Tulsa County Parks Offer Excellent Recreation with Golf, Tennis and More

By RON PETERS
Tulsa County Commissioner

Of the 77 counties in Oklahoma, Tulsa has the only county operated park system in the state. While at times it may be hard to distinguish a city park from a county park, generally county parks are designed and operated to be multipurpose with numerous activities offered for all ages which draws millions of people every year.

When the county park system first began, citizens of Tulsa County were very fortunate to have two Tulsa families step forward to donate land to be used exclusively for park purposes. It was the hopes of the LaFortune and Chandler families that these dedicated parks would make public access easy no matter where you lived in the county. Later, the county added O'Brien and Haikey Creek parks. The goal wasn't to have as many parks as possible but, rather, to have a few very good "super" park facilities offering a wide choice of recreational and healthy activities.

Whether it is Haikey Creek near Broken Arrow and Bixby, O'Brien near Owasso and Collinsville, Chandler near Sand Springs or La Fortune in the heart of Tulsa, everyone is just minutes away from some of the best recreational facilities in the state of Oklahoma.

Under the steady professional leadership for almost 40 years by Parks Director Richard Bales, the county park system provides a wide choice of outstanding recreational and healthy opportunities that can't be found anywhere else in Oklahoma. Collaborating with Richard is the Citizens Advisory Board lead by some of Tulsa County's finest citizens.

Whether it's tennis, golf, running and walking trails, ball fields, soccer fields, swimming, community or recreation centers, the parks department staff is always taking care of these important public assets and promoting healthy programming in both natural and developed environments.

Many consider LaFortune Park the crown jewel of the county park system. No other park in Oklahoma provides the high quality facilities and grounds like LaFortune. The nationally recognized Case Tennis Center now draws tennis players, teams and tournaments from across America with 21-lighted outdoor courts and 3 indoor courts. It's no wonder it was awarded the United States Tennis Association's "Outstanding Featured Facility of the Year" in 2018. The recently completed $3 million renovation of the 18-hole par 3 golf course, with lights for night playing along with the 18-hole championship course makes playing golf possible all year long. Add in the trails, picnic facilities and swimming pool and there is something for everyone of every age at LaFortune.

The recently opened splash park in Chandler Park drew hundreds of children on opening day. It is the largest splash pad park in the state of Oklahoma with over 30 water features and 3 water slides. This is just the latest feature in a park that also has rock formations for climbing, baseball complex, picnic shelters, an 18-hole disc golf course and a gorgeous panoramic view of Tulsa and Sand Springs. And Chandler Park is the only county park facility that is solar powered.

For those in north Tulsa County, O'Brien Park has the county's only golf training center to complement the ball fields and green spaces. Perhaps the most popular attraction at O'Brien is the Victory Garden. In an effort to combat health concerns due to poor access to fresh produce in North Tulsa, the parks department establishes a community garden. The Victory Garden is the only teaching/community garden in the park system. The goal is to educate participants in the "seed to table" process and send them home with the tools to start a garden in their own backyard or neighborhood.

The citizens of Tulsa County have lots of parks to choose from. What's important is to provide individuals and families with a safe, clean and well maintained area that offers activities for all ages and abilities. The Tulsa County park systems is the best in Oklahoma when it comes to parks and recreation.

KUDOS of the MONTH: TCC for 50 Years

Tulsa Community College launches a year-long 50th Anniversary celebration in September.

By numbers alone, TCC has served nearly 450,000 students in five decades. But the story of this institution is more than numbers and reaches deep into the community.

"TCC has educated generations of Tulsans. And, in doing so, the College has helped to define Tulsa itself. From our beginning to our footprint today, the College meets students where they are, working to shape and develop them as they learn," said TCC President and CEO Leigh B. Goodson.

What started as a call from Tulsa-area community and business leaders for access to public higher education led to the opening in 1970 of Tulsa Junior College, later changed to Tulsa Community College.

As with any start-up, the early years included stories of sacrifice and grit. With a larger than anticipated response and more students than classroom seats the first semester, students improvised and brought lawn chairs until enough seats could be ordered.

The College would grow from 2,800 and one campus to a multi-campus college serving more than 24,000 students each year.

"We celebrate the success our students have achieved through education. Since 90 percent of TCC's graduates live and work in the greater Tulsa area, we also celebrate the contributions they make to our community," said Goodson.

PSO, Oklahoma Food Bank Join to 'Shine a Light' on Area Neighbors in Need

Project Has Provided Nearly 300,000 Free, Energy-Efficient Light Bulbs

Public Service Company of Oklahoma (PSO) and the Community Food Bank of Eastern Oklahoma (Food Bank) have teamed up to distribute 65,000 energy-efficient LED bulbs to Tulsa area and northeastern Oklahoma families in need.

Since 2014, PSO and the Food Bank have worked together to coordinate the distribution of energy-efficient bulbs as part of PSO's Shine A Light project. To date, nearly 300,000 northeastern Oklahoma households have received the free light bulbs.

PSO also coordinates with the Community Food Bank of Eastern Oklahoma in McAlester and the Regional Food Bank of Oklahoma in Oklahoma City to provide bulbs outside of northeastern Oklahoma. To date, this combined effort has resulted in the distribution of 450,000 bulbs in PSO-served areas across the state.

This year, delivery of 100,000 LEDs to the food banks began in early July. The food banks are now distributing the bulbs through their networks of partner agencies.

"We know that families in need are often forced to make difficult decisions and food dollars sometimes get cut in order to cover other life expenses," said Jeff Brown, PSO Consumer Programs manager. "Through the Shine A Light Project, we can provide our neighbors ways to save energy and lower costs."

Research shows that up to three-quarters of clients served by Community Food Bank of Eastern Oklahoma report having to choose between paying their utility bills and paying for food.

"Food insecurity isn't something that happens to a family in isolation, it's often part of a larger constellation of issues impacting poverty and health," stated Eileen Bradshaw, executive director for Community Food Bank of Eastern Oklahoma. "This gift from PSO takes those issues into consideration and helps reduce costs for the families we serve. We are grateful for this generous donation and proud to partner with PSO in order to distribute these low energy lights through our network of agencies."

Founded in 1981, the Community Food Bank of Eastern Oklahoma is one of the largest, private hunger-relief organizations in Oklahoma. With branches in Tulsa and McAlester, it distributes food to people in need through 720 programs and Partner Agencies in 24 counties of eastern Oklahoma. Feeding programs include emergency food pantries, soup kitchens, emergency shelters, child feeding programs, senior feeding programs and veteran's initiatives. In addition, the Food Bank helps raise public awareness about hunger and the role of food banking in alleviating hunger. Tulsa Sobering Center Celebrates First Year

When data showed public intoxication was the most prevalent charge for frequent offenders in Tulsa, I knew we had to do something. That's why in 2016, Tulsa Deputy Police Chief Jonathan Brooks and then City Councilor Karen Gilbert and I embarked on a journey to Oklahoma City to research a Public Inebriate Alternative (PIA), otherwise known as a "drunk tank".

Through extensive research and help from community partners like 12&12, a leader in addiction recovery and treatment, and a grant from the Hardesty Foundation, we were able to open Tulsa Sobering Center in May 2018. Its measurable goal was to offer true jail diversion with a restorative approach, aiming to save the City and citizens money, conserve officer time, and help decrease the tendency for individuals to reoffend.

From Tulsa's Mayor

By G.T. BYNUM
Mayor of Tulsa

At the discretion of the Tulsa Police Department, adults detained for public intoxication, who have not committed any other crimes, are taken to the Tulsa Sobering Center for a 10-hour period to "sleep it off" in a safe clean environment. During their stay, participants are provided with food, a place to rest and at their discretion, information about and access to counseling and rehabilitation programs for substance abuse. At the end of the holding period, adults are released from Tulsa Sobering Center without criminal charges, court dates or a record of arrest.

A year later, I'm extremely pleased to say Tulsa Sobering Center has been a huge success.

From May 2018 – May 2019, 767 people utilized the facility, all of whom would have otherwise gone to jail.

In its first year, Tulsa Sobering Center saved nearly 3,000 hours of officer time, getting police back to patrols more quickly. Police officers who used Tulsa Sobering Center averaged a 10-minute return to service time compared to previous booking times that took hours.

The data shows the Sobering Center connected individuals to life-saving treatment. Of the 767 who visited the facility, 73 entered the medically-supervised detoxification program at 12&12, and upon completion, 32 of the 73 went into treatment at 12&12.

With $250,000 of yearly City funding, we're already seeing a return on our investment. Tulsa Sobering Center saved the citizens of Tulsa hundreds of thousands of dollars in jailing and policing expenses in its first year alone.

The reason for Sobering Center's success was a combination of the efforts from Tulsa Police and our community partners. Without the collaborative effort and common vision, none of this would have been possible.

The program works around the clock, 365 days a year, seven days a week, to help build a safer city for all Tulsans. It's a true community resource, a win-win for everyone, and an example of what we can accomplish when common sense programs are put into action that focus on the underlying sources of crime. Tulsa Sobering Center has proven it's helping the City be more fiscally responsible with its public safety funding while taking a unique approach to address mental health and addiction in our community.

Area Utilities, Salvation Army, City of Tulsa Team Up to Promote Home Energy Month

July was Home Energy Aid Month across Oklahoma and Public Service Company of Oklahoma (PSO) teamed up with The Salvation Army, City of Tulsa and other local utilities to help raise awareness and support for area residents who need temporary assistance paying their home heating or cooling bill.

Home Energy Aid Month is a time to help thousands of Oklahomans facing financial emergencies pay for the household energy on which all citizens rely. Families and individuals who qualify for Home Energy Aid receive assistance through the Salvation Army to help pay their utility bills.

