finally purchased by a development company owned by the Hawkins family. For many years it had a commercial office occupancy. Today the interior is being remodeled to create a 103-unit hotel to be called Hyatt Place.

Lobeck Taylor Family Foundation Announces Shops at Mother Road Market Development

The Lobeck Taylor Family Foundation announced a new development. Shops at Mother Road Market, located on the southwest corner of 11th Street and Lewis Avenue, will feature five retail spaces that will be filled by a mix of new and established local retail concepts.

Shops at Mother Road Market will offer customers an extended shopping experience in addition to the current retail options inside Mother Road Market, including The Nest, Mythic Press, Decopolis and the Kitchen 66 General Store.

Shop spaces available will range from approximately 575 square feet to 1,500 square feet. Shops at Mother Road Market will also add approximately 32 parking spaces, as well as an additional outdoor patio on the south side of the development. The new development is estimated to open in spring of 2020.

“Through review platforms, social media feedback and personal feedback our team has received, we have recognized that our customer base is interested in additional retail in this area,” said LTFF CEO and President Elizabeth Frame Ellison.

While two of the five spaces for lease will be held for established retail businesses, the remaining three spaces will be filled with startup ventures.

The leasing process for those three spaces will follow a competition format that includes filling out an application, demonstrating proof of concept with a pop-up opportunity at The Vault inside Mother Road Market, taking advantage of partner organization programming, and more.

“The Shops leasing competition gives us the opportunity to utilize LTFF’s pipeline of entrepreneurial programming and tie those resources together to launch startup retailers,” said Ellison. “We’re able to offer three competition winners a comprehensive package that features subsidized rent, as well as additional startup resources from complementary programs like Kiva Tulsa and 36 Degrees North.”

The new tenants will be announced in conjunction with the one-year anniversary of Mother Road Market in November. For details on the competition and property renderings, visit www.motherroadmarket.com/shops.

“We envision restoring the vibrancy and innovation to Route 66 in Tulsa, and now with Mother Road Market and Shops at Mother Road Market anchoring those efforts, we feel confident the Route 66 corridor is moving quickly in that direction,” said Ellison.

2019 Parade of Homes Another Success

The 2019 Greater Tulsa Parade of Homes, held June 15-23, was a perfect opportunity to discover all that Tulsa area homes have to offer.

Visitors viewed the latest trends and spoke directly to the area’s top builders, all during this unique, free event that showcased the best in new home building.

During the Parade of Homes, over 150 new homes ranging in price from $150,000 to more than $1 million were open.

The annual event is presented by the Home Builders Association of Greater Tulsa and sponsored by Samsung Chef Collection and Pella of Oklahoma. Homes were spread throughout nine different cities in the Tulsa region, from Glenpool to Claremore.

More than 60 local building companies participated in the event, which provides buyers the largest and broadest showcase of new homes and building trends. Buyers explored hundreds of floor plans and viewed the latest innovations in everything from technology to energy efficiency and home decorating ideas. In addition, all featured builders are members of the Home Builders Association of Greater Tulsa, meaning they are experienced, insured, ethical professionals, organizers said.

In addition to homes, the event also highlighted six communities which showcase the trends in Greater Tulsa amenities. The Grand Plans for this year’s event were Stone Canyon and Yorktown. The Regal Plans for this year were Forest Ridge and Winchester Park. For information about this year’s Parade of Homes, see www.tulsahba.com.

Tulsa Regional Chamber Volunteers Raise $3.1 Million During 25th Resource Campaign

The Tulsa Regional Chamber's annual Resource Campaign concluded recently, raising a total of $3,179,039. During the course of the 10-week campaign, 55 volunteers sold sponsorships to 302 member companies for the Chamber's programs, events, services and publications.

This year marks 25 years of the campaign, which has raised more than $55 million since its inception in 1995. Campaign revenue makes up nearly 25 percent of the Chamber's annual budget.

"The Resource Campaign is one of the primary ways Chamber members invest in regional economic prosperity," said 2019 Chamber Chair David Stratton, executive vice president of Tulsa corporate banking for BOK Financial. "Funds raised from the campaign enable the Chamber to affect the trajectory of northeast Oklahoma. From partnerships with the public sector on transformative investments like Vision Tulsa and ONEOK Field, to regional collaboration on economic development and legislative advocacy, the impact of the Tulsa-area business community throughout the last quarter of a century is truly remarkable."

