Tulsa State Fair Set to Return to a Full Action-Packed Venue This Fall

*Event to be Held
Sept. 30 Through Oct. 10*

By GRANT ROWL
GTR Feature Writer

In 2020, the Tulsa State Fair focused solely on the Junior Livestock Events, and in 2021 the livestock shows will continue to highlight the root of agriculture fairs across America. The Tulsa State Fair staff is poised to have some of the most prestigious livestock in the state competing for scholarship funds during the 11 days and illustrating their passion to make tomorrow better. Being in Tulsa and making the stage is a lifelong goal for many.

The Tulsa State Fair, presented by Ford and Oklahoma Ford Dealers, is coming back and is ready to welcome the community in a safe, clean and fun environment. This year's event will be held from September 30 through October 10 and is expected to be an action-packed and exciting event.

Last year left a void for many fair goers from Tulsa and throughout northeastern Oklahoma, who last year missed out on their favorite fair foods, rides and live music. The personnel of the Tulsa State Fair are now ready to welcome visitors to enjoy quality family entertainment, with new shows that include the Jet Pack Flying Circus, Aussie Kingdom Kangaroo Show and Paul Bunyan's Lumberjack Show to pique your interest. Also, a crowd favorite returns with the Perondi's Stunt Dog Show, which will feature a new attraction with dock dives and water.

Every night the Pepsi Fall Concert Series, at the Oklahoma Stage, will be booming with national touring acts, including P.O.D., Dru Hill, Zach Williams, Josh Turner, Vanilla Ice & the Ying Yang Twins, Dirty Honey, Eli Young Band and Chris Jansen. Along with these artists, both Sundays will feature a Hispanic celebration featuring Alicia Villareal and La Energia Norteña. The lineup is jam packed with a genre for everyone. A limited number of VIP tickets are available.

In 2020, the Tulsa State Fair focused solely on the Junior Livestock events, and in 2021 the livestock shows will continue to highlight the root of agriculture fairs across America. Some of the most prestigious livestock in the state will be competing for scholarship funds. Making the stage is a lifelong goal for many youth, showcasing their hard work, dedication and commitment to excellence. For these participants, this is their championship, and the Tulsa State Fair staff is honored to host the youth of Oklahoma and provide a platform to succeed in the future.

The Arvest Action Alley will be full of twists, turns and exhilarating excitement on the rides and carnival games. The Tulsa State Fair partner, North American Midway Entertainment, is enthused to be coming to Tulsa, which is one of their favorite events due to Tulsa's welcoming community. One of the new rides will be a double decker Merry Go Round, which will provide spinning fun for children, and of course the children at heart.

Safety is always the Tulsa State Fair's top priority, and the Tulsa State Fair staff will be taking protective measures to provide a safe and clean environment. The Fair team is working hard to prepare for the arrival of visitors, and the Tulsa State Fair looks forward to celebrating the return of fun to Tulsa, for 11 Days of Awesome.

KUDOS of the MONTH: TU's KWGS & KWTU Radio

Public Radio Tulsa is a listener-supported service of the University of Tulsa. Public Radio 89.5 KWGS and Classical 88.7 KWTU are non-commercial FM stations broadcasting from Kendall Hall on the TU campus.

KWGS hosts National Public Radio, which is celebrating its 50th year of broadcasting.

From a tower located near Coweta, KWGS covers northeastern Oklahoma with a power of 50,000 watts; KWTU serves Tulsa with 5,000 watts. The stations of Public Radio Tulsa are affiliates of National Public Radio, American Public Media, Minnesota

Public Radio, and the British Broadcasting System.

Public Radio Tulsa is funded, in part, by the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

The History:

KWGS began broadcasting on October 19, 1947 and was the first FM station in Oklahoma and one of the first educational stations in the country. The call letters reflect the generosity of oilman William Grove Skelly. KWTU's sign-on of Oct. 15, 2004 celebrated the return of classical music to the Tulsa airwaves and owes a debt of gratitude to John K. Major, owner of Tulsa's first commercial classical music station. KWTU is the first station in Oklahoma to broadcast in digital HD Radio.

Rich Fisher is the general manager of Public Radio Tulsa.

City of Tulsa and Lobeck Taylor Family Foundation Unveil Improvement Plans for Tulsa Market District

The City of Tulsa and Lobeck Taylor Family Foundation (LTFF) unveiled plans recently to make significant infrastructure and beautification improvements to the Tulsa Market District to restore the historic stretch of Route 66.

Planned infrastructure improvements include updates to traffic lights, waterlines, the sewer system and roadways. Beautification projects include the addition of iconic Route 66 signage and lighting, ADA compliant sidewalks and ramps and more than 77 trees and benches.

The project began in July and construction is estimated to take roughly one year to complete.

“One of the greatest investments we’ve made over the past several years has been in Route 66,” Mayor G.T. Bynum said. “I’m thankful to the Lobeck Taylor Family Foundation for its help in accelerating improvements in this area, and I’m eager to see the increased opportunities this project will bring to our beloved Mother Road.”

LTFF is providing advance funding to the City of Tulsa through Tax Increment Financing (TIF) to renovate the stretch of Route 66 from just north of East 12th Street to East 10th Street off of Lewis and from South Yorktown Avenue to South Atlanta Avenue off of 11th Street. Funding will be provided at no interest to the city, and LTFF will be paid back up to the amount spent on the project over time by sales taxes generated within the district. The City and LTFF will coordinate infrastructure and beautification projects to enable the full impact of the work to be realized as soon as possible and minimize the interruptions caused by construction.

“We built Mother Road Market to complement a district full of locally-owned businesses,” said Elizabeth Frame Ellison, president and CEO of the Lobeck Taylor Family Foundation. “We are proud to support Tulsa Market District’s goal to be a hub for artisans, artists and makers, while maintaining our vision for the equitable growth of our neighborhood.”

“I’m thankful for the dedicated effort from the City of Tulsa and the private sector to further promote the most famous road in the entire world - Route 66,” Oklahoma Lieutenant Governor. Matt Pinnell said. “The time is now to recapture the popularity of the great American road trip, and the economic impact it will deliver.”

In 2020, LTFF helped launch the Tulsa Market District Business Association to improve the organization and promotion of local businesses. The business association will provide resources and updates to members during road construction.

About LTFF:

Founded in 1997 by Bill Lobeck and Kathy Taylor, the Lobeck Taylor Family Foundation (LTFF) has grown into a second-generation investment in making Tulsa an innovative, collaborative and thriving city. Under the leadership of CEO Elizabeth Frame Ellison, LTFF aims to decrease the barriers associated with Tulsans achieving their goals. To fulfill this mission, LTFF acts as a Grantmaker, innovator, and convener. LTFF supports the entrepreneurial and innovation ecosystems in Tulsa through its owned-and-operated programs including Kitchen 66, Mother Road

THD Encourages COVID-19 Vaccinations

As we have done since the start of the pandemic, we rely heavily on the guidance from our local healthcare leaders to make informed decisions to protect our neighbors.