Funds to provide the assistance are generated through customer contributions to Public Service Company of Oklahoma's Light A Life, Oklahoma Natural Gas' Share The Warmth and Oklahoma Gas & Electric's Lend A Hand programs.

"Through the generosity of neighbors helping neighbors, last year The Salvation Army helped over 1,850 individuals and families in need of utility bill assistance thanks to the utility companies' programs," said Major Mark Harwell, Area Commander of The Salvation Army. "100 percent of the funds given through these programs go to help those in need. It takes only a moment to check the contribution box on your utility bill and help your Green Country neighbor in need."

To lend support to the effort to raise awareness and increase contributions to the utility-supported energy assistance programs, Tulsa Mayor G.T. Bynum declared July "Home Energy Aid Month" in Tulsa.

Customers of PSO, ONG or OG&E made contributions by looking for the Light A Life, Share the Warmth or Lend A Hand information on their monthly energy bills. Each utility paid all administrative costs, so every penny donated went to help those in need.

Donations may continue to be made directly to The Salvation Army at www.SalArmyTulsa.org. All donations are tax deductible.

David Blankenship's Distinguished Career Capped with Okla. Military Academy Honor

Tulsan Stood at the Forefront of the Aviation Industry with Rockwell

Tulsan David Blankenship has enjoyed a career in which he stood at the forefront of the aerospace industry as an executive with Tulsa-based Rockwell International, where he began in the early 1960s.

In June, Blankenship was honored at Rogers State University as a distinguished alumni of Oklahoma Military Academy, which preceded Rogers State.

Blankenship graduated from Webster High School in Tulsa and attended junior college at the Oklahoma Military Academy (OMA) in 1952.

At OMA he lettered in football, basketball and baseball and also served on the Drill Team. He says making lifelong friendships remains one of his fondest memories while at OMA.

Blankenship attended the University of Tulsa and joined the Air Force ROTC, graduating in 1955. He received his wings at Vance Air Force Base in Enid, Okla. and was sworn into duty as a second lieutenant. He served three years on active duty, and as a Captain he finished his commitment to the Air Force by serving in an Air Force Reserve Unit as a pilot at Davis Field in Muskogee. During the Cuban crisis, he was recalled to active duty until the crisis ended.

In 1962, Blankenship began working with the aerospace industry (North American Aviation) when the company was moving to Tulsa. He was tapped to set up the office and hire personnel. He continued in executive positions as the company transitioned to Rockwell International and ultimately Boeing. He provided leadership in a variety of areas from hiring to training to public and government relations in the U.S. and overseas.

In retirement, he continues his past connections to Spartan College of Aeronautics and Technology, where he currently serves as consultant to the CEO. He also serves on the board of Central Bank of Oklahoma.

Blankenship joined the Air Force Association and attended his first annual convention in 1967. The Air Force Association is a national organization promoting the U.S. Air Force and honoring Airman and Air Force heritage. He never missed the spring or fall meetings until 2017. He was elected to the board, elected President from 1982-83, and served as Chairman of the Board in 1984. He led the research and construction of the AFA Building in Virginia while President and dedicated it as Chairman.

He received the National Defense Service Medal in 1962, the National Management Association Leadership Award in 1967 and the Exceptional Service Medal, an honor by the Air Force for "inspirational leadership and dedicated support of strong defense through airpower." He also is a member of the Webster High School Hall of Fame.

In 1967, Blankenship was named one of the Outstanding Men of America, and in 1973 he received the National Management Association's Leadership Award.

Editor's Note: The Oklahoma Military Academy operated in Claremore from 1919 to 1971, when the school transitioned to a community college and later became the known as Rogers State University. OMA was recognized as "The West Point of the Southwest" with more than 10,000 men and women attending the school during its distinguished history. The OMA Alumni Association was formed to preserve the school's legacy. OMA Alumni have been instrumental in providing support to RSU, including both scholarships and development of the Claremore campus. To learn more, visit www.rsu.edu/OMA.

'Hamilton' Takes Center Stage

The entertainment scene for August is dominated by the musical that is at the top of everyone's list, "Hamilton." Due to the efforts of local Broadway promoter Celebrity Attractions, 56,000 ticket holders in Tulsa will have their shot at what Broadway mavens consider the most inventive, dynamic and relevant work of musical theater to command the stage in two decades. Winner of 11 Tony Awards, including Best Musical and the 2016 Pulitzer Prize for drama, "Hamilton" plays at the Tulsa PAC for three weeks, Aug. 20 through Sept. 8.

Inspired by Ron Chernow's book by the same name, "Hamilton" is the masterwork of Lin-Manuel Miranda. Before "Hamilton," Miranda created the musical "In the Heights," which played several years ago at the Broken Arrow PAC and will be released as a film in 2020.

Despite being frequently described as a rap or hip-hop musical, "Hamilton" combines those musical styles with R&B, operetta, blues, jazz and pop to tell the story of America's fledgling years via the travails of the brilliant statesman Alexander Hamilton. The historical figure was born out of wedlock in the West Indies. His father abandoned him, and his mother died when Hamilton was only 13. He came to the U.S. to make his mark and succeeded in not only being a major player during America's war for independence, but becoming the first Secretary of the Treasury, and the founder of the U.S. Coast Guard and the "New York Post."

America, the land of opportunity, is celebrated through "Hamilton's" driving musical narrative. Jefferson, Washington, Lafayette and King George II all weigh in at some point. Everyone has his say, and through lyrics that are smart and fun. During the intrigue and gamesmanship of American Revolution, Hamilton gained admiration for his political savvy, but distain from Aaron Burr, the man who ultimately bested him in a gun duel. The musical propels the main character toward the fate that awaits him, but not before the audience is thoroughly enthralled and entertained.

"Hamilton" isn't the only game in town, however. At the Hard Rock Casino, Aug. 17, enjoy ventriloquist Terry Fator, winner of "America's Got Talent," Season 2. He is talented enough to have a theatre named for him at The Mirage in Las Vegas. Fator has 15 puppets that sing and impersonate famous singers or celebrities. Donald Trump is a relatively new puppet.

Brian Setzer's Rockabilly Riot Summer Tour electrifies The Joint at the Hard Rock on Aug 22. A three-time Grammy winner and well-known Stray Cats guitarist, songwriter and vocalist, Setzer will appear as part of a foursome of musicians playing drums, piano/guitar and bass.

Making music together for more than 30 years, Spin Doctors slam into the Osage Casino Skyline Event Center on Aug. 17. Still retaining four of its original members, the rock band from New York City has explored a range of styles over their three decades together and are planning a new studio album.

Timed to coincide with the release of their new album, "DNA," The Backstreet Boys will bring their biggest arena tour in 18 years to the BOK Center, Aug. 28. The group has

Chamber Music Celebrates Sixty-Six Years on Route 66

By NANCY HERMANN
Variety Editor

Chamber music has evolved from the days of gilded rooms and powdered wigs into a vibrant experience that features some of the finest musicians on the planet. Concerts are visceral and compelling musical conversations between players and audience members. The music draws from a variety of timeframes and inspirations and is played on instruments as diverse as saxophone and violin.

Formerly known as Concerttime and celebrating its longevity under the banner of "Sixty-Six Years on Route 66," Chamber Music Tulsa has been the art form's passionate advocate for decades.

Program Committee member Kathleen Gerety, CMT Board President Claire Farr and CMT Executive Director Bruce Sorrell shared their perspectives on the organization and its upcoming season.

GTR: Kathy, you've been heavily involved in programming choices for several years. What was the spark that created the Route 66 theme for this year?

Gerety: I think it was the happy coincidence of the 66th season and the prominence of "66" in local lore (Route 66, Phillips 66, etc). Broad themes can be an effective way to guide us in selecting programs for a season, and there is an increasing interest in developing connections between our programs and distinctively "Tulsa" history and culture.

GTR: Is there a performance or group that you are particularly looking forward to this season?

Gerety: I'm especially excited that we've programmed contemporary music with every ensemble, and that both Miró Quartet and McGill-McHale Trio are performing brand-new works.

GTR: When you travel to conferences or concerts to hear ensembles that are prospective candidates for the CMT concert season, what are you looking for specifically?

Gerety: Most (but not all) ensembles that we hear in showcases are very good players. We seek excellence, of course, but also personality, expressiveness, and stage presence. "Stage presence" for me means that the musicians are conscious of their audiences, draw them in, and have the poise and maturity to talk to their listeners about the music, and about their choices of repertoire. Musicians who choose to concentrate on chamber music are generally very thoughtful artists and like the intimacy and interactions that are the defining characteristics of chamber concerts. So we tend to choose groups that display those qualities in ways that engage and entertain our audiences.

GTR: Claire, as board president, what, in your view, does CMT do well?

Farr: We remain focused on truly excellent ensembles and programs, and we continually look for ways to offer those programs in appealing formats. For example, we recently added the Friday Gallery Series to expand the opportunities for a concert with wine and food beyond our traditional Saturday Salon series, which has been sold out for years. Our board has explicitly concentrated on inclusion and accessibility in our defining core values and beliefs. In the last several years, our program committee has increasingly worked to take demographic diversity into considerations in selecting musicians and composers. The board also prioritized keeping student tickets at only $5 for our Sunday concerts so families can afford to attend.

GTR: Which performances are you excited about in this "Sixty-six Years on Route 66" lineup?

