*Experience
The Holidays
With All
Your Senses*

Some people feel the need to slow down and enjoy this time of year with taking the time to savor the flavors of the goodness and blessings that we experience in the autumn - winter.

We are blessed to live in a countryside of beautiful nature and surrounded by a pace that is slower than others.

Aromatherapy helps to change our moods, such as smelling evergreens and cinnamon for holiday festivities. Also lavender is good to calm and soothe, peppermint to invigorate, and orange for uplifting depression. Handmade gifts are special for decorating and gifting such as ceramic angel ornaments, crystal jewelry, angel paintings, nature photography, and native American dream catchers and natural angel creations.

We all like to dress in layers, other hand created clothes such as hand painted silk scarves, wool shawls, knit hats, scarves and mittens are in fashion right now.

You will be able to find many of these wonderful crafts and services at the angel days holidays spiritual holistic faire at Leesport Farmers Market Banquet Hall, Leesport, PA on December 18 & 19.

Relax and rejuvenate with us. Contact me, Kimberlee dawn, 484-363-7356 for information.

Include Good Fats And Carbs In A Healthy Eating Plan

Come the end of the holiday season, many people resolve to rest, recharge and get back to healthy eating habits.

Time magazine reports that losing weight and getting fit are the most popular New Year's resolutions, but also the ones that people are most likely to abandon after a short time. That may be because New Year's dieters are too often choosing diets that are impractical and not conducive to long-term success. Some may stop eating certain foods or ingredients entirely, while others look to diets that require a level of commitment beyond busy adults' capabilities.

Many fad diets target fat and carbohydrates, but dieters may not know that fat and carbs are necessary for a healthy metabolism. According to Dr. Walter Willett of the Harvard School of Public Health, low-fat diets don't work for many people. In fact, dozens of studies have found that low-fat diets are no more healthy than moderate- or high-fat diets and may, in fact, be worse. Foods that are low in fat may be full of ingredients that can be detrimental when eaten in high amounts. Processed low-fat foods can be made to taste better with copious amounts of salt or sugar. Some low-fat foods are actually high in simple carbohydrates, which can cause spikes in blood sugar and increase bad fats called triglycerides in the blood.

Simple carbohydrates are generally those that break down fast and do not provide much value beyond the initial energy burst. Although some simple carbs, such as fructose and lactose, can be beneficial and are generally found in healthy foods, it's best to avoid simple carbs.

Eating healthy doesn't mean avoiding carbohydrates and fats altogether. The key is to find good fats and carbs that provide a host of benefits. Good fats, such as monounsaturated fats, polyunsaturated fats, and omega-3 fatty acids, help to manage mood, maintain mental acuity, fight fatigue, and control weight. Good fats are largely found in olives, nuts, legumes, soy, and fatty fish. Keep total fat intake to 20 to 30 percent of your calories.

Good carbs are complex carbohydrates. They're starches that take a longer time to metabolize in your digestive system. Good carbs will raise blood sugar, but they will keep it at a stable level for an extended period of time. Complex carbs usually contain a lot of fiber, which can help keep a person feeling full for long periods of time. Plus, they help keep digestion moving smoothly to help you avoid constipation. Fibrous vegetables, fruits, whole grains, and beans are high in fiber and are good carbohydrate choices. Some foods contain both good carbs and good fats.

Eating healthy means finding a balance that includes the right fats and carbohydrates.

I Don't Need To Advertise

You're Right... There is a time NOT to advertise, when...

1. You have no competition.
2. You have all the business in town.
3. There are no new people moving into your area.
4. You want to keep your large inventory.
5. You have more business than you can handle.
6. The birth rate is zero.
7. You have more than enough friends that shop your business, keeping you far to busy.
8. You've netted your third million (after taxes).
9. You have no desire to work hard.
10. You would have to hire more people to handle the additional business advertising brings.

The time to start advertising is...
When you don't agree with all the above.

The place to start advertising is...
The one that has a combined circulation of 71,500 homes.
