Take the Kids Fishing

By Dana Snyder, Outdoor Education Manager

Fishing is a great family activity that can include several generations enjoying this lifetime hobby together. Lake Metroparks offers several well-stocked ponds with easy access for all ages and abilities.

Young children aren't always ready for a long day of fishing, so be ready to be flexible. When you take a child fishing, make it simple. Use a smaller pole, with a closed-face reel and a simple hook and bobber. Basic live baits such as worms or maggots will offer the best chance for success. Worms can be purchased at any bait store, or make hunting worms part of your adventure. Find an open area at one of our ponds, free of surrounding trees and top water weeds to teach your child the basics of casting. Don't worry if your child doesn't have enough patience to sit for long periods of time, allow them to reel and cast again if they wish. Children much prefer catching to fishing, so target easy-to-catch species such as the panfish stocked at several of our ponds. Don't forget snacks and drinks to keep your child comfortable and enjoying their time outdoors. Fish early morning or early evening, when the weather is cooler and the fish are more active. Don't expect a child to sit quietly for several hours—if the fish aren't biting, allow them to explore some of the nature around them. Talk to them about the importance of conservation. Teach them pack in, pack out. Consider cleaning up the litter at your local fishing hole. This is an ideal time to talk with your child about the wonders of being outdoors. Be sure to check local rules and regulations before you head out. Fishing offers a great opportunity to make lifetime family memories.

While fishing with your child on your own is great, Lake Metroparks also offers many beginner fishing programs to get you started. Go Fish is a favorite for many first-time anglers and is offered throughout the year. We also offer adapted fishing programs to assist participants of all abilities. We're happy to help you get started!

For information about fishing and upcoming fishing programs at Lake Metroparks visit gotolakemetroparks.com/fishing.

CHECK OUT THESE PONDS FOR FAMILY FISHING FUN:

Concord Woods is a great place to take the family. The pond is stocked and panfish are plentiful. There is a long stretch of open grassy bank area and a small bridge across one end of the pond. Other convenient amenities are the picnic pavilion, playground and bathroom—all within easy access. Add a walking trail around the pond and you have everything necessary for a fun family outing. A fishing license is not required.

Hidden Lake is another family favorite. There are several access areas to the lake, along with a small dock. This lake often offers some nice-sized largemouth bass and crappie. Hand-powered boats such as canoes and kayaks are permitted here and offer another access point to fish. To maintain the fish population here, catch and release only is permitted. A fishing license is not required. If you are looking for several dock areas, try Veterans Park. This is one of the busier fishing areas, offering largemouth bass, catfish and rainbow trout stocked every fall. This park also offers convenient restroom access, a picnic pavilion and a playground. A fishing license is required here for anyone 16 and older.

Other ponds to explore include Girdled Road Reservation, Hidden Valley Park (River Rd. entrance), River Road Park, Penitentiary Glen Reservation and Chapin Forest Reservation. And don't forget you can always try fishing our great Lake Erie from the fishing pier at Painesville Township Park (A fishing license is required on Lake Erie for anyone 16 and older).

For a different, more private fishing experience, consider renting the Strong Cabin at Hogback Ridge Park or the Resource Center at Hidden Valley Park. Renters of the cabins have private access to well-stocked ponds right outside the doors. (gotolakemetroparks.com/cabins)

The Corny Pirate Adventure Corn Maze

Lake Metroparks Farmpark
August 17 through October

Un-Dead Pirates have invaded Lake Erie and made Farmpark their pirate hideout of the north. Your task is to reclaim Farmpark for the animals and locate all the jail keys in the corn maze so we can lock up the pirates.

The Corny Pirate Adventure Corn Maze at Lake Metroparks Farmpark is open 11 am to 4 pm Tuesday through Sunday, weather and field conditions permitting. To check the conditions of the maze follow @LakeMetroparks on Twitter or call 440-256-2122 or 800-366-FARM.

20 Most Important Things To Teach A Child

What does a child need to know before going out into the world? Good question, right? Is it how to cook, manage money or write a resume? Is it how to study for a test, forgive someone, or run a marathon? Well, I guess it could be all of those and probably much more, depending upon who you ask.