Farr: I'm very excited about the Harlem Quartet, which makes their debut on our series in November. The quartet offers a unique blend of repertoire across classical, Latin and jazz. Their passionate commitment to diversity and excellence has made them a leading ensemble in educational residencies. Beyond their concerts on the CMT series, the quartet will be in Tulsa for a week to perform for all 3,500 fourth graders in the Tulsa Public SEASON OPENER: The American Brass Quintet opens Chamber Music Tulsa's season, Sept. 21-22.

Schools through the Any Given Child-Tulsa program.

GTR: Why does CMT value the education component of what it offers the community?

Farr: CMT is committed to musical education and outreach to the community because we believe in the transformative power of excellent live chamber music. It was striking to me that a commitment clearly stated back in our original incorporation in the 1950s remains today: "To cultivate... and encourage a popular education, understanding, taste and love of music..."

GTR: Bruce, our community loved the Miró Quartet's performances during CMT's highly successful Beethoven Winter Festival in 2017. What is it about the Miró that draws such a response every time they perform?

Sorrell: They have a visceral approach to music-making that electrifies the room. Though they give quiet passages keenly felt intensity, in bravura passages they unleash a controlled ferocity that keeps you at the edge of your seat.

GTR: For someone who is new to chamber music, how can they best acclimate themselves to the experience in order to gain a deeper appreciation?

Sorrell: In my opinion, you don't have to know anything about chamber music to enjoy its beauty. The excitement of hearing chamber music played in an intimate setting is truly thrilling. The biggest thing that I think is true of our series is that everyone is passionate about sharing the experience. Even if you don't know much about it, we will welcome you and hope you will become as hooked as we are.

Chamber Music Tulsa season opens with American Brass Quintet, Sept. 21-22, followed by the Lysander Piano Trio, Oct. 11-13; Harlem Quartet, Nov. 8-10; Daedalus Quartet, Jan. 31-Feb. 2; McGill-McHale Trio, Mar. 6-8 and the Miró Quartet, Apr. 4-5. A Friday Gallery series will be held at alha and Duet Jazz. Sunday concerts are performed at the Tulsa PAC. Check the Chamber Music Tulsa website, chambermusictulsa.org, for ticket prices and special event information.

August Packed with Entertainment

been setting and breaking records in Las Vegas for more than a year.

It's great to see the River Spirit Casino up and running like they never dropped a stitch. Whoa. They've booked the Canadian band Nickelback on Aug. 16; Oklahoma's country music star Vince Gill on Aug. 17; crooner ("Wicked Game") and guitarist Chris Isaak for Aug. 22; and the truly incomparable Mary J. Blige, Aug. 23.

I came to appreciate Mary J. Blige late in her career. If you don't know her music, check out her 2014 studio album "The London Sessions." It was number one on the R&B charts. I downloaded the album after hearing one song. Blige has been nominated 32 times for a Grammy and won nine. She has eight multi-platinum albums and 80 million albums sold. Her life hasn't been a piece of cake. She can sing about pain and heartache like no one else.

Ballet is back in late August with TBII's "On Your Radar."

As you may know, TBII is Tulsa Ballet's ultra-talented second company of dancers. Slated for Aug. 23-25 are three fresh and riveting contemporary works. A joy to experience in the intimate Studio K, this program is always one that I leave saying, "I am so glad I saw that." Upcoming is a world premiere by Daniel van de Laar titled "This Must be the End," along with Ma Cong's "Melodia" and "Watercolor" by Jimmy Orrante.

A singer/songwriter who doesn't sing about all the pain he's endured in his life, but could, is Rob Thomas. Along with penning songs for his Matchbox Twenty band, he's written for Willie Nelson and Mick Jagger, among many others. The song "Smooth" that he wrote verses for and sung on Santana's major comeback album in 1999 won Grammys for Best Song of the Year, Record of the Year and Best Pop Collaboration. He told "Rolling Stone," "My songs are more famous than I am, and I'm okay with that." His sixth studio album, "Chip Tooth Smile" was released in April 2019. Thomas appears in concert at the Brady Theater on Aug. 30.

That's a wrap for summer entertainment, and there's plenty to look forward to in the performance season ahead.

JJ Cale Decides to Stay Around

YouTube has me pretty well figured out.

Using what I can only assume is witchcraft and sorcery, the video sharing app has developed an uncanny ability to determine what I want to see and hear.

A staple in my recommended viewing section is a roughly 90-minute video of JJ Cale and Leon Russell at the Paradise Studios in Los Angeles.

In addition to Cale, who is playing a very JJ Caled-up $50 Harmony guitar, and Russell, on a more customary Hammond B3 organ, the band includes Ambrose Campbell on congas, Bill Boatman on guitar and bass, Jimmy Karstein on drums, Larry Bell on piano and vocals, Marty Green and Pat "Taco" Ryan on saxophone, Nick Rather on bass and Shamsi Sarumi on percussion.

Rounding out the band on acoustic and electric guitar, harmonica, cabaza and backing vocals is Cale's collaborator, muse and partner Christine Lakeland Cale.

In April, Lakeland Cale did something for which she is uniquely qualified: she released her late husband's 15th studio album, "Stay Around."

Posthumous albums raise red flags for me. Except in rare cases when an artist dies between the completion of an album and its release, as was the case with Leon Russell's "On a Distant Shore" in 2017, it can feel like a money grab; scavengers picking clean the carcass of a legendary career.

But JJ Cale is another rare case. Famously reclusive after moving to California in 1980, it was in the studio where the Central High School graduate was truly in his element.

"The studio was definitely one of his most comfortable situations to be in," said Lakeland Cale in a recent interview promoting the album's release.

A former Air Force electronics technician, Cale had a passion for the technical side of music. "John enjoyed working on guitars and recording," she recalled. "That was a constant."

That passion for recording, however, didn't extend beyond the studio. He was never interested in media appearances or touring to promote an album. A piece of well known JJ Cale folklore is his record company telling him, "your album is a hit, you gotta get out there and promote it," and Cale responding, "if it's already a hit, why do I need to promote it?"

In other words, he loved recording, he didn't love making an album.

This is further evidenced by his last studio album, "Roll On," in which the title track was 34 years old when the album was released in 2009. His laid-back style is great for guitar grooves, not so much for getting music out in a timely fashion.

Given these facts, it's no surprise that the two-LP Stay Around doesn't sound like a collection of leftovers and outtakes. This is a complete, expertly mixed and produced album.

I'm not going to offer a review, except to say, if you love JJ Cale, you'll love this album. Never one to rebrand himself or change his sound, this is vintage Cale doing what he's been doing since Johnny Cale and the Valentines entertained Tulsans in the 1950s.

I could talk JJ Cale all day, but I really should devote some of this column to the artists who don't have Grammys and platinum records on the wall. Yet.

Skyline Festival

More than 45 Oklahoma musicians converge on 18th Street and Boston Avenue for a festival honoring the late great Tom Skinner on Aug. 18 from 12:30 - 10:30.

Bands like Pilgrim, The Damn Quails, Randy Crouch & Flying Horse Band feat. Paul Benjamin, and Tom Skinner's own Science Project Band donate their time and talent for this annual fundraiser for Red Dirt Relief Fund (RDRF).

This year, nine of the performing musicians have benefitted from RDRF, a non-profit organization that helps Oklahoma musicians in need. RDRF has granted more than $160,000 to musicians in the state since 2012.

This is great music for a great cause. I hope I see you there!

Horton Chili Cookoff

Grab a few non-perishable food items or a winter coat and get to Cain's Ballroom Nov. 9 for Horton Records 6th Annual Rock 'n Folk 'n Chili Cook-off.

This is a great event every year, featuring chili from some of Tulsa's best restaurants, as well as a stellar lineup of local bands.

This year, I'm especially excited about the Tribute to Tulsa Music featuring Chris Combs, Paul Benjamin, Jesse Ayock, John Fullbright and more. The best Tulsa musicians of today honoring the best Tulsa musicians of the past? Yes, sign me up.

Get your tickets at hortonrecords.org, and don't forget to bring a donation. Giving back to the community in the form of food and winter clothing while enjoying an all-ages musical event of this caliber is the ultimate win-win.

MisFEST, MOJO Fest, Medicine Stone and Stone River are a few other upcoming festivals, each offering an opportunity to enjoy numerous local and regional bands. It's the best way to discover what you want to see and hear, no witchcraft or sorcery required. All you've got to do is keep searching, keep listening.

CTCA Tulsa Awarded as High Performing Hospital in Lung and Colon Cancer Surgery

Cancer Treatment Centers of America (CTCA) Tulsa has been named a High-Performing Hospital in both Lung Cancer and Colon Cancer Surgery by U.S. News & World Report. The recognition was announced in the publication's 30th annual Best Hospitals rankings, released on July 30, to help patients make more informed health care decisions. The rankings compared more than 4,400 medical centers nationwide. While several other hospitals in the state ranked in one of the categories, CTCA Tulsa is the only hospital in Oklahoma to receive this recognition in both categories.

TULSA TREASURE: The Cancer Treatment Center of America hospital in Tulsa has been given a best hospital ranking by U.S. News & World Report.

"Surgery is an important element of a patient's treatment plan when facing a lung or colon cancer diagnosis," says Jay Foley, CTCA Tulsa President and CEO. "At CTCA Tulsa, we bring together a comprehensive team of medical professionals committed to helping patients understand the complexities of their disease and the wide array of evidence-based treatment options available to them."

Conditions ratings, which evaluates hospitals that treated enough patients, according to the U.S. News & World Report criteria, in the respective categories to be considered. Hospitals are rated high-performing, average or below average in each procedure or condition.

They also factored in variables that have been linked to higher quality, including volume, nurse staffing and whether the hospital employed a specially trained physician known as an intensivist. In addition, patient satisfaction scores were factored into the ratings in most procedures. Access to information about performance enables patients to better select facilities that are the most likely to offer better, safer care.

