Handwriting

Ah...snow days!
Have you ever read about a writer sitting down to their computer in their PJs and having the most productive day? How about the mom who gets up in the morning, gets her kids off to school, does a day of housework, and realizes at 4 o'clock that she is still in her PJs? How about the child that never changes from his favorite PJs? Well, that happens to many people. The question is.....Why? Aren't PJs the most comfy cotton (usually) or silky blends. They are lighter in weight than street clothes. They give you a sense of peace and safety; you know that place that you want to stay all day. Well, today is snow day. We received 30 inches of snow this week and I am loving it just hanging out in my comfy, stay at home in the safe zone, PJs. This is because my sensory system likes the snug feeling. Let's explore the sensory system. Your body has eight senses. Yes, I know that you learned about five in school. In addition to vision, hearing, touch, taste, and smell; our body also has two senses called the proprioceptive, kinesthetic, and vestibular systems. These systems are internal and we don't even realize that they are working with every move we make. The proprioceptive system, or deep pressure, system is like a pressure sensitive scale in our joints. It tells us how much pressure we have on the joint at that very millisecond in time. For example, if we are doing push-ups, our shoulders, wrists, and hands are sensing on the pressure scale the increased pressure. Conversely, when we are throwing a ball, those same joints are noting a decrease on the pressure gauge. Our bodies learn this pressure contraction and co-contraction state from the time we have the sense of touch in our nervous system, prebirth. Our kinesthetic sense kicks in when we are moving with looking. For example, how often do you really look at your feet when walking. Unless you are injured, probably not much. You look ahead. Another example, when you are driving your car, how often do you look where the brake is before stopping. The ability to know where to place your feet (and other parts of your body) without actually looking at the body part is kinesthesia. Our last hidden sense, the vestibular system is the one that allows to love or hate the roller coaster. It is the one that makes those of us who hate it, get dizzy. The two-year-old who spins and spins and spins is also using his vestibular system. We use these systems all the time. If you would like more information about how your senses are involved in your everyday life, check out our website at www.yourtherapyservices.com or call me at 610-914-9919. Thanks for using your kinesthetic, vestibular and proprioceptive systems to read this article. Cheri L. Dotterer, MS, OTR/L, Occupational Therapist Therapy Services, LLC