Tulsa's data and data from across the United States verifies that vaccination is key in helping prevent serious illness and death from COVID-19.

The expression I've heard time and time again from our local healthcare leaders is that COVID-19 has become a pandemic of the unvaccinated.

From Tulsa's Mayor

By G.T. BYNUM
Mayor of Tulsa

Unfortunately, we have had a variety of challenges thrown our way throughout this pandemic and a lot of misinformation has been circulated, but the Tulsa Health Department has been the steady voice for data-driven advice. The Tulsa Health Department is independent from city government and does not play partisan politics, rather they look at the data and use their expertise when making recommendations.

Our local health care leaders have been clear that the only way to end this pandemic is to increase our vaccination rate.

As kids get back to the classroom, I can't help but think of the sacrifices they have made throughout the last year, and the sacrifices their parents, teachers and loved ones have made.

If each of us did this one thing – getting vaccinated – the health outcomes in Tulsa could be much better.

In the last several weeks as cases have increased, more and more people are seeing the reasons why so many of us have made the decision to get the vaccine. We're not just getting vaccinated to protect ourselves, but we're getting vaccinated so that others can receive timely care in hospitals for things that aren't related to COVID-19.

If you're on the fence about getting vaccinated and have questions, don't listen to me. Go talk to your doctor. Your doctor knows your health background better than anyone and can give you the best advice.

In short, I am incredibly grateful for our local healthcare leaders who have put their health and safety on the line for all those who they serve, and the best thing we can do right now to show our gratitude for their service is by getting vaccinated.

Cassia Carr to Serve as Tulsa's Next Deputy Mayor

Mayor G.T. Bynum recently announced that Cassia Carr is Tulsa's Deputy Mayor. The Deputy Mayor serves as the acting mayor in the mayor's absence and coordinates policy matters on behalf of the City.

As Deputy Mayor, Carr oversees the Administrative Division of City departments - including Municipal Courts, Human Resources, Information Technology and Customer Care – as well as ongoing public safety support initiatives and collective bargaining. She will also work with Deputy Chief of Staff Rodrigo Rojas in coordinating the ongoing 1921 Tulsa Race Massacre Graves Investigation.

"Cassia is brilliant, hard-working, and passionate about Tulsa," Mayor G.T. Bynum said. "As the President of the Tulsa Economic Development Corporation board and as the Vice Chair of the Tulsa Authority for Economic Opportunity, she has been closely engaged in our efforts to grow Tulsa's economy. She brings strong private sector experience to our leadership team at the City of Tulsa, and I am excited for the great things I know she will achieve for our community in this new role."

Prior to the role as Deputy Mayor, Carr served as an attorney for Williams Companies focusing on contracts, real estate and supply chain. Prior to Williams Companies, she worked at Winters&King, Inc. and Hall Estill law firms in Tulsa and as a district sales leader at FritoLay.

"I love Tulsa, and it has been my dream to serve our City in this capacity," Carr said. "I am honored to come alongside Mayor Bynum and the rest of the team at City Hall to both meet the immediate needs of the Tulsa residents and help make their long-term goals and visions for our city a reality."

Carr holds a Juris Doctorate from the University of Tulsa, a Bachelor of Science in International Business and Spanish from Oral Roberts University, and achieved 60 credit hours of basic courses from Tulsa Community College. Carr is also fluent in Spanish, an opera singer and a member and trustee at Southminster Presbyterian Church. She loves spending time with her husband, Joel Carr who

Tulsa Crime Stoppers

Crime Stoppers, Tulsa Police, Tulsa Fire Department, Bank of Oklahoma and former wide receiver of the Green Bay Packers Donald Driver are bringing the NFL Flag Football experience to Tulsa.

The purpose of this partnership is to inspire, educate and inspire Tulsa youth through a positive community relationship. The Driven NFL Flag Football experience is based on the principal that all kids, regardless of their zip code or skill, deserve to have access to high quality youth sports engagement.

The resulting interaction with Tulsa Police and Firefighter volunteer coaches allows area youth to participate in sport and get to know these members of the community. NFL Flag Football targets youth who face significant barriers to opportunities like these today. Whether it be transportation or funding, Driven strives to provide an equal opportunity to all children in the Tulsa community. Bank of Oklahoma is working with Driven to make a reality by providing scholarship funding to sponsor youth participants over the next three years.

Team sports like those created through this project improve interpersonal relationships within a community by teaching youth valuable lessons about teamwork. In many instances, coaches can also take on valuable roles as mentors to young people lacking role models at home.

Tulsa County Commissioners Placing Priority on American Rescue Plan Funding for Broadband

As the pandemic spread across the country there was a major shift in the way people performed their jobs, got their education, saw their doctor, visited with the family, or went to church. With social and personal distancing separating us from our normal routines and relationships, we had to rely upon the internet, sometimes referred to as broadband, in order to continue many aspects of our daily lives.

For many this was very difficult or impossible to do because the broadband connection didn't exist where they were, the connections were poor, or the speed was very slow. Along with so many other things, the pandemic made us realize how disconnected people were when they had to depend upon broadband for their livelihood, family connections, education, and mental health.

A recent report shows 42 million Americans lack high speed internet service, 22 million Americans 65 and older lack service, and the average monthly cost was about $60 for basic broadband. In Tulsa County about 13% of households are without internet access and about 10% of households do not have a computer, smartphone or tablet. These numbers are much higher in the rural areas of our state and county.

Having reliable, fast, and affordable high-speed internet is as fundamental as acquiring electricity in the first half of the 20th century. In many cases we will not return to the ways we connected with others before the pandemic. Broadband expansion is here to stay and in our future.

Broadband connection is the equity issue of our times. If you can't connect, you can't compete. Beyond being a basic necessity, high speed broadband is also an accelerator of opportunity in today's connected world.

Tulsa County officials play a crucial role as policy makers in pursuing sustainable solutions to broadband access, affordability, and reliability. That is why the Tulsa Board of County Commissioners is placing a priority on how and where the American Rescue Plan funds received by the county are spent on broadband infrastructure in Tulsa County.

To begin the development of an expanded broadband plan, the City of Tulsa and Tulsa County Information Technology staffs have been working for many weeks to look at where current broadband infrastructure is and what will it take to complete the middle mile and last mile into areas which are either unserved or underserved.

This expansion and development of new and faster broadband could be to businesses, public facilities, non-profit agencies, congregate living facilities, or medical facilities which serve those who don't have access to broadband.