The campaign funds the Chamber's member services and programming within its four strategic initiatives: economic development, regional tourism, government affairs and community development. Campaign revenue also supports the contributions the Chamber makes to its regional economic development partnership, Tulsa's Future; and the convention and visitors bureau housed at the ChamberVisitTulsa.

Mark Poole, president and COO at First National Bank and Trust of Broken Arrow, led this year's campaign.

"A lot has changed in Tulsa during the last 25 years, but one thing has remained an absolute constant: the commitment and dedication of our campaign volunteers," said Poole. "The success of this campaign is a direct reflection of their commitment. From our humble beginnings raising $106,000 in 1995 to surpassing $3 million in 2019, I'm honored to be part of this campaign's history."

Thirty-year Chamber employee Karen Humphrey has managed the campaign since its inception. As campaign executive director, Humphrey coordinates and directs the efforts of campaign volunteers, Chamber leadership and staff each year.

The event was held at the Tulsa Club Hotel June 13. years of the Resource Campaign without Karen Humphrey," said Mike Neal, president and CEO of the Tulsa Regional Chamber. "She is highly regarded within the chamber industry, as evidenced by the respect she commands among peer chambers and her 2015 induction into the Oklahoma Chamber of Commerce Executives Hall of Fame. Raising $3 million in one year is a significant achievement; raising $55 million during the course of a career is unrivaled. Karen is incredibly special to our organization, and we're thrilled to celebrate her and her impact this year."

The Tulsa Regional Chamber's Resource Campaign is considered a model program by chamber peers and continues to be one of the largest campaigns of its kind in the nation.

Liquefied Natural Gas is the Global Transformation

Liquefied natural gas (LNG) is fast evolving in international markets. Natural gas, an abundant source of clean energy, has long been considered as an energy option. Oklahoma, from Tulsa to Elk City, will greatly benefit from the LNG international markets. In particular, Russia has dominated the natural gas market, especially in Eastern Europe, for quite some time. Recently, the U.S. has made inroads into the LNG market through its efforts with Poland.

According to Tom DiChristopher, "Poland took another step toward weaning itself off Russian energy supplies in June by signing a 20-year agreement with San Diego-based Sempra Energy to import U.S. liquefied natural gas. The signing marks the third long-term contract the state-controlled Polish Oil and Gas Company, or PGNiG, has inked with an American LNG company this year. In the coming years, Warsaw plans to replace Russian gas with pipeline supplies from Norway and shipments of LNG, or gas super-chilled to liquid form for transport by sea."

In my book, America Needs America's Energy: Creating Together the People's Energy Plan, I emphasize the importance of LNG. In 2012 at the International Energy Policy Conference, which I chaired, Bob Tippee noted: "Always a ravenous importer of oil, the United States was supposed to import a growing amount of methane in the form of LNG. Then, surprise! The country became able to produce all the natural gas it needs, and more.

By MARK A. STANSBERRY

The gas occurs in low-permeability rock strata, especially shales, that hadn't produced much before. Until very recently, no one knew how to make it happen. Now companies are drilling horizontal wells and, in effect, manufacturing the permeability that nature didn't provide with hydraulic fracturing. Suddenly, huge new volumes of natural gas have appeared in pipelines and, more importantly, on the development horizon."

As I have stated, "Natural gas, especially Liquefied Natural Gas (LNG), appears to be one of the key areas of dialogue. Natural gas is leading the transition from being a net importer to a net exporter primarily due to the LNG efforts in the Gulf Coast region. The Sabine Pass operation, operated by Cheniere Energy, has shipped over 175 cargoes to some 25 nations. According to an article in the American Oil and Gas Reporter, "Since U.S. LNG export terminals are contracted with LNG buyers under long term (typically 20-year) purchased agreements, LNG exports represent a stable and growing new demand for domestic natural gas supplies." And the article goes on to state, "In aggregate, the first wave of U.S. LNG export terminals coming on line during the next couple of years is expected to have a total operational capacity of 9.5 Bcf/d."

Among other companies involved in U.S. terminal LNG planning are Dominion Energy, Pacific Summit Energy, Kinder Morgan, GAIL Global, Sempra Energy and Freeport LNG.

"Future generations are depending on us to keep the American dream alive. Energy is the future of America, and America, and the world, needs America's energy and know-how!"

Christy Craig Thames Joins Retrospec Films

By NANCY HERMANN
Variety Editor

Retrospec Films, Oklahoma's largest production studio and Tulsa-based film company, has named Christy Craig Thames as director of client relations. Operating from an expansive 12,000-square-foot facility in Tulsa, Retrospec has grown into a nationally known multi-faceted film company. The addition of Thames to the current staff is another step in expanding Retrospec's client-centered expertise and services.