Do you remember that movie The Breakfast Club? My kids and I watched that again recently. If you haven't watched it, I recommend it. However, understand it's not a family movie, unless your babies are teens/adults like mine. It's not your run of the mill movie either. I mean it was made in the 80's. (Molly Ringwald, Judd Nelson, Anthony Michael Hall anyone?) It's raw, it's vulgar. But it's kids being themselves, the selves that their parents don't see. I hate it but get it.

We will never know, until our children are grown, what they may have lacked as a child. It's the nature of the beast. But, I will say that there are several things that I will never waiver on or leave to hind sight. I will list them and if you think I've forgotten any, please feel free to chime in via commenting on my blog or messaging me on Instagram (MomGluck3). I'm not perfect by any means, but I do think I have a few things figured out.

In no particular order, these are the MUSTS I believe should be included when raising a child:

1. Accountability
2. Consideration
3. Communication (verbal and written)
4. Patience
5. Service
6. Integrity

7. Good Work Ethic
8. Honesty
9. Compassion
10. Empathy
11. Service
12. Self-Care
13. Respect
14. Self-Control
15. Ability to share views
16. Justice
17. Loyalty
18. Discernment (a healthy bit of skepticism)
19. Budgeting: saving/giving/obtaining good credit without a mound of debt
20. Courage

I do realize that some of these could all be lumped up into one of the following: responsibility, emotional Intelligence and common Sense. However, as I was told when I was in my teens (or by my not so very kind but sometimes supportive stepmother), "Common sense isn't always common". I would have to disagree, however, as she proved her theory herself and I am much older and see things around me clearer. The same thing goes for emotional intelligence. It isn't always something people have or understand. Sad but true. Some don't have any idea what that even means. Responsibility, same thing; if it's not taught, how does a child learn it?

Are these things taught in school? Depends on the teacher; do he/she offer fair treatment amongst students? What does the curriculum provide or lack; depends on the overall beliefs of the school district and institution the child attends. What about peer influence? So many factors go into raising a child the way we see fit, that's why it has to be thought about in advance and shouldn't be left up to chance.

I think that what we teach truly cannot be untaught. It can/will be ignored from time to time, but I'm going to go with all those times my parent friends told me that my kids would be okay because "they had a good foundation". It's true, our kids will falter, we do too. Our kids will make bad choices, as we do also. But what is instilled in us can/will come back we hope. Same for our children. Unless of course, at some point there is an abusive issue, a drug dependency, or a potential disorder within their thinking that we somehow do not or cannot pinpoint. . . most kids will come back to their foundation.

I believe the key to teaching any of these things listed above is to begin teaching kids what you want them to learn when they're very little and then be a role model. Children begin learning some of these 20 as early as they know they have power. . . as little as 8 months old. For self-control, discipline them. For patience, teach and enforce sharing with other children. If you want them to be polite and nonjudgmental, model tolerance and later on in life don't gossip or label people/situations, as they will copy you. If you want them to care about people, pick up the phone when your mother calls or become a volunteer. If you want them to be financially responsible, teach them healthy spending/saving habits. If you want them to abide by the law, follow it yourself and also hold them accountable to doing the same (at home, in school and in the community) . . . and if you mess up, don't panic, just hold yourself to being humble and then point out your error.

When we model the behavior we expect, we'll most likely see that behavior develop in our child. # Is Digital Technology, Friend or Foe? Could it be damaging children's minds?

by Carole Richards

The change in our students over several decades is profound. While we now specialize in learning disabilities, what I see goes far beyond the change in our student population.

Anxiety

Today we see many students with "anxiety" disorders. For example, a seven-year old was described by test results as having "anxiety." Two decades ago we seldom saw any reference to "anxiety" in any of our students. I am convinced that "anxiety" disorders, video game violence, cyberbullying, internet and social media addiction, are interconnected.

Texting and Written Language

Education Week reports that, "as early as 2012, teens between 14 and 17 years old were sending 100 texts a day." It is difficult to have meaningful communication without body language like gestures, facial expressions, and tone of voice.