The guidance provided by the Treasury Department on the use of the American Rescue Plan funds for broadband is very clear that any new broadband service has to provide very fast service with both sending and receiving information. Funding can also be used to help those who have little experience with broadband to learn how to use it.

Bridging the digital divide is one of the many important opportunities to come out of the effects of the pandemic. With the American Rescue Plan funds, Tulsa County will do its part of investing in a future that is equitable to all of the citizens in Tulsa County.

Greenwood Rising Black Wall Street History Center Celebrates Historic Opening to the General Public

Museum Utilizes Multimedia, Artifacts to Tell the Story of Resilient Greenwood District

Greenwood Rising, the world-class history center located near the heart of the Greenwood District in Downtown Tulsa, celebrated its grand opening August 4. The center honors the icons of Black Wall Street, memorializes the victims of the massacre and examines the lessons of the past to inspire meaningful, sustainable action in the present.

The museum utilizes multimedia experiences and carefully curated artifacts to tell the remarkable, resilient story of Greenwood and the community. Visitors are invited to reflect and engage in conversation throughout the experience to spur action in their own lives.

"It has been exciting to watch the reservations come in for tours of Greenwood Rising over the coming weeks and months and we are so grateful to our funders for allowing the first year to be free for all visitors," said Phil Armstrong, interim executive director of Greenwood Rising.

Through truth-telling and education for all, Greenwood Rising aims to repair lingering historical racial trauma while working towards restoration as well as chart a new, vibrant and inclusive course for the future. The efforts will create a container for visitors to reflect, commit to racial justice and reconciliation and promote enhanced race relations.

Under the leadership of Senator Kevin Matthews, founder and chair of the Tulsa Race Massacre Centennial Commission, the commission leadership team invited active commissioners, community influencers and leaders within the diversity, equity and inclusion space to build Greenwood Rising's foundation, strategy and governance as an independent entity. The nine-person, inaugural board reflects diverse skill offerings, knowledge and representation from the community.

"I am honored to be the inaugural board chair for Greenwood Rising," said Jessica Lowe-Betts, diversity and inclusion consultant for ONEOK. "I believe this center, experience and programming will elevate the conversation about the massacre to move toward healing, reconciliation and reparations."

Joining Lowe-Betts on the board are Sam Combs, Maggie Hille-Yar, Cingy McGhee, Brenda Alford, Alecia Brown, Dr. Deborah Gist, Hannibal B. Johnson and Sandra Quince.

The center hosted a dedication ceremony on June 2 of this year and hosted tours during a short, limited preview offering. 1921 Tulsa Race Massacre descendants were the first to visit the history center after the dedication. During the preview, North Tulsa residents, descendants and community groups were prioritized before the history center closed to finalize construction.

Greenwood rising is open from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. daily with the last tour beginning at 7 p.m. The museum is closed on Tuesdays. Admission is free for the first year, but registration is required. Visitors are asked to reserve times online at greenwoodrising.org/visit.

OPEN HOUSE WELCOME: Greenwood Rising Interim Executive Director Phil Armstrong welcomes visitors to the new Tulsa historic site.

NEW TULSA DESTINATION: The world-class Greenwood Rising History Center is located at 23 North Greenwood Avenue in Tulsa.

TCC's Signature Symphony Announces a Season with Beatles, Harry Potter, Gershwin

'Journey Together' Theme Includes Seven Concerts

Search Continues for Next Artistic Director, Conductor

Signature Symphony at Tulsa Community College announces the professional orchestra will return to in-person performances at the VanTrease Performing Arts Center for Education for the 2021-2022 season. With the theme Journey Together, the schedule includes seven concerts and continues the nationwide search to name Signature Symphony's next artistic director and conductor.

The new season, sponsored by TCCU Federal Credit Union, begins with three chamber music performances in the Fall followed by Christmas in Tulsa, a long-standing holiday tradition. Then, each of the three artistic director finalists will conduct a concert in Spring 2022.

"Despite a year of changes and interruptions, Signature Symphony played through the challenges to deliver artistic opportunities to our community members. We are looking forward to welcoming audience members back to our performance home," said Kelly Clark, School of Visual and Performing Arts Dean at TCC.

The season begins with "Cool and Classical: Jazz à la Light-house," on Saturday, September 18 with a musical journey to the 1950s and "The Light-house Café," a jazz club featured in the Hollywood movie musical

"La La Land." Then, Saturday, October 16, Oklahoma-based composer and member of the Chickasaw Nation, Jerod Impichchaachaaha' Tate, takes the stage with "American Indian Expressions," to discuss his composition style and present several of his pieces followed by "An Oklahoma Journey" with Signature Quartet and Signature Chorale on Saturday, Nov. 6.

Signature Symphony will resume traditional, full orchestra performances with "Christmas in Tulsa," featuring long-time collaborator Scott Coulter and showcasing Tulsa Sings! performers and finish the season with three concerts developed by the artistic director finalists Scott Seaton, Alejandro Gómez Guillén, and Robert Franz.

"These finalists represent the top candidates from our national search, and each brings their own style and personality to the Signature Symphony stage. As the COVID-19 pandemic took hold in 2020, we extended the search for our new artistic director until we could welcome them to Tulsa and allow our audiences to get to know the finalists and be part of the selection process," said Clark.

On Saturday, Jan. 22, 2022, Seaton explores a common theme between a famous rock band and the 19th century French composer Hector Berlioz. In "Love and Obsession: The Beatles to Berlioz," the program highlights the music written passionately about love with the Beatles compiling millions of obsessed fans and Berlioz using his obsession with a stage actress to inspire "Symphonie Fantastique."

In "Fantastical: Firebird meets Harry Potter," Guillén presents a symphonic journey of myth, magic and folklore on Saturday, February 26, 2022. The evening pairs John Williams' iconic movie score and Stravinsky's timeless masterpiece with music by the Brazilian-American powerhouse Clarice Assad and Argentina's versatile Osvaldo Golijov.

The season ends with "Trailblazers in American Music," as Robert Franz conducts a concert featuring American composers Florence Price and George Gershwin on April 9, 2022. Groundbreaking in their own ways, Price was the first African American woman to have an orchestral piece played by a major U.S. orchestra in 1933 and Gershwin's insistence that his opera, "Porgy and Bess," be performed only by African American singers was revolutionary in 1935 when first performed.

Tickets are $20 for general admission and on sale now for the first three chamber music concerts. Attendance will be limited to allow for physical distancing. Tickets for the full-orchestra concerts will go on sale later in the fall with packages and individual tickets available. Due to public health guidelines or TCC policy, the season schedule is subject to change.