CTCA Tulsa was recognized in the Best Hospitals Procedures and

According to the publication, for each group, they assessed each hospital's risk-adjusted outcomes, such as 30-day mortality, 30-day readmission and length of stay.

CELEBRATING LIFE: Cancer Treatment Centers of America hospitals across the nation came together in celebration in June to celebrate 235 cancer survivors who have met their five-year milestone after first receiving treatment and were invited to celebrate their personal triumphs over cancer. This year, 35 honorees from all over the country attended the Tulsa celebration and many brought their families to help them celebrate. The event was held in the CTCA lobby and a recognition ceremony luncheon was held at the Renaissance Hotel where survivors shared their stories and concluded with attendees dancing the "Cancer Fighters Slide," an original song and dance created for the event.

DINING OUT IN GREATER TULSA

SwampHouse Brings Added Life to Tulsa's Studio Row

Local Dining

By BLAKE AUSTYN
Contributing Writer

SwampHouse, 1529 E. 3rd St., opened in May in Studio Row, one of Tulsa's up-and-coming neighborhoods located near 3rd Street and Trenton Avenue. The restaurant and music venue, which sits across the street from the historic Church Studio, features live music Thursday through Saturday nights.

The restaurant exterior is reminiscent of a southern-style home with a wrap-around covered front porch. The main entrance door is surprisingly nondescript, located on the building's east side with no signage above the door. But don't be afraid, it is, in fact, the entrance.

The indoor dining room is a fair size and includes a medium-sized, welcoming bar with table seating.

My party arrived at 6:30 p.m. on a Saturday, and we sat outside on the screened-in porch. We were hesitant, at first, to choose the porch, but the misters pulled us in. Though it was quite muggy to begin with, our waitress said that once the sun goes down, the porch becomes exceptionally pleasant. It seems that everyone knew that, because the outside area completely filled up an hour or so later, and the early heat turned into a mild, very pleasant evening, except for the flies.

Around 7 p.m., a three-piece band began playing indoors, and the garage door that separates the outdoor patio and the indoor dining room opened soon after to bring the whole restaurant together.

BLACKENED CATFISH: SwampHouse's Blackened Catfish, cooked and blackened to the perfect degree. The fish is served on a bed of red beans and rice with a side of hush puppies and a slice of perfectly-ripe watermelon.

SHRIMP AND GRITS: Five blackened shrimp on top of "cheezy green chile grits" plus a side salad. The grits were creamy with a number of green chiles that made the grits more than just some spicy mashed potatoes.

STUDIO ROW LOCATION: SwampHouse, 1529 E. 3rd St., opened in May in one of Tulsa's up-and-coming neighborhoods, located near 3rd Street and Trenton Avenue.

FOOD AND MUSIC VENUE: The restaurant features live music Thursday through Saturday nights.

We started our meal with the battered and deep fried gator bites, with swamp sauce — a house-made cream sauce that paired well with the breaded gator. The bites were "chewier than chicken," as my friend noted, but still tasty. Although, I will add, most things taste good when they're fried. The bites came on a bed of fries. The fries also paired well dipped in the swamp sauce.

For my entree, I chose the catfish, with the option of fried, grilled or blackened. When my dish was delivered, the food server raved about it, saying it was his favorite dish. After eating it, his comment does not surprise me one bit.

I chose to have my fish blackened, and the spice and seasoning were perfect. The fish came on a bed of red beans and rice with a side of hush puppies and a slice of perfectly-ripe watermelon. The fish was delectably tender, and the beans and rice were the perfect compliment.

My friend chose the shrimp and grits — five blackened shrimp served on top of "cheezy green chile grits" plus a side salad. The grits were creamy with a number of green chiles that made them more than just some spicy mashed potatoes. The grits had a nice level of spice that added to the flavor but weren't too much.

The shrimp were tender and blackened well. SwampHouse is open Tuesday through Sunday, 11 a.m.-11 p.m. To learn more, visit swamphousetulsa.com.

Tulsa Tech Earns National CDA Gold Standard Certification

In recent years, researchers have learned that the human brain develops the vast majority of its neurons, and is at its most receptive to learning, between birth and three years of age. The last four decades have produced many new practices and principles for use in the classroom with young children, as well as countless books, videos and activities to enrich the home environment.

Tulsa Tech's Child Development Associate (CDA) part-time, evening program has recently been awarded the CDA Gold Standard by the Council for Professional Recognition (the Council). As a non-profit organization, the Council's mission is to recognize and promote professionals and organizations that are making strides in the early childhood education sector.

"This achievement confirms our commitment to providing the highest quality of education for our students," said Teresa Berg, adult coordinator at Tulsa Tech. "Our focus is the well-being of children and families throughout the Tulsa area, and we're excited to be recognized at the national level."

In this pivotal and growing industry, the CDA credential is recognized in all 50 states, and the CDA Gold Standard sets Tulsa Tech apart from other training programs, allowing our students' confidence in the quality of the CDA program they are selecting.

Tulsa Tech is now the first technology center in the nation, first program in Oklahoma and west of the Mississippi River to earn the gold standard. It is a reflection of the hard work by the 14 certified instructors, staff and administrators who work in our Adult Career Development department to earn the CDA Gold Standard Award.

As a nominee for the prestigious award, Tulsa Tech successfully demonstrated that its early childhood education training adheres to the Council's three industry-leading principles:

- Alignment with the CDA formal education coursework found in the CDA's eight subject areas
- Sound business policies and practice
- Quality student services that meet their educational and professional needs

"We believe that our CDA Gold Standard Training Certification adds value and integrity to the early childhood profession by verifying connections between the Council's proven teacher competencies and the quality of training resources available to CDA students," said Valora Washington, chief executive officer, Council for Professional Recognition.

In addition to offering high-quality training, CDA Gold Standard applicants must provide evidence that they serve the CDA student community with excellence, which includes professional development that prepares students for successful completion of their training program. The CDA Gold Standard is valid for three years and can be renewed.

"It's exciting to think about the many young children, families and communities that will benefit from the high-quality education and training students will receive from CDA Gold Standard Training Certification programs such as Tulsa Tech," Washington added.

Regardless of the industry, Tulsa Tech strives to provide the best training possible to create successful outcomes for students looking to get hired right away, move into other educational pursuits or join the military. Our full-time programs are accredited through the Oklahoma State Department of Education, Oklahoma State Board of Career & Technology Education, as well as numerous industry-specific accrediting boards, associations and agencies. Our part-time, evening classes are accredited in the same manner, and the CDA Gold Standard goes above and beyond that accreditation process and is the standard bearer for excellence in early child development training.

OSU Medicine Rose District Location Now Open

Dr. Elizabeth Brewer Will Focus on Family Medicine

The newest home to OSU Medicine is in Broken Arrow right in the heart of the Rose District where Dr. Elizabeth Brewer will provide family medicine care.

"We are thrilled to be opening a new clinic to serve the Broken Arrow community. It's the first time we've expanded east of Tulsa," said Ty Griffith, VP of clinic operations. "As a family medicine specialist seeing patient of all ages, Dr. Brewer is a great addition to the OSU Medicine team. We are excited to have her and know she will deliver exceptional care to our patients."

In the past year, OSU Medicine has continued to bring on new providers and specialties including areas of Reconstructive and Cosmetic Surgery, Pain Management, Family Medicine, Internal Medicine, Sports Medicine and a brand new practice dedicated to Midwifery Care that brought on three new nurse practitioner midwives who also specialize in women's health.

"I am excited to be joining the OSU Medicine family and to already be seeing new patients in my Broken Arrow Clinic," said Dr. Brewer. "The new clinic and continual growth of our network and staff is a reflection of the care and accessibility that OSU Medicine provides to its patients and the community."

The location is 118 W. Commercial St. in Broken Arrow. The telephone number is 918-893-3520

Water Rationing Still Possible in Broken Arrow

By BOB LEWIS
Contributing Editor

As strange as it may sound after record spring rainfall and persistent flooding problems, city officials warn that water rationing may be necessary in Broken Arrow this summer. It all depends on what Mother Nature has in store for the area.

The city says residents use an average of about 13 million gallons of water per day (MGD); but in the summertime, that figure climbs to over 24 MGD. Highest monthly water usage generally occurs in July, August and September due primarily to the need for more frequent watering of lawns and landscaping. This causes stress to the water supply and, if not properly managed, can lead to a shortage.

To deal with this reality, in 2016, the city council adopted a Water Conservation Plan to help make sure all citizens will be able to receive water, even if supply is low.

The plan contains three triggering stages. Stage One is a time when the probability of a water shortage exists and continues to rise. It calls for voluntary cutbacks in water use, lawn watering on an alternate day schedule and concentration of watering times during evening hours when demand is normally the lowest.

Stage Two is triggered when daily water demand for three consecutive days is in excess of 95 percent of availability and/or the storage system is unable to recover about 70 percent of its capacity by 5 a.m. During these times, voluntary actions requested in Stage One become mandatory.

Stage Three goes into effect during emergency situations caused by falling water pressure, continuing demand in excess of capacity and the storage system's inability to recover about 60 percent by 5 a.m. During these times, all non-essential residential use is banned.

If any of these stages need to be put into place, citizens will receive an automated call from the city manager. Notices will also be posted in local newspapers, on the city website and its social media sites.

Broken Arrow's main water supply comes from its Verdigris River Water Treatment Plant which produces approximately 19 MGD. The city recently completed construction of a second supplemental water connection with the City of Tulsa. This new connection, when needed, will provide Broken Arrow with an additional five million gallons of water a day while the plant is at peak production. In addition, the primary water connection with Tulsa is capable of providing up to four MGD.

