Think to Stop the Fear (Part 2)

I ended my last [letter] by saying that I am afraid there is no end to the stupid things people will do so they can feel safe from the virus.

[Dr. Anthony] Fauci suggested the other day that people could protect themselves further by wearing goggles. Next we'll see people wearing goggles with their masks as they drive alone in their cars, jog and bike. I so do not want to see people covering themselves in plastic wrap.

My fear upon concluding that people have to think if we are going to stop the fear and end the madness, grows worse. Now thousands of people are acting as vaccine test subjects.

Some of the human guinea pigs think they are heroic. Vaccines should be tested for years on animals, even before Bill Gates tests them on the children of poor black parents in other countries who have no recourse if their children become sterile or die from them; but governments don't have time for testing.

Guinea pigs are lining up because they are still afraid they might get a virus which 98 percent of people fully recover from. They are afraid they might get a virus which will make them so sick they won't even know they have it. In Minnesota, they are afraid they might get a virus with a three percent fatality rate compared to five and seven percent influenza mortality rates for the 2018 and 2017 seasons.

I am afraid that people have to understand that everything we are doing to stop the spread of the virus is fundamentally wrong because we should not be trying to stop the spread of the virus, and that is unthinkable for most Americans now.

We set out to SLOW the spread of the virus for two weeks to "flatten the curve" so as not to overwhelm medical facilities. Since then, government ordered us to do everything we can to STOP the spread, and everything we have done has been suicidal.

We should have allowed the virus to work its way through the healthy population resulting in natural immunity. Despite government interference and incompetence, the virus has done so anyway while government managed to kill off many more of us.

Looking ahead, progressives now rule Minnesota, and the Democrats who voted seven times against ending the state's first lockdown will be re-elected; progressives will begin to rule the nation in 2021 (if not then, certainly in 2025), and the collateral deaths and suffering as a result of the 2020 pandemic lockdown will continue for years. Eventually my great-grandchildren will read my columns, and other children will laugh at videos of people social distancing and locking down in 2020; wearing masks, goggles and plastic wrap to protect themselves from a virus in the same way we laughed at films of children practicing duck and cover drills to protect themselves from a nuclear blast in the 1950's.

Lueck 'disgusted' as Walz continues effort to block Enbridge Line 3

State Rep. Dale Lueck, R-Aitkin, said he is disgusted with Gov. Tim Walz's latest effort to stop the replacement of Enbridge's aging Line 3 pipeline across northern Minnesota.

The Minnesota Department of Commerce announced Tuesday it is again filing an appeal on the Minnesota Public Utilities Commission's recent decision to re-issue a certificate of need and a route permit for the project. The PUC has twice approved the project, but Lueck said Minnesota's governor continues to use the Department of Commerce as a means of blocking the project and this is at least the third time the governor has chosen to delay and obstruct the Line 3 pipeline.

"I am deeply disgusted by the governor's continued refusal to allow this project to move forward," Lueck said. "Governor Walz's decision puts the environment here in our part of rural Minnesota at continued risk. His action again stabs the hardworking men and women of the trade unions in the back while, at the same time, Minnesota's construction industry shed another 2,000 job during the month of June. Minnesota's unemployment rate remains the highest among the five states in our region."

Lueck said his frustration is twofold. First, he said, the pipeline is half a century old and operating at half capacity due to its age. By continuing to block the replacement project, Lueck said Walz is demonstrating an "appalling disregard for the protection of the environment in rural Minnesota." Second, Lueck said the governor's action continues to deny hard working trade union pipefitters, equipment operators, electricians and carpenters over $2 billion of work that would be invested to replace the pipeline and construct new pump stations. The new pipeline and pump stations also would provide millions of dollars of new property tax revenue for counties and townships across northern Minnesota.

"Gov. Walz and Department of Commerce Commissioner Steve Kelley continue to waste Minnesota taxpayer dollars on frivolous court appeals on a project that has twice been approved by the Public Utilities Commission," Lueck said. "Replacing this aging pipeline ensures protection of the environment, puts a $2 billion-plus investment into the paychecks of hard-working Minnesotans and provides a stable, long-term source of property tax revenues for rural counties and townships across northern Minnesota."

Lueck said he continues to work tirelessly in support of this project, including meeting with the governor urging him to allow the pipeline to be replaced. Lueck also has been a vocal member of a bipartisan group of 17 state legislators across northern Minnesota that formally urged the governor to drop his effort to overrule the PUC's certificate of need approval and move this project forward.