For past season ticket holders, Signature Symphony staff will make every effort to accommodate seating preferences as the orchestra resumes normal ticketing and concert operations. Additional

DINING OUT IN GREATER TULSA

Brazilian Native Luciane Teles Bakes Up Success With Her Business Cupcakes by Lu

By KYLIE HAMMACK
Contributing Writer

For many, baking is a hobby or fun activity but for local business owner Luciane Teles it is a lifelong passion. Teles was born and raised in a coastal town in Brazil and fell in love with baking at a young age while helping in the kitchen. This childhood dream grew when Teles moved to Tulsa in 2009 so that a family member could study at Oral Roberts University. After seeing the wide variety of flavors and designs in American bakeries, Teles was inspired to begin experimenting with recipes of her own. However, out of all the unfamiliar American baked goods that Teles saw, one stood out the most: the cupcake.

Although very popular in Brazil now, cupcakes were not a widely known Brazilian dessert when Teles immigrated to Green Country. The Brazilian native took a liking to cupcakes because their single-serving approach allowed for a variety of flavors to be served at one event. Always trying to bring flavor to the forefront, Teles got to work adapting American recipes and aimed to create a frosting that was much less sweet than traditional American buttercream. Teles's frosting recipe along with others became instant successes within the Oral Roberts community and soon her online business Cupcakes by Lu was born.

Cupcakes by Lu was a hit and Teles was flooded with positive reviews and suggestions to open a physical bakery. Teles operated a brick-and-mortar location for a short time but unfortunately was not able to keep it open permanently. However, she has always dreamed of owning a bakery and hopes to find a permanent home for her business in the future. Until then, Teles sells all her products online through her website cupcakesbylu.com.

Teles may be known for her cupcakes, but by the popular demand of her customers, she now offers cupcakes, cakes, sugar cookies, cake pops, chocolate-dipped strawberries, and a variety of Brazilian treats such as brigadeiro. Her most popular cupcake flavor fuses a Latin classic with an American sensation and includes a vanilla cupcake filled with dulce de leche, topped with vanilla frosting, drizzled with caramel, and sprinkled with salt. Teles is committed to working with clients to bring their vision to life and loves innovating with many different themes, shapes, and designs.

Ultimately, Teles says she "likes to focus on all the little details" and strives to make sure her clients are happy with every aspect of their order from the flavors to the packaging. Always thankful for her loyal customers, Teles notes that the Latino community of Tulsa has played a large role in her success. Despite the uncertainty of the last year, Teles has managed to grow her business and makes many sacrifices to keep up with the constant stream of orders. Through many hours of hard work and determination, Teles has been able to accomplish many of her childhood dreams and has turned a passion into a way of life.

KYLIE HAMMACK for GTR Media Group

DELICIOUS OFFERING: Luciane Teles makes almost all aspects of her baked goods by hand and is constantly experimenting with new concepts for delicious sweets. She offers many different flavors of cupcakes and cakes including lemon, dulce de leche, red velvet, chocolate bomb, and vanilla bean

OSU Medicine Celebrates Opening of Hardesty Center for Clinical Research and Neuroscience

OSU Center for Health Sciences and the National Center for Wellness and Recovery held a ribbon-cutting ceremony July 14 for the Hardesty Center for Clinical Research and Neuroscience.

The Hardesty Family Foundation donated $2 million for the establishment of the center to aid in research and clinical trials related to NCWR's mission of addiction research and treatment.

Several members of the Hardesty family attended the ribbon-cutting event along with Interim OSU-CHS President Johnny Stephens, OSU President Kayse Shrum, U.S. Rep. Kevin Hern, Lt. Gov. Matt Pinnell and Tulsa Mayor G.T. Bynum.

"Oklahoma State University is committed to solving our society's most pressing issues," said Shrum, who previously served as OSU-CHS president and dean of the OSU College of Osteopathic Medicine. "In fact, the opioid crisis was the first pandemic OSU endeavored to find solutions to."

OSU Medicine opened its Addiction Medicine Clinic in 2018 and then established the National Center for Wellness and Recovery in 2019.

The 49,000-square-foot Hardesty Center, 1013 E. 66th Place in Tulsa, is another tool in responding and finding answers to addiction and substance use disorders across the state and country.

"This is such an important facility because of the research and innovation that will be done inside these four walls. It's important not just for the city and the region, but the state of Oklahoma," Pinnell said. "What OSU is doing right here is the beginning of something special for Tulsa and for Oklahoma that when people begin thinking about Oklahoma they think about the world-class unmatched research that will be done right here."

The center also houses the OSU Medicine Biomedical Imaging Center that utilizes an advanced MRI to support clinical studies of brain structure and function as well as other advanced technology to measure brain activity in infants, children and adults.

"The Hardesty Center for Clinical Research and Neuroscience is equipped with space for clinical trials and is home to the most advanced MRI system in the state," Shrum said. "The generous gift from the Hardesty Family Foundation will allow OSU and NCWR to find personalized, evidence-based therapies for those struggling with addiction."

City Salutes Hospitality House Of Tulsa

Hospitality House of Tulsa, a local nonprofit ministry that serves patient families from all Tulsa hospitals, is celebrating their 15th year of service in the Tulsa community. To help celebrate this significant milestone, Mayor G.T. Bynum officially proclaimed Aug. 24, 2021 as "Hospitality House of Tulsa Day."

The Hospitality House of Tulsa is a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization, providing lodging, meals and support services to families of inpatients and outpatients in the Tulsa area hospitals, traveling at least 30 miles to Tulsa to care for their loved one during a medical crisis. Since opening their first home away from home in 2006, Hospitality House of Tulsa has served over 7,400 families of hospitalized patients as well as outpatients receiving treatment in our Tulsa hospitals. With over 25,000 patients traveling to Tulsa for medical care each year, Hospitality House continues to be a significant resource, providing lodging, meals, prayer support, transportation assistance and more for about 460 families each year. Since opening, Hospitality House has served families from all 77 counties in Oklahoma, 48 states in the U.S. and eight foreign countries.

"We are so grateful for our Tulsa community that continues to support families traveling to Tulsa for critical medical care," says Toni Moore, Founder and CEO of Hospitality House of Tulsa. "For the majority of our families, unexpected medical crises like heart attacks, strokes, premature births, cancer, accidents and now COVID-19 require life-saving hospitalizations in our Tulsa hospitals. Unfortunately, a medical crisis also brings significant out-of-pocket expenses which can financially devastate a family. Tulsans have continued to provide genuine hospitality for these hurting families."

While many medical lodging facilities had to close during the pandemic, Hospitality House of Tulsa has remained open and continues to serve families. In order to keep hospitalized patients safe, visitation hours in most hospitals have been reduced, and family members of patients are no longer allowed to sleep in waiting rooms. Hospitality House provides a safe and supportive environment for these family caregivers to stay close to their hospitalized loved one.

To help Hospitality House of Tulsa celebrate its 15th anniversary, they are looking for individuals, churches and corporations to help the families by volunteering, providing a meal or making a donation of $15 or more. For more information on how to help families at Hospitality through donations or volunteering, visit HHTulsa.org or call 918-794-0088.