The total combined water delivery from both the plant and Tulsa is approximately 28 MGD, above traditional demand, but close enough to dictate careful attention and handling.

Tigers Ready to Defend State Title in 2019

By MIKE MOGUIN
GTR Sports Writer

Broken Arrow will begin defense of its Class 6AI state championship when it opens the season later this month at arch rival Union.

Tackle and Oklahoma commit Andrew Raym, guard Trevor Burckhartzmeyer and defensive backs Myles Slusher, an Oregon commit, and Bryce Mattioda, linebacker Campbell Yeager and kicker Tyler Crawford are among the key starters returning.

In an interview with David Alexander last December, the Tigers' head coach reflected on the joy of winning the title in 2018 after beating Jenks 28-20 in the Class 6AI championship game.

"It was incredible. It is a difficult process. People don't realize how hard it is to win a state championship and that's really what has made it more amazing," Alexander said. "Because it's not just a coach or a football team that wins a state championship. There has to be a school and community culture."

The program had played in the state championship when last year's senior class were freshmen. The Tigers also played Jenks that year, having been dealt a 35-14 loss.

"Going to the game in 2015 helped this team win one," Alexander said. "They saw what it's like with what it took to get to the game and how much more effort it was going to take to win it."

Broken Arrow went through the year unscathed. It was loaded with experience with the likes quarterback Quintevin Cherry, fullbacks Noah Cortes and Kaiser Newell, wide receiver Matt Kaiser, linebackers Zach Marcheselli and Gavin Potter, both D-I players and defensive back Aaron "Tricky" Stokes. It was a solid bunch.

Last year's team beat Union (33-10) for the first time in a decade, routed 2017 champion Owasso (47-20), beat Jenks (28-13 in the regular season meeting) and a slew of foes from the western side of the state. They found themselves in a more defensive challenge against Owasso in the semifinals (a 10-7 win) before going toe-to-toe with the Trojans in the final at Chapman Stadium on the TU campus.

Jenks scored first which began an exchange of touchdowns between both teams. But after scoring its third TD, BA took the lead for good. An end-zone interception by Slusher sealed the game.

The Tigers had to face adversity when threat of a thunderstorm stopped the game with under five minutes remaining.

But the delay did not come as any surprise to them.

"We knew on Wednesday (of that week) there was going to be a rain delay," Alexander said. "So we had a pretty good plan. It wasn't too big of a shock to us. Obviously, two hours is a long time. But, we took some exercise bikes to keep the skill kids warm, we took some heating pads, we took food, we took 200 peanut butter and jelly sandwiches to keep their blood-sugar up. We had our athletic directors keeping all the time, what was going on, with the updates, we let the kids relax and take their shoes and shoulder pads off and then we got a 30-minute call that it was time to go. We starting heating them back up again, getting them ready to go."

When play resumed, Broken Arrow drove but could not get a first down, which would have allowed them to run the clock out. They punted and the Trojans put together a potential game-tying drive, penetrating the Tigers' red zone. B.A.'s Slusher made the pick in the end to stop the drive with 20 seconds left, securing the victory.

"You knew in your mind that it was going to come down to the last play of the game," Alexander said. "This is the state championship and it's Jenks. Mentally, I was ready for it. As they were driving, we were trying to make adjustments, trying to make a play, trying to get a pass rush, all that stuff you have to do on defense. One of our best players, Miles Slusher, makes a play at the goal line. Obviously, it was pandemonium on the sideline when he picked off that pass in the end zone."

Alexander got plenty of props from places far and beyond.

"Oh yeah. I've heard from people all over the country. I've heard from some of the old (Philadelphia) Eagle teammates (where Alexander played during his NFL career), I heard from Broken Arrow graduates going all the way back to the 1950s, it's been quite an exciting time," Alexander said.

"We had a great group. You could tell, by being around them the last few months, it was a special group and I told everyone in the summer that we had a group that was not only physically talented to do it, but also, I thought they were mentally ready to get over the hump and win it," Alexander added.

Baseball a Way of Life for Drillers Radio Announcer Dennis Higgins

*Veteran Broadcaster
Is in 25th Season with Over 3,000 Games*

By GLENN HIBDON
GTR Sports Writer

Baseball has been very, very good to Tulsa Drillers play-by-play announcer Dennis Higgins. Not only is the sport his passion and profession, but it's a way of life for the native Californian.

Now in his 25th season in the business and 10th with the Drillers, the 62-year-old Higgins loves both minor league baseball and living in Tulsa. He plans on making ONEOK Field his final destination along a career path of hearing the words "Play Ball."

"I won't retire until they knock on the booth and say 'you're done.' It's been nice having you here, but it's time to go," said Higgins, who will broadcast his 3,000th game this season. "I love it here because they treat me like the Vin Scully of Tulsa. They take care of me financially and I don't want to move around. I want to stay here and retire here."

In a roundabout way, Higgins has Scully to thank for his broadcasting journey. Higgins and his brothers grew up in Oxnard, California, listening to Scully and Dodgers' games on radio. The legendary announcer gave Higgins the desire to follow him into the booth.

"My brother and I would listen to Scully every night," said Higgins, recently named Oklahoma's Sportscaster of the Year. "My brother Mike kept his own box scores and sometimes acted like he was the announcer, trying to emulate Scully and saying, 'It is gone.'"

"When I was young, mom worried about me. She would see me talking to myself in the backyard when I was pretending to do the games, crowd noises and all. My mom would spend all day cooking dinner and at 6 o'clock we would be out playing or listening to games. We ruined more dinners that way. It got to the point where my mom said 'I hate that (Scully's) voice.'"

Higgins discovered baseball through his brother, who delivered donuts for Helms Bakery. The product contained Dodgers baseball cards. Higgins vividly remembers following the 1962 World Series with Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale, leading to his desire to reach the airways.

"I got a late start," said Higgins, who earned a degree in government from Sacramento State. "I thought I would be in politics, but a friend called me and I went to driving a beer truck for seven years. The money was good and I would get off at 3 or 4 o'clock."

"I was talking on the phone one night with my dad and he said, 'when are you going to get off that truck?' I knew I wasn't getting any younger and I decided to attend a sportscaster camp in LA. As a rookie I got to do NBA games and minor league baseball. I had never done basketball and it was so fast, I began to wonder if this (play-by-play) was for me."

Higgins refused to give up his dream and enrolled in grad school at San Francisco State. While attending the broadcasting school, Higgins was given the chance to do basketball and football games that were broadcast live on cable television in San Francisco. Higgins was eventually hired by radio station KNBR, the flagship station of the Giants and Warriors. He started as an intern and then promoted to a producer/reporter.

Due to the politics that permeates big league franchises, Higgins said his season with the Giants broadcasting team in 2000 was not a good fit and major league baseball is "too big for its britches".

"I'd rather do the minors because they have nice ballparks, the hotels aren't that bad, the players and managers are more accessible and I'm the No. 1 guy," he said. "I think the AA level is the best of the minors because you have the best up and coming players and they represent Tulsa. The Drillers have a great ballpark and work ethic."

HOME BASE: Dennis Higgins in his broadcast booth before a recent Tulsa Drillers game at ONEOK Field.

Higgins spent 1995-99 with the Wichita Wranglers of the Texas League and still airs Butler County (Kan.) Community College football and men's basketball. He also sells sponsorships for the Butler athletic department, meaning he has very little free time, even during the offseason.

One of the dwindling old school play-by-play men, Higgins works alone in the broadcast booth. There is no "color analyst" or anyone to take the microphone if necessary.

"Everybody starts out that way, wanting to do everything themselves," said Higgins, who started his short season career in 1991 at Helena, Montana, of the Pioneer League. "I'm long past that. It would be nice if I had a partner because the listeners probably get tired of my voice. I think it's a financial situation for franchises. Some minor league teams do have two men, especially at home. They might hire a young guy to do a couple of innings."

"At this level it's pretty much solo. Early on you get a lot of reps (innings), but as you get older, doing 140 games in 153 days, you have very little time off. I usually start at 3 p.m. and on the road I'm with the team and I have to go to the ballpark with them. I use the booth as an office to do my personal stuff."

"My goal was never major league baseball. It was too lofty a goal for me because I started too late and I'm too old."

When Higgins reached San Francisco, there were those who told him "you'll never last, you'll be home in a week." Now the veteran voice can look back and recall broadcasting the Drillers to a Texas League championship in 2018 and realizing his dream along the way. Not too shabby for a minor league lifer.

Showtime Coming to Broken Arrow Aug. 23

Network to Broadcast 'Rumble In The Rose' Outdoor Boxing Event

By BOB LEWIS
Contributing Editor

On Aug. 23, the Showtime Cable Network will introduce Broken Arrow's award-winning Rose District to millions of viewers across the country.

Taking center stage that evening will be a unique outdoor boxing event dubbed "Rumble in the Rose" taking place in the intersection of Main and Commercial streets. It is expected to attract upwards of 1,500 live spectators along with Showtime's national audience.

Headlining the main event will be unbeaten Oklahoma heavyweight Trey Lippe Morrison, who now stands at 16-0. His opponent is yet to be announced.

For Morrison, who has won all 16 of his bouts via knockout, excellence in the ring is a family tradition. His father, Tommy, is a former world heavyweight champion.

Scheduled to compete in other bouts are super middleweights Vladimir Shishkin and DeAndre Ware and junior welterweights Shohjahon Ergashev and Abdiel Ramirez.

