This year, Gratiot County's Fair for Youth is a Virtual Affair

By Linda Gittleman

For most folks in Gratiot County, in and out of the 4H and agricultural community, the Fair for Youth is a big part of summer. But not this summer. Like most events in the state and in the Covid-19 ravaged country, it's sort of been cancelled. Not entirely, however. For this asterisked summer, the Gratiot County Fair for Youth is called the Consumers Energy Show and Go, said Brian Gardner, fair coordinator. That is, the kids will get to show the animals they've spent months or a year raising and training. They will do that in person in front of the judges at the fairgrounds. Once that's done, however, they must take their animal - horse, pig, chicken, cow - and go back home. The animals will have to be washed at home too and not, as in the past, on the fairgrounds. The public is not invited for the Show and Go that takes place from July 25 to Aug 1. Nevertheless, Grandma and Grandpa - and the rest of the community - can watch from the comfort of their living rooms as the action is live streamed on the fair's Facebook page, Gardner said. Following state mandates, Gardner said, "We have to be creative how we do things here." There will be no carnival, no fair food, no rodeo. "It's more just for the kids," he said. A handful of people will be allowed to camp there but not the nearly 200 who've normally held early reservations each year. Judging for the still exhibits - food, woodworking, clothes - will be done in "Zoom rooms," he said. There will be no still exhibit sales. But the animal auctions will take place and they too will be live streamed. Only 100 people will be allowed on the fairgrounds at any time. Each exhibitor will be allowed to bring two people for his or her show- usually mom and dad, Gardner said. Bathrooms will be open and cleaned "as much as possible," he said adding that only five people may be in at a time. Intentions are to make the whole thing as safe as possible. Social distancing will be practiced. Thanks to Consumers Energy and other generous donors, the fair will go on, however limited, Gardner said. But the Fair for Youth will be losing money. Parking fees - one of the biggest money makers - is gone. And expenses continue, he said. That said, "It's "virtually" the best fair ever."

A truly different fair but oh so welcome

By Linda Gittleman

When Dylan Macha first learned that 4H meetings would be cancelled until September, he thought it was likely that the Gratiot County Fair for Youth would be cancelled this summer. For the 20 year-old son of Dan and Patty Macha, this was to be his last year as an exhibitor at the fair. The Montcalm Community College student was therefore beyond pleased when he learned the "Show and Go" variation of the fair would continue - unlike the Montcalm and Isabella County fairs that have been cancelled for the year, "The exhibitors have done a lot of work, practicing every day," he said. Just like Macha himself. He has several years experience raising and showing pigs and this year he'll be showing "Rocky" his 220 pound animal who is, he said, "a great pig." There is no doubt however, that he'll miss the fair of the past. "I'll miss all the people," he said. "It's a special week out of the year. The atmosphere is always something to look forward to." He said he would miss the showing of the animals as it was in the past and all the people watching. This year, each exhibitor is only allowed to bring two people. He said he'll also miss the rodeo, the horse pull, as well as camping out at the fair. Even so, he saw some positives for this year's fair. Showing animals can be stressful, especially when all your friends and relatives are there, not to mention your competitors, he said. This year's first time exhibitors - and there are some - should likely experience less stress. Yet they can still "get the feel of showing," he said. And he pointed out that the animals are normally kept and cared for for the whole week of the fair. This year's one day showings eliminates that. No question that this year's fair is a huge difference from last year. "But I'm 100 percent looking forward to it," he said.

Good Luck to all the 4-Her's this week!

GCCFY is proud to present the 2020 Consumers Energy Show & Go Showcase

Absent traditions, memories can still be made at the "Show and Go."

By Linda Gittleman

Haley Cary, who just graduated from Alma High School, is one of the few who will be camping at the fairgrounds for the week of this year's "Show and Go" fair. That's because she is a student representative member of the Gratiot County Fair for Youth Board. And the board members will be needed throughout the week. The daughter of Jake and Shelley Cary, Haley will be attending Montcalm Community College where she will study animal nutrition, she said. Delighted that the board decided to have the animal exhibition and sales if little else, Cary acknowledged all that she will miss from previous fairs. "Hanging out with the other kids (who show different animals)," she said of one of the important features of the fair she will miss. "I'll miss the rodeo and carnival," she said. "But it's the environment - getting to talk to people - that I'll miss." She will be helping other 4-H kids who are exhibiting for the first time. And it won't be a "normal" fair exhibition. But some have attended shows throughout the year and have learned along the way. One of her friends and first time exhibitor "understands it'll be different this year. Every kid understands it. It's not a normal fair." Even so, the exhibitors will at least have a chance to show off their months or year-long animal projects.

No blue snow cones, no hanging out with friends, but the show will go on.

By Linda Gittleman

Kassidy Acker has been a participant in the Gratiot County Fair for Youth for about 10 years. The recent St. Louis High School graduate, now 17, will again be showing a 6 month old feeder she calls Robbie Rae. Showing your animal at the fair can be stressful, she said, and she's even going to miss that. "You want to make sure he's prepped and clean and he's not acting up at that specific time," she said of that stress. "After it's over, it's OK." This year's "Show and Go" fair should allow for an easing up on that stress, she said. If the fair board hadn't decided to continue with the livestock shows and animal sales, "I'd be very disappointed." After working with an animal for all those month, she would have to ask: "Was it seemingly for nothing? Just sell him at an auction?" The "Show and Go" was the best the fair board could do under the circumstances, the daughter of Brian and Kathy Acker said. "I'm glad we have the opportunity to show," she said. But if there's one other thing she's really going to miss about the traditional fair - besides hanging out with her friends - it's the blue snow cones from one of the vendors.

"The office staff and nurses are top notch."

"Everybody makes you feel like family."

"I was a new patient and was impressed with the staff's friendliness."

"Always professional."

"Everything has been exceptional."

Committed to Caring For Your Family

Family Practice Center in Alma is your Go-To Place for all your primary medical care needs from office visits to hospital stays, including pregnancy and delivery. We work hard to accommodate short notice appointments for our patients with sudden illnesses.

Our practice is made up of faculty physicians and resident physicians, allowing you to benefit from two expert perspectives at every appointment. Faculty physicians have years of experience in training other physicians including our resident physicians, who have recently graduated medical school with the most up-to-date training and have chosen to advance their careers in a hands-on experience.

We are welcoming new patients and strive to schedule first-time appointments within two weeks.

You can expect:

- Care for the entire family – from newborns to seniors
- Pregnancy care – including delivering babies
- Convenient online scheduling
- Sports physicals
- Friendly, compassionate staff
- Pediatric care – infants/children
- Senior care (geriatrics) – older adults
