Why expand the existing station?

Safety

The station no longer meets national health and safety codes. Firefighters risk injury pulling on gear next to moving trucks; lack of ventilation exposes them to high levels of contamination from diesel exhaust.

Size

The station lacks adequate training and work space; storage is extremely limited. Newer-model fire trucks are a tight fit, making them susceptible to damage.

Service

The current station met the city's needs in 1973; new hazards since 1973; population growth and technological advances now require an upgrade to meet the future.