This event is the outgrowth of a friendship between Brent Brassfield, Broken Arrow's Business Retention and Development Coordinator, and Tulsa-based boxing promoter Tony Holden coupled with the willingness of the B.A. City Council to think outside the box when it comes to promoting the community's ultra-successful downtown redevelopment project.

In an earlier interview, Holden told the Tulsa World, the Rose District, "is beautiful. It'll look great on TV."

Holden said boxing is making a comeback after a period where mixed martial arts was more popular among younger spectators. "I think it's going to continue to grow. What boxing needs is a heavyweight. That's why there's a lot of attention on Trey," he said.

Showtime is an American premium cable and satellite television network that serves as the flagship service of the Showtime Networks subsidiary of CBS Corp. According to the company's website, services for Showtime and CBS All Access, which carries broadcast network programming and originals, are on track to reach 8 million subscribers in 2019 and 16 million by 2022.

City Manager Michael Spurgeon said the city is investing about $110,000 to stage this event. "We believe that based on ticket sales, promotions and sponsorships, we should be able to recoup about 75 to 80 percent of our investment," he said.

Former Tulsa Football Star Eddie Dukes Wins Jim Thorpe Sports Excellence Award

SPORTS

By MIKE MOGUIN
GTR Sports Writer

When you think of the 1964 University of Tulsa football team, the names of Jerry Rhome and Howard Twilley come to mind. They were part of a stellar passing attack for the Golden Hurricane's Bluebonnet Bowl championship squad that year.

Another major element was Eddie Dukes, a nose guard who anchored a stout defense, helping TU to a 9-2 record and a 14-7 win against Ole' Miss in their bowl game.

Dukes, a Choctaw nation member, recently won the Jim Thorpe Sports Excellence Award and was honored at the Dream Keepers 21st Annual Awards Banquet last November, an event held by the City of Tulsa and the Greater Tulsa Area Indian Affairs Commission. He won the awards based on his service as a coach and a teacher in the community.

Recently, Dukes watched his two grandsons at a football camp at TU coordinated by coach Philip Montgomery. He shared some of his memories of his senior season.

Dukes grew up in Talahina, near the Kiamichi Mountains and was all-conference standout in football, baseball and track in high school. He went into the Air Force right after graduation.

Dukes played as a running back and linebacker in high school, so when finished up his time in the armed forces, he attempted to walk-on as a fullback in 1960 at Oklahoma State.

"I had visions of being a fullback. I weighed only 200 pounds and had four years of experience lifting weights. So I had some strength," Dukes said. "But some coaches came up and said 'Dukes, you would probably succeed more at line than a running back in the backfield.' So, I said 'okay. I'll move up to the line.' The minute I moved up to the line, I was third or fourth-team fullback."

Within two days of practice, Dukes was on the second team on the line. "So I decided that this is where I'm going to have to be if I'm going to play," he said.

The next year, Dukes played at Eastern State College in Wilburton. He arrived at TU in 1962, but had to redshirt when he incurred an injury.

Eventually, that memorable campaign of '64 came.

"Here I am at the line, I'm 5-11, 235, and was better off at the middle (nose guard)," Dukes said. "People had a hard time getting between my legs because I was so short, and being stout enough, I was hard to block. "So that was a natural place for me. They couldn't get to my knees, so they double-teamed me. I didn't make many tackles, but they couldn't move me off the line either."

Dukes loved being double-teamed.

TU opened the season against Arkansas in Fayetteville.

"As far as the environment of playing football, that Razorback Stadium was hard to beat when we were playing. It was an exciting game," Dukes said.

The Hurricane had a 14-7 advantage at halftime, but wound up losing 31-22.

"We just made a couple of bloopers," Dukes said.

That Arkansas team, which had Jerry Jones and Jimmy Johnson as members and Barry Switzer as an assistant coach, would go on to win a share of the national championship.

TU won its next three games, including a 58-0 romp on the road against Louisville. Then came a heartbreaking 28-23 setback at Cincinnati.

"Cincinnati slipped by us," Dukes said. "The story of that game was, we were on the two-yard line and Rhome threw a pass to Twilley in the closing seconds and the whistle blew. All the players would tell you that. We would have won the game had we had another play.

"We were moving down the field and we thought we were going to win the game and the clock ran out on us," Dukes added.

TU would not lose again that year. A significant moment came when the Hurricane dismantled Oklahoma State, 61-14, at home.

"What stands out about OSU is their fans," Dukes said. "They were all around the field. It got so crowded that (Coach Glenn) Dobbs said on record that he could have sold 50,000 seats that day. The stadium held over 25,000 back then."

Dukes believes that one way his

TU career benefits him today is the discipline he learned. One team that stands out to him the most is the 2010 squad because of its win at Notre Dame.

"I think of those players on that team," he said. "They get to say 'I played for a team that beat Notre Dame.' No one can ever take that away."

As for the Tulsa teams of today, Dukes is optimistic.

"I'm appreciative of the head coach (Montgomery) here," he said. "I think he really cares about kids. He has demonstrated and shown to a lot of us that he genuinely cares about children. He's had his struggles here. He's struggling now to win. But he knows how to handle kids. He can get on you, but he also knows when to pat you on the back."

Bank of America Center Building has 'Wow Factor'

The Bank of America Center Building at 15 West 6th Street, originally known as the Fourth National Bank of Tulsa Building, was built on the site of the old Tulsa County Courthouse. In 1967 when it opened, at 412 feet tall, 32 stories, it was the tallest building in Tulsa. Today it is the fifth tallest in Tulsa and the ninth tallest in the state. Its net occupiable area is 288,774 square feet.

The original owners of this structure probably considered it a cutting edge contemporary building although it is frequently referred to as a design product of the international school.

Designed by the Tulsa architectural firm, Kelley and Marshall, it was an immediate financial success. Kelley and Marshall, who were also involved in real estate development, built at least two other office towers of similar design in different cities. The architects were proud enough of the Bank of America Building that their offices were located on the top floor for many years.

What is most interesting about this building is how it functionally combines four different types of occupancies in one single tower and from the exterior articulates them in the overall design.

The bulk of the ground floor with storefront glass walls at Boulder and 6th Street was planned to be retail space. Originally it was occupied by Fourth National Bank. Today, it is the downtown branch of Bank of America. Above it is a seven-floor parking garage accessed by a ramped entrance from Boulder Avenue. On top of the garage are 21 floors of commercial office space capped by three floors of a private club. The building is owned and managed by Price Family Properties.

The top three floors are occupied by the Summit Club. When it opened on one floor as the new kid on the block, it was one of three downtown clubs. Two of them have closed, while the Summit Club remains and is thriving.

From its exterior, the Bank of American Center follows a classic tripartite design with a base, a shaft and a distinctive cap. The base is the parking garage which with a glass ground floor appears to float. It is faced with cream colored rusticated marble panels composed of small rectangular pieces. For a few years, there was an adhesive problem with these which has apparently been fixed. Ventilating this base are tall, narrow louvered openings spaced regularly around the perimeter.

The shaft is glass curtain wall with golden bronze glass spandrels arranged in a horizontal banded pattern. This shaft is strongly recessed back from the parking garage below.

The crown of this building, its tour de force, are the three top floors, glass deeply recessed behind overhanging roof and column structures highlighted by aggres-

INTERNATIONAL DESIGN: The Bank of America building in Tulsa is frequently referred to as a design product of the international school which is "characterized by an emphasis on volume over mass, the use of lightweight, mass-produced, industrial materials, rejection of all ornament and color, repetitive modular forms, and the use of flat surfaces, typically alternating with areas of glass."

sively projecting balconies. The off white color of the base below is carried out in the marble facing of columns, balcony railings, and roof fascias. This wow factor cap dramatically sets the building apart from other high rise Tulsa structures.

Tulsa Area United Way Day of Caring is Sept. 6

More than 5,000 volunteers will work on approximately 450 community service projects during the Tulsa Area United Way's annual Day of Caring on Friday, Sept. 6.

The 28th Day of Caring will begin at 7 a.m. with a free breakfast and program for volunteers at the VFW Post 577 at 1109 E. Sixth St. Parking is available north of the VFW and along Sixth Street near Centennial Park.

Sponsors of the Day of Caring are Arvest Bank, Hillcrest Medical Center and Osage Casino.

"The Day of Caring is one of our community's most enduring and popular events," said Alison Anthony, president and CEO of the Tulsa Area United Way. "5,000 people coming together in service on a single day creates great energy and real impact."

The Tulsa Area United Way's Day of Caring is also one of the nation's largest single days of community service.

The United Way's Trailblazers - companies and organizations that conduct their fundraising campaigns early during the summer - will reveal their results at the Day of Caring breakfast and program.

"The Trailblazers provide momentum and energy as we begin our annual United Way campaign for the community," Anthony said.

The breakfast and program will feature a performance of the cast of Up with People, an international travel program that empowers young adults to make a difference in the world through volunteerism, leadership and the performing arts.

Non-profit organizations, schools, municipalities and other organizations can still submit work projects for the Day of Caring, and volunteers can register to participate by calling 918-295-6630. Work projects may include general clean-up, landscaping, painting, light construction, school projects and outings for senior citizens. Individual volunteers, as well as employee groups from large companies and small businesses are invited to participate.

Day of Caring t-shirts are available to order online while supplies last at tauw.org/tees

For more information about the Day of Caring, visit www.tauw.org.

LA FIESTA DE TULSA AT GATHERING PLACE: Latino and Hispanic cultures were celebrated at Tulsa's Gathering Place with La Fiesta de Tulsa on July 26. Thousands attended the event that hosted festive music, dance, art, activities, food and drink. Guests were entertained by live music performed by local and national talent, including international music sensation Diana Reyes. Other performers included Proyecto Insomnio, La Gozadera Band, Tonatiuh Dance Co., Baila Tulsa and more.