New Ernest Childers VA Outpatient Clinic Opens in Tulsa Near Hillcrest Hospital South

In July, the new 180,000-square-foot Ernest Childers VA Outpatient Clinic in Tulsa opened its doors for Veterans in Eastern Oklahoma.

The new clinic, located across the street from Hillcrest Hospital South at 8801 South 101st East Avenue, will serve approximately 36,000 Veterans and offer new services such as chemotherapy and infusion, endoscopy and mammography. The new facility replaces the Tulsa clinic at 9322 East 41st Street, which closed in August 2021.

"I would like to welcome all Veterans in Eastern Oklahoma to the new Ernest Childers VA Outpatient Clinic," said Mark Morgan, director, Eastern Oklahoma VA Health Care System.

Before the opening, Morgan said, "Over the next few weeks, we'll be opening a greatly expanded clinic that offers more imaging services, increased women's health care, primary care and behavioral health. You'll find that access to the clinic is much easier than the current clinic on 41st with expanded parking for Veterans, family, and staff. It's an honor for me and my entire staff to offer this new health care clinic to our Veterans."

The clinic provides primary care, radiology, prosthetics, specialty clinics, nutrition & food service and social work services. Additional services include audiology, mental health, rehab, chemotherapy and infusion, dental, optometry and endoscopy.

A full list of services offered at the clinic includes,

From A-H: Audiology, Blind and low vision rehabilitation, COVID-19 testing and vaccines, Cancer care, Cardiology, Dental, Dietary care, Dermatology, Endocrinology, Gastroenterology, General Surgery, Hand Surgery, Hematology.

From I-P: Lab, Mental Health, MOVE! Program, Nephrology, Neurology, Optometry, Orthopedics, Otolaryngology, Pain Management, Palliative Care, Patient Advocates, Pharmacy, Physical Therapy, Primary Care, Podiatry, Prosthetic and Sensory Aids, Pulmonary.

From R-Z: Radiology, Rheumatology, Social Work, Telehealth, Urology, Veteran Service Officers, Women's Clinic, Wound Care

Gathering Place Hosts Family Wellness Days

Gathering Place Family Wellness Days 2021 presented by OU Health Physicians Tulsa are designed to raise awareness and draw attention to different demographics and health categories in the greater Tulsa area. These risks are Kids Health, Womens' Health, and Mental Health.

In collaboration with community groups and local health providers, each of the 2021 Family Wellness Days provide access to free screening services, resources, demonstrations, and a wide range of group health amenities designed for early detection and prevention through proactive testing and education.

"At Gathering Place, our mission is to offer programming that educates, engages and excites, and Family Wellness Days does all three by bringing value through awareness to our Tulsa community, said Jonathon Townsend, Community Relations Manager at Gathering Place. "We are thankful for our continued partnership with OU Health Physicians Tulsa which allows us to bring these free services and resources to our Park."

The first event focusing on Kids Health was held in August, and the next Family Wellness days will include Women's Health on Saturday, Oct. 2 and mental health on Saturday, Nov. 13. All Wellness Days are free for the public to attend.

The August event presented by OU Health Physicians offered fun, kids focused activities including free fitness classes, resources, giveaways and a very special "Rumble Doll Clinic" in partnership with the Oklahoma Thunder. Children were encouraged to bring their stuffed animals to receive a "wellness check" during the Rumble Doll Classic. Rumble, the Thunder mascot, assisted OU Health Physicians medical residents in "examining" the stuffed animals and led an exercise class.

"OU Physicians is proud to partner with The Gathering Place to help make Tulsa a healthier community, said James. M. Herman, M.D., Dean, OU-TU School of Community Medicine. "Families from Tulsa and beyond look to Gathering Place to provide a healthy environment for all ages to enjoy activities and entertainment. We want to be part of that by offering wellness events targeted to this community."

RUMBLE FOR HEALTH: Rumble, the Oklahoma City Thunder mascot, entertained youngsters at Gathering Place during Family Health Day in August.

TCC, Senator Inhofe Address Nursing Shortage

Tulsa Community College and the staff of U.S. Senator James M. Inhofe recently held a joint announcement regarding federal money from the Fiscal Year 2022 appropriations and help for Oklahoma's nursing shortage. Over the past five years, the demand for qualified nurses in the Tulsa area has increased – and the coronavirus pandemic has made the need even greater. Accordingly, Senator Inhofe's announced a congressional funding request to help meet the needs of local healthcare providers and hospitals. TCC ranks in the top five percent of public, two-year institutions in granting health profession and related program degrees and certificates and the Nursing program is consistently one of the top five academic programs by the number of graduates. To date, the college has produced roughly 5,000 nursing graduates ready to enter the workforce as Registered Nurses upon successfully passing the National Council Licensure Examination for Registered Nurses (NCLEX-RN) through the Oklahoma Board of Nursing.

Tulsa Community College's Nursing Program has provided Tulsa and northeastern Oklahoma with thousands of excellent nursing professionals. The Nursing Program faculty have diverse backgrounds in both their professional and academic experiences. The faculty is focused on student success, providing students with optimum learning experiences in the classroom, lab, and clinical environments.

University of Tulsa Establishes School of Cyber Studies

As it advances its new strategic plan, The University of Tulsa is building on its long history of excellence in computer science and cyber security by establishing a School of Cyber Studies to house undergraduate and graduate programs in this rapidly evolving field. The School of Cyber Studies is housed in TU's College of Engineering and Natural Sciences.

"I am honored to serve as the inaugural chair of the new School of Cyber Studies that will engage faculty from across the university to prepare the next generation of cyber professionals at all degree levels," said Tyler Moore, Tandy Professor of Cyber Security. "The School of Cyber Studies is unique in that it will be primarily composed of faculty from multiple disciplines jointly appointed to the school."

The school administers the undergraduate minor in cyber security, as well as a master's in cyber security. The school also offers two new degrees: a bachelor's in cyber security and doctorate in cyber studies.

Courses in the new bachelor's program are designed to be hands-on and project-based, emphasizing experiential learning and partnerships with employers. In addition to computer science, the program draws on faculty expertise from engineering, business, law and the social sciences to cultivate broader perspectives that match how cyber pervades modern life. As such, the curriculum emphasizes both technical and nontechnical skills required for today's cyber workforce.

"The School of Cyber Studies comprises the best of what TU has to offer: remarkable faculty, state-of-the-art facilities, novel research and campus-wide collaboration. It will support our students and alumni as they seek to provide creative and sustainable solutions to cyber challenges facing governments, industries and organizations around the globe," said TU President Brad Carson.

TU's cyber program is certified by the National Security Agency and U.S. Department of Homeland Security as a Center of Excellence in Information Assurance Education, Research and Cyber Operations.