Teens and young adults use texting sometimes when they are together. Our two granddaughters spent Father's Day texting instead of interacting with the family. Some younger workers insist on using email and texting instead of personal conversations with clients. Business is built by relationships. It is difficult to establish them through technology.

Chromebooks and I-Pads Instead of Textbooks

I enjoy my Kindle, and some technology for reading is needed. However, when students use devices instead of textbooks, it becomes more difficult to organize information. Reading on a device is not like physically leafing through a book. Comparing charts, pictures to text is challenging on a screen. Outlining and preparing for a test may be more problematic.

Our schools have embraced technology with devices for students. Ohio State testing is on-line. It is cheaper to use technology in our schools and for State testing. But, is it the best thing for our children?

Attention and Technology

The number of children and adolescents diagnosed with ADHD increased from 4.4 million in 2003 to 6.1 million in 2016. Is our children's addiction to cellphones or extreme use of technology a source of the increase?

Jane Healy, PhD has spoken for years about the effects of technology and television on our children's brains. Currently on www.KidsIntheHouse.com she says, "The best uses of technology are going to be those that encourage the child to use his or her own brain to solve problems rather than following someone else's script." She says if the child's brain is not the most important part of the interaction, throw out the program.

Memorization

I find more and more students with working memory issues. Because we can Google, and search the web, are we not using our brains to memorize any longer? Most schools have eliminated math fact memorization. Recently, a smart 13-year-old with no disability could not even multiply without a calculator. Could eliminating memorization be also changing our children's brain cognition?

So what is the answer? I know technology is here to stay. It is also advancing at a pace that many people, including me, cannot keep up. If I were a parent today, I would limit my child's onscreen time, and not use technology as a babysitter. I would encourage my child to run, jump, play and imagine. If your child can see beyond the little screen to our amazing world, it's a start.

Best of the Bluffs: Monarch Migration

Sunday, August 18 • 1 to 4 pm

Lake Erie Bluffs – Lane Road entrance • FREE • Registration required

Discover the Best of the Bluffs at a free event 1 to 4 pm on Sunday, August 18 at Lake Erie Bluffs. This year's event highlights the incredible life cycle and journey of our beloved monarchs. Visit informational booths and activity stations or talk with Blackbrook Audubon Society—one of our conservation partners. There will be live monarch caterpillars to view and you can join us on an expedition to search for adult monarchs. Trail carts tours of the park will be ongoing during the event, or participants can take self-guided interpretive hikes. Visit a naturalist at the 50-foot observation tower, followed by a climb to the top to take in the incredible view of everything this wonderful park has to offer.

Offering nearly 600 acres of natural area on the southern shores of Lake Erie sits one of Lake Metroparks' most cherished parks: Lake Erie Bluffs. The diverse array of habitats are a boon to wildlife, with species breeding, wintering, or using it to rest and refuel during migration. One of the species that uses Lake Erie Bluffs as an important breeding and migration habitat is the monarch butterfly. This familiar species will migrate as many as 2,000 miles to their wintering ground in Mexico. Those butterflies migrating from Canada rest and feed from flowers at Lake Erie Bluffs before continuing south. The park also has lots of milkweeds, which is the only type of plants monarch caterpillars eat, making Lake Erie Bluffs important breeding habitat, too.

Between forests, fields and wetlands, the park offers abundant and diverse habitats for wildlife including deer, coyotes, cottontails, bald eagles, an array of songbirds, snakes and pollinating insects. With three miles of trail, a 50-foot observation tower, picnic shelter, and multiple points of beach access, there is plenty for you to explore.

Best of the Bluffs offers something for everyone! Some of the activities will include:

Nature-themed and butterfly gardening information booths and activities

Self-guided walks to the meadow to net butterflies with a naturalist

Trail cart tours offer visitors a closer look at what makes the park unique

Lake Erie Bluffs is located at Lane Rd. in Perry Township (44081).

The program is free. Participants are required to pre-register. For more information and to register, follow go to lakemetroparks.com/bestofbluffs or call 440-358-7275.