Whitmarsh-Oller RE/MAX Team Continues Expansion

By LESA JONES
Contributing Writer

“The fastest-growing RE/MAX office in the nation” is expanding its reach once again with the addition of a south Tulsa location at 91st Street and Memorial Drive.

Owners Amy Whitmarsh and Lori Oller acquired the former RE/MAX Life office, at 7506 E. 91st St., July 1, from RE/MAX Boone Realty of Columbia, Missouri.

Now with local ownership and a name change, RE/MAX Results Tulsa adds 15 full-time agents to their already successful team. Oller and Whitmarsh were selected as the Broker/Owners of the Year for Oklahoma in 2018 and RE/MAX Results has grown from seven to 80 agents just since 2017.

In addition, the dynamic duo also recently acquired a Bartlesville office and partnered with the city’s top producing agents.

Now with the expansion into Tulsa, RE/MAX Results once again aligns itself with agents who fit their standard of professionalism and world-class customer service.

Whitmarsh, one of the nation’s “Top 100 Realtors” three years

LESA JONES for GTR Newspapers

OVERSEEING EXPANSION: Lori Oller, left, and Amy Whitmarsh started with seven agents when they acquired RE/MAX Results in Owasso. Last fall, they purchased another RE/MAX office in Bartlesville and in July, they purchased the former RE/MAX Life office in south Tulsa bringing their total to 80 agents.

in a row said, “We are so excited to partner with the Tulsa agents and to enlarge the RE/MAX footprint throughout the greater Tulsa area.”

Oller has been a realtor since 2002 and became a managing broker in June 2016.

As owners, Oller and Whitmarsh have created a workplace culture that is unlike the typical real estate brokerage.

“We have an office of full-time professional agents lifting the standard for our profession,” Oller said. “Our agents are service-minded, learning-based and are willing to mastermind and share best practices with each other.

We often say, “All ships rise with the tide,” meaning when we lift each other up and support each other, we all succeed,” she said.

Whitmarsh added, “Our success comes from partnering with the right agents for the right reasons.

ENTHUSIASTIC AGENTS: With the purchase of RE/MAX Life in south Tulsa, RE/MAX Results added an additional 15 agents to their already successful team. Lori Oller and Amy Whitmarsh were named Broker/Owners of the Year for Oklahoma in 2018.

We want to grow, but not just for the sake of growing.”

She says they seek out agents who want to continue to learn, continue to be better and continue to develop their business practices with their Agent Development Program.

As sisters and business partners, Whitmarsh and Oller are endeavoring to set a new standard in what agents can expect from their brokers and owners. For them, agent-centered is not just a catchphrase. They provide unmatched support and knowledgeable experience to all of their agents.

RE/MAX agents average 17.0 transactions per agent per year compared to their nearest competing brokerage at 11.1 according to 2018 Real Trends 500 data. For more information or to schedule an interview, call Lesa Jones at 918-254-0600 or email lesajones@remax.net.

PSO Seeking Approval to Add Low-Cost Wind Energy

As part of its long-range plan to increase reliance on natural gas and renewable energy resources, Public Service Company of Oklahoma (PSO) has filed an application seeking regulatory approval to add 675 megawatts (MW) of Oklahoma wind-generated power to its energy mix. This reflects a 45.5 percent share of 1,485 MW total requested in conjunction with its sister company, Southwestern Electric Power Company (SWEPCO).

The proposal includes partial ownership in three Oklahoma wind generation facilities located in seven counties in north central Oklahoma – Alfalfa, Blaine, Custer, Garfield, Kingfisher, Major and Woods. The three facilities represent approximately a $2 billion investment in Oklahoma and PSO’s 45.5 percent ownership share is projected to save PSO customers over $1 billion, net of cost, during the time they’re in service.

“Our long-range goal at PSO is to rely on a well-balanced mix of natural gas and renewable sources like wind to meet the needs of our customers,” said Peggy Simmons, PSO president and COO. “We’re excited about this opportunity because it will save our customers money and boost the state’s economy with new investment and tax revenues.”

Oklahoma wind power currently makes up approximately 20 percent

(1,137 MW) of the energy serving PSO’s customers. The company’s long-term plan shows customers will benefit from additional wind energy beginning in 2022. PSO began a competitive bidding process in early 2019, which determined these resources deliver the most overall value to customers.

PSO is pursuing this acquisition in conjunction with its sister company, Southwestern Electric Power Company (SWEPCO). The amount of generation acquired by PSO or SWEPCO can be scaled to align with individual state resource needs, as determined by the respective state commissions. The wind energy will come online by December 2021 pending regulatory approvals.

PSO’s current energy plan also includes increased natural gas and solar generation resources to meet PSO customer needs over the next 10 years.

Tulsa HBA Wins National Awards

The Home Builders Association of Greater Tulsa was honored with two national awards, the Best Association Operations Program and Best Membership Recruitment Plan Implemented, at the National Association of Home Builders Association Management Conference in July.

The Best Association Operations Program was given for the creation of the Membership Center, where all members can find available resources and tools to benefit their membership all in one place. The Best Recruitment Plan award was given for the Fall 2018 Paradise is Calling membership drive, where the Tulsa HBA recruited over 80 members.

“These awards illustrate the innovative programs that HBAs across the NAHB Federation are developing for their members,” said Mike Means, Executive Officers Council (EOC) president and executive vice president of the Oklahoma HBA. The Association Excellence Awards is an annual program designed to recognize the outstanding accomplishments of state and local home builders’ associations and executive officers in the field of association management. EOC membership is comprised of the staff executives who direct more than 650 NAHB-affiliated state and local home builders’ associations representing more than 140,000 home builders in communities across the United States.

The mission of the Home Builders Association is to advocate for the home building industry while promoting ethical business practices and standards.

As “the voice of Tulsa’s housing industry,” the HBA of Greater Tulsa helps promote policies that will keep housing a local priority, and aims to provide and expand opportunities for all consumers to have safe, decent and affordable housing.

Founded in 1942, the HBA of Greater Tulsa currently has approximately 1,000 members. About one-third of HBA members are home builders, and/or remodelers. The remaining members are associates working in closely related fields within the housing industry, such as mortgage finance and building products and services.

The association is member-driven, with a professional staff of nine in Tulsa. More than 70 members serve on the association’s board of directors, which helps set the association’s agenda.

The HBA’s various groups provide a wide range of services to members, focusing on key issues such as remodeling and green building, promotional events and philanthropy. The association also represents the industry’s interests with local government and strives to ensure that housing remains a priority when laws are made and policies are established.

The HBA of Greater Tulsa’s builder members construct nearly 70 percent of the new homes built each year in the Tulsa Metro area.

VAST CHANGES: Sign company men worked diligently during a recent August rain to place a new Vast.bank sign at the company’s location near East 81st Street and South Yale Avenue in Tulsa. The company has changed its name from Valley National Bank.

GOING UP: The new Vast Bank headquarters building across from ONEOK Field in downtown Tulsa is taking shape. Expected to open in December, the building will include a rooftop “In the Raw” sushi bar, rotating art installments and office space.

NET: The National Energy Dialogue Continues

The first International Energy Policy Conference was held in 1992. One of the speakers of the conference stated, “I think most Americans would welcome messages from an industry expressly committed to the importance of what it does, confident in its ability to manage risks, and willing to defend its important work against extremist assault. Most Americans understand the need for secure supplies of affordable energy. And they always embrace conviction.” This quote best summarizes the importance of the conference, and especially dialogue. The conference theme and dialogue has been and continues to be “striving for energy efficiency and environmental preservation.”

Since the inception of the conference, it has hosted dignitaries, Fortune 500 companies, industry experts, ambassadors, and delegations to discuss energy efficiency, environmental preservation, and the whys, hows and solutions of a national energy plan. The conference, which launched in the Oklahoma City area, has hosted events in Tulsa, Washington, D.C., Houston, Denver and Dallas as well as other cities throughout the US.

National Energy Talk Present and Future

We found, for example, that our Facebook page “America Needs America’s Energy” has a following of over 22,000 people across the US.

Therefore, this is an example of an area where National Energy Talk can complement the industry and be an active voice on social media.

With the launch of National Energy Talk (NET), what once was an annual conference has expanded into a media-driven platform with year-round engagement. Today, NET is helping lead a national dialogue on energy issues, views, and solutions through events, publications, video, audio and online content. NET believes in the power of people: “Nothing moves without energy.”

By MARK A. STANSBERRY

NET is National
National Energy Talk is a platform engaging a national dialogue on energy issues, views and solutions. We address the needs, plans and issues that all types of energy face today. Through discussion, we can create a national energy vision.

Join the Talk

The founding principle of NET remains steadfast: the availability of reasonably priced energy is paramount to the economic and business development both in the United States and other countries around the world. Your involvement can help continue to bring about this change.

A National Energy Conversation in the Heartland

National Energy Talk officially launched on May 1, 2017. Many thanks to Exploring Energy Radio Show for airing the announcement and to Oilman Magazine and GTR Newspapers for their great support through our columns!

The 2019 and 2020 plans are underway. Keep up with the activities of National Energy Talk (NET) by visiting the National Energy Talk page on Facebook.

Future Goals

It is important that the message is national in scope. Therefore, future goals include visits in Washington, D.C., Houston and other US cities. As consumers and stakeholders of energy, we must drive the process, evaluating how we can best leverage our natural resources here at home to ensure long-term energy independence and security.

Future generations are depending on us. America needs America’s energy!