The university will seek accreditation for the B.S. in cyber security from ABET, the accreditor who certifies TU's bachelor's degrees in engineering and computer science. The B.S. in cyber security also aligns with NIST's National Initiative for Cybersecurity Education, which articulates cyber workforce competencies.

What encompasses cyber studies? The word cyber has its origins in the word cybernetics, a term used to describe the study of control systems and communications between humans and machines. We now use the word cyber as an adjective associated with activities that involve computers and computer networks. In that sense, "cyber studies" refers to the broader study of the internet and its impact on society in many different fields: health care, science, engineering, business, law, public policy, technology, privacy, computer secuity, cyber-physical systems and many others.

The interdisciplinary Ph.D. in cyber studies will draw on faculty expertise across TU to conduct cutting-edge research at the interface between cyber and many disciplines. "With the new doctoral program, the School of Cyber Studies will advance and mature the existing research strengths of the university, significantly contributing to the goals of the cyber initiative in the university's strategic plan," said Rose Gamble, senior associate dean of the College of Engineering and Natural Sciences and the Tandy Professor of Computer Science and Engineering.

Hands-On Training for the Changing World

The world has changed dramatically in the last year and a half. While society is slowly moving back to normal, other discoveries have come to the forefront. One of those discoveries is a serious shortage of qualified health care professionals entering the workforce, namely nurses. Tulsa Tech works to help fill that gap with four different nursing pathways.

A crucial part of any health care training is the hands-on clinical experience. The pandemic has made it difficult for students to get the clinical hours they need to graduate and move into the industry. To help meet that need, Tulsa Tech invested in three state-of-the-art simulation labs.

"Students can perfect their skills and provide care to the patient without the threat of positive or negative consequences," Candace Shoopman, Tulsa Tech's Simulation and Clinical Coordinator, said. "Instructors can then provide critical feedback and help them analyze their thinking to help provide the best care."

This high-tech learning center is housed within the Health Science Center on the Lemley Memorial Campus. These life-like simulators allow students to interact with patients like they would in a clinical setting.

"We can make the simulator respond to any situation, just like a live patient," Shoopman said.

The goal behind utilizing the simulation is simple, allow students to transfer the theory and skills gained in the classroom to a real-world setting. However, simply practicing the skills is not the only benefit.

"It increases the students' confidence," Dana Chandler, Coordinator of Practical Nursing Programs, said. "Once they get into the simulation, they see for themselves that they can perform the skills without an instructor or another nurse with them. They are doing it and making the decision, which promotes the critical thinking they need to flourish."

The simulations also provide students with an opportunity for needed feedback. Cameras record each session, and students can go back and watch their performance and give a self-critique before meeting with an instructor.

"The debriefing is a huge help for students," Chandler said with a smile.

"This is likely one of the most significant components other than the actual simulation," Shoopman added. "It allows students to link theory to the actual response."

The need for nurses is expected to grow over the next decade, with a peak around 2030. The most recent report, from 2014, by the United States Bureau of Health Workers shows Oklahoma will be short nearly 2,400 Licensed Practical Nurses (LPN) by 2030. The COVID-19 pandemic has only exacerbated these numbers.

Tulsa Tech is helping meet this growing need with our 15-month, all-day and 18-month, evening practical nursing program. These students leave with the ability to test for their LPN certificate.

The simulations also help alleviate the need for clinical hours, as they count toward certification. Students taking part in each simulation receive a nursing report just like they would in a hospital setting and can study that before taking part.

Both Chandler and Shoopman say they have seen benefits for the students

"I have seen a lot of a-ha moments," Shoopman said.

"Students improve in areas of weakness and can do self-reflection that is not always available in the clinical setting," Chandler said. "It will help when clinical space is not available."

If you are ready to step into a rewarding and in-demand career, then look no further than the nursing career options Tulsa Tech provides. To find a complete list of career training options, log onto tulsaitech.edu today.

Tulsa Tech Inducts Alfred L. Gibbs into Hall of Fame

Tulsa Tech's Superintendent/CEO Dr. Steve Tiger has announced former campus director and CareerTech pioneer Alfred "Al" Gibbs has been inducted in the Tulsa Tech Hall of Fame.

"Gibbs championed career and technical education, making the training we now provide a reality for the Tulsa area," said Tiger. "His passion for education, career training and visionary leadership make him a perfect choice to be recommended and recognized as a member of the Tulsa Tech Hall of Fame."

Gibbs was instrumental in recruiting the first 321 students to the new Tulsa Vo-Tech, in 1965. He would become the first campus director of the Memorial campus when Tulsa Tech became an independent school district in 1973. An innovative educator and administrator, Gibbs was a tireless advocate for expanded student opportunities.

JENKS EDUCATION

Cassandra Walker of Jenks Public Schools Named BancFirst ESL Teacher of the Year

Cassandra Walker, a newly appointed Title III English Language Development Coordinator for Jenks Public Schools, has been named the BancFirst ESL Teacher of the Year by the Oklahoma Foundation for Excellence, a statewide nonprofit that recognizes and encourages academic excellence in public schools.

The $3,000 award sponsored by BancFirst recognizes an exceptional Oklahoma English-as-a-Second-Language (ESL) teacher who has participated in the foundation's Teachers of English Learners Project and has demonstrated exemplary professionalism and practice in teaching English Learner students.

Walker, a Broken Arrow resident who recently served as Bixby Public Schools' EL coordinator and an English Learner teacher at Bixby Middle School, was nominated for the award by Bixby district administrators. The award was presented Aug. 16 at the Bixby Public Schools Administration Building, where Walker was recognized by colleagues from both districts as well as representatives from BancFirst and the Oklahoma Foundation for Excellence.

"English Learner teachers get to try on a new hat every day – actor, linguist, singer, artist, technical support and my favorite – tour guide," said Walker, describing how she had edited her middle school's map last year to include the languages of her students and spotlighting her classroom so EL students knew where to go for help.

Walker traces her love for teaching and learning language back to her childhood when she was selected by her fifth-grade teacher to become a buddy with a new student from Mexico.

"We would trade words in English and Spanish with each other at lunch, sing songs we learned, or draw pictures to communicate with each other at first," she recalls. "My fifth-grade buddy and I graduated together and are still friends today. Becoming a 'buddy' was my first experience with teaching and learning simultaneously. I knew then that teaching could be in my future."

As an undergraduate English student at Northeastern State University, Walker earned her certificate to teach ESL and developed her Spanish language proficiency. She was "hooked on helping others," volunteering to tutor exchange students and teach ESL classes at a local church. Her journey as an ESL educator later led her to teach English kindergarten for three years in Asia, to run ESL classes for inmates at the David L. Moss Criminal Justice Center in Tulsa, and to serve as an adjunct instructor at Tulsa Community College guiding adults through grammar and speaking classes. Walker, who earned a master's degree in English from Oklahoma State University with a Teaching English as a Second Language (TESL) focus, has taught in Bixby for the past seven years, with the last five dedicated to both teaching a coordinating the EL Program.

