SPRING HOME & GARDEN

Spring Gardening Checklist for a Beautiful Yard Year-Round

Here's a checklist to help you as you get your flower beds, trees, shrubs, and other areas of your yard cleaned up. It's broken down into early, mid-, and late spring so you can plan out your garden clean-up tasks and hit each area of your landscape before summer arrives.

Early Spring

1. Clean up flower beds

Clear away dead leaves or any other debris from winter storms from the soil surface where you are planning to plant annual flowers and veggies. Remove protective winter mulch from around perennials and ornamental grasses, and cut back last year's dried foliage. Remember to wear gloves, especially when working with plants with prickly leaves, to keep your hands protected from cuts and scrapes.

2. Divide perennials

Dividing perennials is a budget-friendly way to fill your garden with more plants or share them with friends. It's also good for keeping your existing perennials healthy; sometimes, if your plants grow in a large clump, the middle can thin out after a few years, leaving a bare spot. Dividing the clump will encourage new growth.

3. Add fresh mulch around perennials

One of the easiest ways to make your yard look nice is to add a fresh layer of mulch to garden beds. This also helps the soil retain moisture for your plants. It often takes more mulch than it seems to cover a bed, so it's a good idea to get a little more than you think you'll need. Spread mulch evenly with your gloved hands or use a rake, being careful not to layer it on too thickly around your plants because this could cause problems such as diseases. Keeping the layer level also helps it stay in place whenever it rains heavily or is windy.

Mid-Spring

Halfway through the season, you should start seeing your spring landscape take shape as more and more bulbs, perennials, shrubs, and trees start growing again and even blooming. And with most of the clean-up done, you can get started on adding new plants to your garden.

1. Clean bird feeders

Some people like to take down their bird feeders in mid-spring and put them away until fall. If you want to leave them up year-round, now's a good time to take them down, wash them out, and fill them up with fresh seed or nectar.

2. Make notes as you watch the spring show

Some of your spring bulbs should be starting to flower! Enjoy the blooms, and take note of any empty spots where you want to plant bulbs later in the fall.

3. Plant new perennials and cold-hardy annuals

Freshly planted perennials need a little time to get settled and grow new roots before the hot summer weather hits. And for some quick color, add a few cool-season annuals like pansies or snapdragons around your yard. They also work well in containers to brighten up your front porch.

4. Add new trees and shrubs

The earlier you can do this, the better, so your trees and shrubs have enough time to grow new roots before temperatures start getting hot.

5. Apply mulch

Once you're finished planting add a fresh layer of mulch around all your new plants. If you mulch now before weeds have a chance to sprout, you'll eliminate most of the weeding next year.

Late Spring

In late spring, you can start cleaning up flowers that have already bloomed. It's also time to get planting in earnest to fill out your garden.

1. Deadhead bulbs

Remove dead blossoms from spring-flowering bulbs; this encourages the plants to store energy for next year rather than use it to make seeds. Be sure to let the foliage die back on its own without removing it until it is completely yellow or dried up.

2. Shop for summer annuals

Pick out flats of your favorite summer annuals like petunias, impatiens, and zinnias; remember to pick ones that aren't in bloom yet for stronger plants.

4. Plant summer-blooming bulbs

While spring-blooming bulbs should be planted in the fall, summer-blooming bulbs like dahlias and glads should be planted once there's no more threat of frost. Check your area's average last frost date for a general idea of when to plant these bulbs, then get them in the ground after the last frost once the ground has warmed up. With this spring landscaping checklist, you'll have one of the best-looking gardens on the block.

Home Improvement Projects to Focus on This Spring

• Roof Repair and Maintenance

By having your roof inspected and maintained, you make sure any issues, no matter how big or small they are, can be detected and addressed. In doing so, you avoid costly repairs and, possibly, premature roof replacement. You also avoid costs associated with a failing roof, including property damage and health problems. More importantly, it helps extend the life of your roof.

A roof inspection is usually done at least twice a year: one in the spring and another in the fall. However, if inclement weather like a heavy downpour or a strong storm happens in your area, be sure to check your roof and get in touch with a storm damage repair contractor as soon as the weather clears. If your roof is 10 years old schedule your maintenance every year.

• Siding Replacement

There's only so much upkeep you can do to keep your current siding from negatively affecting your home's aesthetics. If it looks faded or stained, or frequent cleaning no longer works in restoring it to its original condition, it's better to invest in a siding replacement project. Cosmetic deterioration also runs the risk of concealing structural issues, including cracks and gaps that can let moisture in or insects that can infest your home. Thus, it is in your best interest to deal with the source of the problem as soon as possible.

Another reason to replace your siding this spring involves your home's energy use. Has your monthly energy bill been on the rise for the past few months despite not using your HVAC that much? Your current siding could be the problem. The underlying layers could be damaged enough to interfere with your home's thermal envelope, affecting your property's overall insulation. With new siding, you won't have to worry about spending more on your heating and cooling.

• Gutter Protection

Gutters are often overlooked, but they play an essential role in keeping your home protected from extensive water damage. They catch the rainwater running down from your roof and direct it towards the downspouts and away from your home. However, as with most home exterior elements, they are prone to numerous problems. These include clogs and other damage which can severely affect your gutters' drainage capabilities.

For sure, you have gutter cleaning on your list of spring home maintenance tasks. But then, having to climb up a ladder to remove leaves and other debris stuck inside the gutters can put you at risk of getting injured. Although you can hire someone to regularly clean or repair your gutters, it would be much better if you invest in a gutter protection system. It is a better, long-lasting and more cost-effective option over gutter cleaning and repair.

• Window Cleaning and Replacement

Spring can be one of the most beautiful times of the year, but not if your windows look old and unsightly. Like your roof and siding, they can also greatly affect your home's curb appeal, which is why you have to make sure they are fully functional and flawless at all times. You can start by giving them a thorough cleaning to maintain their beauty and effectiveness. Be sure to schedule this important home maintenance task on a cloudy day; the sun's heat can dry the water quickly and leave water spots on the window glass.

After you've cleaned all your windows, conduct an intensive inspection. Check for any sign of damage on the window frame and glass, particularly on the seals. Reseal worn-out caulk, or replace old weather stripping to prevent drafts or moisture from entering your home. If the damage is beyond repair, however, consider investing in energy efficiency replacement windows. In doing so, you not only beautify your home's exterior and interior, but also increase indoor comfort without wasting too much energy for heating and cooling.

Are You Hard of Hearing?

A major name brand hearing aid provider wishes to field test a remarkable new digital hearing instrument in the area. This offer is free of charge and you are under no obligation.

These revolutionary 100% Digital instruments use the latest technology to comfortably and almost invisibly help you hear more clearly. This technology solves the “stopped up ears” and “head in a barrel” sensation some people experience.

If you wish to participate, you will be required to have your hearing tested in our office FREE OF CHARGE* to determine candidacy and review your results with the hearing instruments with our hearing care specialist. At the end of this evaluation, you may keep your instrument, if you so desire, at a tremendous savings for participating in this field test. Special testing will be done to determine the increased benefits of this technology. Benefits of hearing aids vary by type and degree of hearing loss, noise environment, accuracy of hearing test, and proper fit. This is a wonderful opportunity to determine if hearing help is available for your hearing loss and get help at a very affordable price.