CHRISTY CRAIG THAMES

"Relationships are everything in this business," emphasizes Retrospec Owner and Director Jason Burks. "As we grow, we need someone who knows business and scalability — someone who is genuine and engaging. Added to that, Christy's strong appreciation and understanding of the arts and the Tulsa community is a big win."

Thames and her husband, Dustin, are longtime advocates and patrons of the arts. She serves several local non-profits, including Tulsa Symphony's board of directors, the Tulsa Foundation of Architecture's board of trustees, and the advisory board for Harmony Project Tulsa.

With advanced degrees in biochemistry and chemistry from the University of Tulsa, Thames has served in leadership roles that include founding her own biotech company in 2009, leading strategy and business development initiatives for a large international oil and gas firm as well as overseeing brand and public relations for locally owned businesses. Her experience includes the creation and spearheading of marketing, customer and public relations plans and E-Commerce.

Founded by Burks in 2001 and specializing in unique adventure cinematography services, Retrospec has filmed in seven countries and in all 50 states. The company excels in both photography and video. "We tell stories the way they should be told and let our work speak for our passion," says Burks. His team competes with other national film companies in providing pre-production planning, location scouting, talent acquisition, and storyboard and scripting, along with complete film production, post-production and editing. Retrospec also employs a team dedicated to social media content creation and management.

"Creating business and operation strategies that maximize shareholder value and interests are key ways I have helped companies," says Thames. "Developing a company's cultural enrichment through increased civic and community engagement is another important component in the overall success of a company," she adds.

Thames says, "Retrospec Films is transforming the way businesses, products, and organizations share their stories. For me everything begins with establishing a strong understanding of a client's business. That pulse leads to an organic creative strategy where my team and I can share a company's story in a profoundly impactful way for both business and the company culture."

For me everything begins with establishing a strong understanding of a client's business. That pulse leads to an organic creative strategy where my team and I can share a company's story in a profoundly impactful way for both business and the company culture."

"For us to have someone on our team who our clients can rely on and trust to help make decisions keeps us forward-moving in positioning our clients as industry leaders. And Christy can assist in thinking outside the box on their behalf," says Burks. "Plus, everyone loves being around her. She will be our clients' and our best cheerleader."

BUSINESS & PEOPLE NOTES

AVB Bank announces that board member Neely Kimbrough was inducted into the 50-Year Club during a special awards brunch at the Oklahoma Bankers Association's 2019 Annual Convention & Trade Show. This honor acknowledged more than five decades of Kimbrough's service to the banking industry.

KIMBROUGH

Kimbrough began his banking career with Arkansas Valley State Bank (AVSB) in 1962 as a lender. Named president in 1966, Kimbrough then assumed the position of chief executive officer in 1984. He served as chairman of the board for 10 years, from 1990 – 2000. Retiring from AVSB in 2000, Kimbrough remained on AVSB's board of directors. AVSB's name was rebranded in 2008 to AVB, and Kimbrough now serves as an AVB board member.

Kimbrough stated, "Banking is a people business, and trust is essential in building a relationship. I have loved every minute of it!"

Founded in Broken Arrow in 1905, AVB Bank is currently in the fifth generation of family management and sixth generation of family ownership.

Taylor Rider has joined the Sparks Reed Architecture and Interiors staff as an intern.

RIDER

"We are very happy to have Taylor join our team this summer," said David Reed, principal of the Tulsa firm. "He has a great attitude and is eager to learn. He is already a productive part of the team."

With its sports architecture expertise, Sparks Reed provided the 22-year-old Oklahoma State University student a chance to delve into his favorite fields: athletics and commercial design.

"I really enjoy the computer side of design," said Rider, who also uses pen and ink on occasion. "I think computers open up a lot of power, speeding up the design process while allowing you to go into more detail."

His initial work for Sparks Reed surprised Rider in many ways.

"As a kid, I loved playing with Legos and Lincoln logs," he said. "From that, I became interested in floor plans and design. I like being able to express creativity this way."

"But I didn't realize how complicated a process it was – and how long a process it was – until this internship," said Rider, who intends to graduate from OSU's School of Architecture in December. "I got a taste of it in college, but this job taught me how diverse a job this is."

Sparks Reed Architecture and Interiors was founded in 2011 by principals David Reed, Gary Sparks and Jill Selman. To learn more about the firm and its past projects, visit sparksreed.com or call David Reed at 918-884-6007.