DEQ NOTICE OF TIER II PERMIT APPLICATION FILING

A Tier II application for an air quality acid rain permit renewal has been filed with the Oklahoma Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) by Green Country Energy, LLC, 12307 S. Florence Ave., Jenks, OK 74037.

The applicant requests approval to obtain an acid rain permit renewal from the DEQ Air Quality Division at the Green Country Energy, LLC facility located at 12307 South Florence Avenue in Jenks Oklahoma, 74037 located in Tulsa County.

In response to the application, DEQ has prepared a draft permit (Permit Number 2018-1439-ARR3), which may be reviewed at the Tulsa County public library in the city of Jenks or at the Air Quality Division's main office (see address below). The status of all permit applications is also available for review in the Air Quality Section of the DEQ's web page: www.deq.state.ok.us This draft permit would authorize the facility to emit the following regulated pollutants: NOx = 802 TPY, CO = 802 TPY, SO2 = 35.4 TPY, VOC = 137 TPY, and PM10 = 247 TPY.

The public comment period ends 30 days after the date of publication of this notice. Any person may submit written comments concerning the draft permit to the Air Quality Division contact listed below. Only those issues relevant to the proposed renewal are open for comment. A public meeting on the draft permit renewal may also be requested in writing at the same address. Note that all public meetings are to be arranged and conducted by DEQ/CSD staff.

In addition to the public comment opportunity offered under this notice, this draft permit is subject to U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) review, EPA objection, and petition to EPA, as provided by 40 CFR § 70.8.

If the Administrator (EPA) does not object to the proposed permit, the public has 60 days following the Administrator's 45 day review period to petition the Administrator to make such an objection as provided in 40 CFR § 70.8(d) and in OAC 252:100-8-8(j). Information on all permit actions and applicable review time lines is available in the Air Quality section of the DEQ web page: www.deq.state.ok.us/

For additional information, contact Gregory Holler at 12307 S. Florence Ave. in Jenks, Oklahoma 74037 or call (918) 296-6479 or contact DEQ at: Chief Engineer, Permits & Engineering Group, Air Quality Division, 707 N. Robinson, Suite 4100, P.O. Box 1677, Oklahoma City, Ok, 73101-1677 or call (405) 702-4100.

Meeting New People, Trying New Places the Goal of Bourbon Tulsa Weekly Social Club

By DJ MORROW INGRAM
Contributing Writer

“Please don’t make this story about me. Bourbon Tulsa Weekly is not about me,” stressed Michael Patton.

But it’s hard not to. Patton is the creative brain behind a relatively new “social club” that meets each week to “try out new places and meet new people” (according to the club business card). And its success isn’t surprising coming from the man who was at the forefront of Tulsa’s environmental and recycling efforts, led the Metropolitan Environmental Trust 22 years, created the Tulsa Bull Run, helped spur Ozone Alert Days and is now the executive director of Land Legacy. But he’s right. This story is about Bourbon Tulsa Weekly. The Michael Patton story (which is fascinating, inspiring and funny) is for another time.

Each Tuesday at 5:30 p.m., an ever-changing group of people, often strangers to each other, gather at a different Tulsa establishment for an hour of socializing, networking and just having a good time. Although the name of the “social club” is Bourbon Tulsa, the consumption of alcohol is secondary to the mission of the club.

“It’s all about a safe, positive way for Tulsans to get out, meet new people and experience new venues,” Patton said. “We also hope it helps these local, small businesses get new customers in the door.”

The name of the club (no dues, no officers, no club business) was chosen because “bourbon is truly an all-American liquor” that has even been recognized by the United States Congress as a “distinctive product of the United States,” Patton said. Tuesday was chosen because it’s a night when there is less going on in the active Tulsa nightlife and one of the harder nights for local businesses to draw crowds.

“There are probably a handful of people who actually drink bourbon at the meetings,” said Patton. “Most of the women drink wine and most of the men drink beer, but we do have some bourbon aficionados who will drink and compare bourbons.” Several of the businesses have catered to the name: Bread and Butter Kitchen offered bourbon pecan pie, the Tulsa Press Club created a special bourbon menu and The Brook offered bourbon tastings.

“The bar managers and owners have all been so gracious about hosting the club and are enthusiastic about getting on the schedule,” Patton said.

Nikita Layson, co-owner of 473 Bar and Backyard with her husband, Andrew, was enthusiastic about hosting the group in early August.

“We’ve only been open about three and a half months so this is a great opportunity for us to get new people through the doors and see who we are,” Layson said. “We think 473 is perfect for this type of group – we’re nestled in the quaint Kendall-Whittier neighborhood, our menu is focused on locally produced and boutique wines and beers and we aim for a ‘chill vibe’ with great music.”

Facebook. “I loved the idea of visiting a new place that I might not otherwise go to and meeting new people. If it works out to be good for my business, that’s a plus.”

Local attorney and former city councilor Terry Doverspike commented that he liked that there is no structure, no dues, no expectations and no political agenda to the group.

“Although I’ve somewhat retired I’m not interested in sitting on the couch watching ‘Jeopardy,’” Doverspike said. “I love that this group is so diverse. It crosses generations, occupations, ethnicities.

ing up or committing to anything. It’s technically just one hour, it’s not a private club, you can always bring friends or relatives with you and it exposes you to different businesses.”

Communication for the club is managed through a Facebook page, Bourbon Tulsa Weekly, although it does maintain a Gmail account. Patton has scheduled locations through the end of the year with no repeats until the one-year anniversary Jan. 7, 2020 when the group will return to the Tulsa Press Club, the site of the first meeting. The attendance ranges weekly from 10 to 40. Patton is always the first to arrive. He greets everyone and makes sure no one is sitting alone.

“The idea is so simple it’s simply brilliant,” said Betty Dalsing, a local artist. “It’s a great way to meet new people and reconnect with old friends.”

Patton is happy with the success of the club and says his only concern will be if the numbers grow to where it won’t fit into some of Tulsa’s smaller establishments. But it’s a problem he will enthusiastically attack.

“Years ago I started my career wanting to change the world,” he said. “Now I just want to change the world’s mood.”

If your mother was diagnosed with cancer, how would you want her to be treated?

That's the way we care for you.

When Briana learned her mother had breast cancer, she never imagined she would be diagnosed with the same disease a few years later. She wanted the same cutting-edge treatment options and compassionate care her mother received, so she went to Cancer Treatment Centers of America® (CTCA), where she received both—all in one place, all with one team, all working together to fight her cancer.

We call that unique approach the Mother Standard® of care.

B.A. Mayor, City Manager Attend White House Event

On July 25, the White House Office of Intergovernmental Affairs hosted select state and local delegates from five states to a Regional State Leadership Day Conference. Broken Arrow Mayor Craig Thurmond and City Manager Michael Spurgeon were among those invited to attend. Other delegates represented Oklahoma, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska.

Briefings and discussions were held with senior administration officials, including Vice President Mike Pence, Secretary of the Interior David Bernhardt and Deputy Secretary of Agriculture Stephen Censky, on issues pertinent to the respective states and communities represented and on how the administration is empowering local government to advance shared priorities. Those priorities include combating the opioid (drug) crisis, improving infrastructure and rural prosperity, promoting affordable housing, driving economic development through deregulation and opportunity zones, and disaster recovery and resilience.

Spurgeon said, "It's always an honor and a pleasure to be invited to the White House for any purpose. This conference was yet another excellent event showcasing the president's and his administration's complete dedication to empowering local governments to tackle the priority issues they face every day, such as the ongoing opioid crisis, infrastructure and economic development. All of these are important issues for Broken Arrow."

Presenters in the event were William Crozer, special assistant to the president and deputy director,

White House Office of Intergovernmental Affairs; Mark Harvey, special assistant to the president and senior director for resilience, National Security Council; Ray Alexander, director for contingency operations, U.S. Army Corp of Engineers; Stan Gimont, deputy assistant secretary for grant programs, U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development; Keith Turi, assistant administrator of the recovery directorate, Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA); John Melle, assistant U.S. trade representative for the western hemisphere, Office of the U.S. Trade Representative; Secretary David Bernhardt, U.S. Department of the Interior; Deputy Secretary Stephen Censky, U.S. Department of Agriculture and Rural Development; Loren Smith, senior advisor,

New Casey's is Coming to 111th and South Aspen

By BOB LEWIS
Contributing Editor

The greater Broken Arrow trade area will welcome its third Casey's General Store in December expanding the company's presence in the community that includes stores at 2400 E. Albany and 11085 S. Hwy 51.

Casey's General Stores, Inc., is a chain of restaurants and convenience stores that is especially well known for its pizzas and sandwiches. The company is headquartered in Ankeny, Iowa, a suburb of Des Moines, and currently operates some 2,100 stores in 16 Midwestern states.

The business was born in 1959 when Donald F. Lamberti leased an old country store from his father in Des Moines. After nine years of operating that location, which he remodeled into a convenience store, his gas supplier and friend, Kurvin C. Fish, suggested that Lamberti buy the Square Deal Oil Co.

He followed his friend's advice and purchased a service station with three-bay garage in Boone, Iowa. Using the knowledge gained from his store in Des Moines, he converted that operation into a convenience store as well.

A third store was built in Waukee, Iowa, a small community with a population of only 1,500 people. This was the first Casey's built totally from scratch but it marked the beginnings of what can be described as a great American business success story.

Today, the chain has more than 19,000 employees and net income in excess of $318 million.

GTR is told the coming store will be one of the company's new generation outlets, making it larger than its sister sites with additional cooler capacity and an expanded dining area.

Another big difference is the fact it will be located in the heart of south Broken Arrow helping expand business development in that part of the city.