More than 800 educators from 104 districts who participated in the Teachers of English Learners Pilot Project in 2020-21 were eligible to be nominated for the BancFirst Teacher of the Year Award. Criteria for selection included demonstrated commitment to professional learning; professional practice; knowledge sharing; teacher leadership; parent, family and community engagement and communication; student growth; and effective use of technology.

Bixby colleagues praised Walker as a role model who goes above and beyond in her work as an ESL teacher and trusted resource to fellow teachers and families.

"As an ESL teacher and EL Coordinator, Cassandra is constantly researching best practices and participating in professional learning," her administrators wrote in their nomination. "In perhaps her most impactful skill, she shares these strategies with classroom teacher colleagues and EL teachers to help improve their content presentations. Her dedication to improving environments for her students outside her personal classroom illustrates her commitment to improving all aspects of her students' experience."

Walker has reached out to surrounding school districts to develop a list of resources and ideas to support classroom teachers in meeting the needs of their EL students. She also developed an outreach plan with the local YWCA to provide information sessions for the parents of Bixby immigrant students. When EL students were faced with the challenges of adapting to new Chromebook computers and distance learning during the pandemic, Walker tailored lessons to fit each student's needs and make them comfortable with the technology and skills needed to operate in a digital world.

"The Oklahoma Foundation for Excellence is proud to partner with BancFirst in presenting the ESL Teacher of the Year Award to Cassandra Walker," said Executive Director Emily Stratton. "Her commitment to supporting English Learner students and their families and to sharing ideas and best practices with fellow educators is second to none."

Walker was one of many Oklahoma educators who participated in the foundation's Teachers of English Learner Project, which uses a collaborative online platform to provide professional development, networking and support for classroom teachers in schools with high enrollment of EL students. The project, which recently completed its pilot phase, is now available to teachers statewide on the Oklahoma State Department of Education Oklahoma EDGE website at <https://osdeconnect.ok.gov>. The platform includes an ESL Certification Test prep course.

"Nearly 60,000 students in Oklahoma's public schools do not speak English as their first language, presenting a challenge for classroom teachers who often do not have the training or resources to effectively integrate English Learners into their classroom activities," said Lisa Pryor, Teachers of English Learners project manager. "As part of our teacher professional development activities, the foundation created the Teachers of English Learners Project to provide an anytime, anyplace professional learning hub for classroom teachers committed to providing quality instruction for their English Learners."

Walker said she has been fortunate to have an EL team in her districts to collaborate with, but not all educators in the field are that lucky.

"Being an English language teacher can be quite isolating," she said. "That's why professional learning communities, like those fostered by the Oklahoma Foundation for Excellence, are so important. They provide teachers with a feeling of value and belonging – a place to be heard, to learn, connect and grow."

Amanda Moore Named Site Principal at Jenks West Elementary by Jenks Schools

Jenks Public Schools has announced Amanda Moore as the new Site Principal at Jenks West Elementary.

Moore, who served as a Building Principal at West Elementary for the past four years, brings a total of 22 years of experience into her new role. She has been a classroom teacher at every elementary grade level (PK-4), and has worked at West Elementary since 2012.

"I am thrilled for the opportunity to continue at West Elementary in this new role," stated Moore. "This school means so much to me, and the support I have received from our staff members and parents has been truly overwhelming. I am so thankful to our district and our other administrators for placing their trust in me, and I am incredibly excited to welcome our students and staff back to West Elementary for the upcoming year. I look forward to carrying on the culture of continuous improvement and collaboration we have at Jenks Public Schools. This is a dream come true, and I can't wait to get started."

Moore began her career in education at Evangelistic Temple School in Tulsa before spending 11 years at Liberty Public Schools teaching kindergarten, first grade, and third grade. At Liberty, Moore began the first kindergarten/first grade multi-age program and was nominated for teacher of the year. In 2012, she accepted a position at West Elementary as a pre-kindergarten and kindergarten teacher in the Jenks multi-age program at Grace Living Center. Moore worked closely with Grace Living Center employees, as well as JPS administrators, to develop intergenerational learning experiences between her students and residents at Grace Living Center. She spent one year as a Curriculum Resource Instructor at West Elementary before moving to her role as Building Principal in 2017. Moore played a critical role on the team of staff members and administrators at West Elementary that helped the school achieve its current status as an International Baccalaureate School in the Primary Years Program.

"I have no doubt Amanda Moore will step in and do a sensational job as Site Principal at West Elementary," declared Dr. Stacey Butterfield, Superintendent of Jenks Public Schools. "She brings a wealth of knowledge to the position, and she is extremely well-respected by her colleagues. Most importantly, she has a heart for students. Her empathy and concern for the well-being of her students shines through in everything she does. I know she will continue to work tirelessly to create an exceptional learning environment at West Elementary."

Moore, a native of Orrville, Ohio, earned a Bachelor's degree in Elementary Education from Oral Roberts University and a Masters degree in Educational Administration and Curriculum Supervision from the University of Oklahoma. She and her husband, Jeremy, have one daughter, Isabella.

Looking Back:

Trojans Brought State Baseball Championship To Jenks District After Successful 2021 Season

By MIKE MOGUIN
GTR Sports Writer

Senior-turned-graduates Brooks Fowler and Dylan Hammond proved to be the difference-makers in the Jenks Trojans' baseball state championship win back in May.

The pair connected on a defensive play and each hit a home run to help Jenks to a 9-6 win against Mustang in extra innings in the Class 6A final in Enid.

The Trojans (33-10) opened the game with a 2-0 lead in the top of the opening inning, but found themselves down 5-2 in the third and 6-4 going into the top of the seventh. They would add two runs to tie the game before making the dramatic play in the bottom frame.

Mustang got in position to score a game-winning run when it doubled to right field.

"If that run scores, they walk us off and they win," said Fowler, who was at shortstop. But the Bronco runner made a mistake, setting the stage for the Trojans' miraculous play, in which Hammond, who played catcher, threw in the infield to Fowler, who then threw to his brother to force a key out.

"Their next batter (Chance Cox) squares around to bunt and kind of jabs at it and misses it and (Braeden Jones) on second base jumps out there and kind of slips and Dylan throws it down to second, so I jump up and catch it and the kid gets in a pickle, and I threw it to my brother (sophomore Chandler Fowler) at third base and he tagged him for the first out. So, it was a huge momentum shift."

Hammond also explained the play from his perspective.