"I feel very blessed to be here," said Rider, noting his tutelage under Sparks Reed principal David Reed and intern architect Bryan Broadrick. "David and Bryan have been very open to letting me fail, and that's helped me gain experience. They've put a lot of trust in what I'm doing. That's been nice, being turned loose. A little scary, too, but nice."

Mayor G.T. Bynum announced that Becky Gligo will serve as the Housing Policy Director for the City of Tulsa.

GLIGO

Gligo will be responsible for working with city and state housing agencies, non-profit entities, philanthropic organizations and developers to achieve key outcomes of neighborhood revitalization and affordable housing preservation and development. Gligo will also identify and implement local and state policy changes that will help reduce Tulsa's rate of evictions while developing and implementing affordable incentives to help increase the safety, health, affordability and preservation of existing housing in Tulsa.

"With her long-standing commitment to improving people's lives in the areas of housing and education, Becky will fill an integral role at the City of Tulsa through a focus on housing," Mayor G.T. Bynum said. "I am very grateful for the Anne and Henry Zarrow Foundation's partnership in addressing this need in our community."

Prior to the City of Tulsa, Gligo served as the director of portfolio management for Tulsa Public Schools where she monitored seven charter schools and Oklahoma's first partnership school. In this role, she also served as the Tulsa Public Schools liaison to the Tulsa Housing Authority and Urban Strategies, Inc. for the Choice Neighborhoods Initiative.

"I am honored to have the opportunity to join the City of Tulsa's efforts to ensure that all Tulsans have access to stable and sound housing opportunities," said Gligo. "I look forward to working collaboratively with all stakeholders to protect and expand affordable housing across our city."

The City of Broken Arrow has announced Matt Hendren as Parks and Recreation Director.

HENDREN

"I am honored to be chosen to lead the Broken Arrow Parks and Recreation Department into an exciting future," Hendren said.

Hendren joins the city from Norman, where he has served as parks superintendent since 2015. Prior to that, he worked for Wyandotte County, Kan., as well as for golf courses in the Kansas City area.

"I am excited to have Matt join our leadership team," said City Manager Michael Spurgeon. "The energy and experience he will bring to the Parks and Recreation Department will be a vital addition to the organization."

Hendren is a Certified Parks and Recreation Professional, Certified Aquatic Facility Operator, a graduate of the National Recreation and Park Association (NRPA) Directors School, and a trustee for the Oklahoma Recreation and Parks Society Board of Directors. He will be in charge of 41 parks and 800 acres of public space.

SMITH

Smith was selected from a large pool of applicants to participate in the academy, which consisted of six one-day sessions from October 2018 to March 2019. Each session centered on developing leadership and management skills by using creative instruction techniques and active participation.

The OBA represents approximately 200 banks across the state and serves as the primary advocate for the banking industry. It's also heavily involved in continuing education for bankers, fraud training and prevention as well as legal and compliance services and communications for its member banks.

The Jenks Chamber of Commerce has announced the addition of Lane Castleberry to its staff to serve as director of communications.

CASTLEBERRY

Castleberry previously served as web content and social media coordinator for Oklahoma Baptist University from 2012 to May 2019. He graduated from OBU with a degree in news and information in 2011.

Castleberry will be responsible for all public relations, design and creative efforts to maintain the Chamber brand. He will regularly communicate with current and prospective Chamber members, members of the public and the media. Castleberry will plan, promote and enhance programs that achieve the Chamber's mission and goals.

Eager to start working, Castleberry said he looks forward to getting more acquainted with the Jenks community.

"Jenks is a beautiful city with a vibrant community, and I very much look forward to interacting with the people who make Jenks great," he said.

President and CEO of the Chamber Josh Driskell is glad to welcome Castleberry to the Chamber staff.

"We look forward to working with Lane," Driskell said. "His skill set will be a benefit to both the organization and to our members."

When not working at the Chamber, Castleberry said he enjoys spending time with his fiancée, Codi, playing board games and writing music.

For questions about the Chamber, or to welcome Lane to the team, email lane.castleberry@jenkschamber.com or call 918-299-5005.

SUCCESSFUL FUNDRAISER: Tina Commodore, News Director for Fox 23 and KRMG, presents Northeast Oklahoma Board Chair Shiela Haynes with a check for $121,922 at the Volunteer Appreciation event in Northeast Oklahoma Monday evening. On Thursday, May 30, in response to the devastating tornadoes and flooding in northeastern Oklahoma counties, the Cox Media Group, (CMG) held a bucket brigade fundraiser for the American Red Cross of Oklahoma and helped to raise $127,000 that was earmarked for recovery efforts. The storms that moved through the Tulsa area in the latter part of May this year caused devastating damage and left numerous people temporarily homeless. The Red Cross immediately deployed volunteers and workers to assist the residents of the area, and CMG responded with great speed to help provide funds to the Red Cross. For more information, or to make an appointment to donate blood, visit RedCrossBlood.org or call 1-800-RED CROSS (1-800-733-2767).

Governor Stitt and Mayors Bynum, Guthrie and Lee Request Corps Expedite Feasibility Study on Levees

Oklahoma City, (July 8, 2019) — Governor Kevin Stitt, Mayor G.T. Bynum (Tulsa), Mayor Brian Guthrie (Bixby) and Mayor Robert Lee (Jenks) sent a letter to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers requesting the feasibility study on the Tulsa-West Tulsa Levee System be expedited and completed by December 2019.

The feasibility study is needed for further improvements and upgrades to be implemented to the levee system, which provided protection to tens of thousands of Oklahomans during the recent major flooding events in Oklahoma.

The letter follows:
Assistant Secretary James and

Lt. Gen. Todd Semonite: Throughout the months of April and May, the state of Oklahoma underwent devastating severe weather and flooding events. As a result of these conditions, state government declared a state of emergency for all 77 counties in Oklahoma, and the Trump administration was quick to respond both in its FEMA approvals as well as on the ground support from the Corps and a visit from the Vice President of the United States. Oklahoma greatly appreciates this administration's proactive and close coordination during the events and your ongoing support as residents undergo a long road to recovery.

We specifically want to draw your attention to the historic flooding experienced in eastern Oklahoma. This area was fortunate that the Tulsa-West Tulsa Levee System held back water for weeks, compared to the last major flooding event in 1986 that lasted less than a day. If these 75-year-old levees had been breached, the damage would have been catastrophic to the communities of hard-working Oklahomans protected by the levee system.

The 2018 Water Resources Development Act instructed your agency to conduct a Feasibility Study on our nation's levees, for completion by September 2020. Oklahomans simply cannot wait that long. In 2008, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers rated the Tulsa-West Tulsa Levees as "un-acceptable". Based on your own assessment, it is clear you, too, recognize the urgency for modernization and upgrades.

We are writing to request the Army Corps of Engineers to expedite the Feasibility Study for completion in December 2019. This will allow for much needed upgrades to be addressed before the close of the 116th Congress. Any deadline past December runs the risk of delaying the rebuilding and recovery process several years for this vital infrastructure.

The Tulsa-West Tulsa Levees provided protection to tens of thousands of Oklahomans, spanning from as north as Skiatook to as far south as Muskogee and Webbers Falls. These levees also protected $2 billion in infrastructure and two major oil refineries, both of which provide gasoline to a large section of the mid-continental United States. The risks are too high for this not to be resolved soon, but there is a clear solution and path forward for expediting upgrades if the Corps will finalize this important report by the end of this year.

Sincerely,
J. Kevin Stitt, Governor of Oklahoma
G.T. Bynum, Mayor of Tulsa
Brian Guthrie, Mayor of Bixby
Robert Lee, Mayor of Jenks

Red Cross Needs Blood

Following a difficult Fourth of July week for blood and platelet donations and ongoing challenges finding new blood donors, the American Red Cross now faces a blood shortage and has issued an emergency call for eligible individuals of all blood types to give now and prevent delays in medical care.

Bixby residents can donate at the Utica Park Clinic Bixby, 12620 S. Memorial Drive.

About 450 fewer blood drives were organized by businesses and other community groups last week than during a typical week as people across the country celebrated the holiday with activities and travel. This led to about 17,000 fewer blood donations than needed for patients in a single week, causing the Red Cross to now have less than a three-day supply of most blood types available — and less than a two-day supply of type O blood — for patients. At least a five-day supply is desired.

"Medical emergencies and critical treatments don't stop for holiday celebrations. Patients depend on lifesaving blood transfusions every day," said Cliff Numark, senior vice president, Red Cross Blood Services. "Right now, the Red Cross only has less than a three-day supply when we need a five-day supply to be prepared for all situations that require blood products. To help meet this need, we've added about 8,000 additional appointments at blood donation centers and community blood drives over the next few weeks to accommodate more donors. But we need people to fill those appointments, please join us today."