"Basically, (Jones) got a double down the right field line and that was a tough spot to be in. The game was tied, and when you're the next guy up, you bunt and get the next guy over to third," Hammond said. "Whenever he went to bunt and missed it, I caught it and instinctively threw to second and it was a high throw and Brooks was there, the runner took off the third and he threw it over there and got the out and that was a big shift of momentum our way."

As the game moved into the top of the eight, Fowler and Brooks went to work.

After Ty Walls singled and stole second base, Fowler made a two-shot homer over the right-field wall to make it 8-6.

"Our two-hole (Walls) led off the inning with a single to left, and they told me to fake bunt steal, so I pulled it back and he stole second," said Fowler, now at Oral Roberts with hopes of playing in the pros. "They threw a ball, then they threw another ball the next pitch. So it was a 2-0 count and I knew a fastball was coming, so I sat back and it was on the outer half and I drove it to right field and it got out of the ballpark. It was just patience and confidence."

Hammond then made his homer over the left wall.

BEST OF THE BEST: The Jenks baseball team celebrates after winning the Class 6A state championship in May.

"I got up there and I wasn't trying to do too much and I got my pitch and I happened to hit it well. Before we knew it, we had three runs on the board that inning," he said.

"Dylan's homerun was the first of his life and it was his last at-bat of his baseball career, so it was awesome," Fowler said.

Mustang would not score in the bottom frame and the game was over. Jenks would finish with its first state title on the diamond in 19 years and fourth in program history.

"It was surreal," Hammond said. "I almost didn't believe it. We got strike three and it really didn't register right away, but we were state champions. Even now, it's like a dream thinking back about it. We dogpiled out there. I don't think any of us can put words to how it felt."

"It is extremely special," Hammond added. "That's what you're working for since you're a freshman in the program. We go in with a goal at the beginning of the year and that's to win the state championship."

"It was definitely unreal," Fowler said. "I expected us to be there because I knew how hard we worked. But at the same time, I knew there were some really good teams and they were going to be tough to beat. Once we got there, I wasn't going into the state championship really overconfident, I had the feeling we were the better overall team and once the final out was made, it was pretty awesome. We dogpiled, then I found my mom and dad and cried a little because that was the last baseball game I played in high school, so it was awesome to go out with a win."

Rick Dickson's Second Tenure as TU's Director of Athletics Well Underway

Courtesy The University of Tulsa

Rick Dickson is staying busy after his recent agreement to a three-year contract to serve as The University of Tulsa's Vice President and Director of Athletics.

Dickson, a native Tulsan and TU graduate, returned to his alma mater last September to lead the athletics department, serving as interim director. In February, the interim tag was removed from Dickson's title. He previously served as the school's Athletic Director from 1990 to 1994.

"Everyone knew Rick would be an outstanding athletic director when we welcomed him back to Tulsa in 2020," said TU President Brad Carson. "He has exceeded our expectations on every level and is an important part of the leadership team that is creating a renewed culture of excellence across campus. I appreciate all of Rick's hard work and am pleased he has agreed to stay on and lift our sports programs to even greater heights in the coming years."

Dickson's prolific career has also included leading athletic programs at Washington State University (1994-2000) and Tulane University (2000-2015). Programs under Dickson's guidance has seen dozens of conference championships and scores well above the national average in the NCAA's Academic Performance Rates.

Dickson's leadership, business acumen, energy and fundraising ability has resulted in a career that has covered 28 years as a collegiate athletic director. His drive to provide student-athletes the tools and support they need to grow academically, athletically and socially is at the forefront of his commitment as an administrator.

Upon his TU return, Dickson was immediately dealt with handling the COVID-19 crisis and positioning the athletic department for success on the field, the classroom and in the community. He has made positive strides in re-energizing alumni and the community in his first 11 months. Tulsa's fundraising total increased by 24-percent from a year earlier and 31-percent above the stated goal. He oversaw the complete renovation of the strength & conditioning facility, now the F.A. Dry Sports Performance Center, and has instituted the Hurricane Academy for Sport. On the field, Tulsa teams won three conference championships and played for three more league titles last season.

Dickson has become entrenched in the community. He currently serves on the Greenwood Chamber of Commerce Advisory Board and Tulsa Regional Tourism Board of Directors. Dickson has continued his membership on the USTA Collegiate Tennis Committee and Team Gleason Board of Directors, an organization to improve life for people living with ALS.

Dickson, who attended Tulsa's Bishop Kelley High School, played football for the Golden Hurricane before graduating from TU in 1977. His wife, Brenda, graduated from TU in 1979.

"Brenda and I are humbled and pleased to have returned to Tulsa working at our alma mater. Always proud to call Tulsa home, we have never been prouder than this past year when the Tulsa community joined us in supporting and sustaining the university and the athletic department through a remarkable year for TU Athletics. Contributing to campus and community life are core values we all share," said Dickson. "We look forward to this continued engagement with TU student-athletes and staff, the student body, alumni, fans and the City of Tulsa."

During his first tour of duty at TU, Dickson galvanized the city of Tulsa in support of Golden Hurricane athletics. Season attendance spiked for football and surpassed an all-time high attendance average of 31,000 fans for seven home games in 1991, while fans returned to the Tulsa Convention Center Arena after Dickson's hiring of basketball coach Tubby Smith. Basketball attendance grew more than 2,000 fans and reached a season average high of 7,300 in his final year at Tulsa.

Dickson lobbied bowl committees in 1991 for Tulsa's opportunity to participate in a post-season game, landing the Hurricane an appearance in the Freedom Bowl. He also was successful in getting Tulsa voted onto the College Football Association's Active Member list in 1991 as a major college independent. Dickson established the school's first statewide radio network, also in 1991, with the debut of the Golden Hurricane Radio Network.

He instituted several new fund-raising initiatives as well programs to improve the academic performance of student-athletes. Dickson coordinated the development of an academic advisor program for athletics while establishing "Operation Golden Hurricane," a community outreach program for TU student-athletes.

Before leaving Tulsa for Washington State in 1994, Dickson was instrumental in the university securing membership in the Western Athletic Conference, thus giving the football program conference stability. At Washington State, Dickson oversaw an athletics program that was recognized nationally for its success in dealing with gender equity issues. He raised funds for a capital campaign that funded scholarships and endowments, an indoor practice facility, and the renovation of Bohler Gymnasium. Washington State enjoyed its highest ever Sears Cup Ranking during his tenure, highlighted in 1998 by the football team's first Rose Bowl appearance in 67 years.

While at Tulane, Dickson is credited with helping the athletic program and community rebound after the destruction of Hurricane Katrina in 2005. Teams under his tenure won 41 conference titles and advanced to NCAA postseason play 36 times.

Following a 2003 Board Review that resulted in a unanimous resolution reaffirming the institution's Div-1A status, Dickson assumed the task of building a permanent foundation of support for Tulane

Athletics through the Perpetual Wave Campaign. During the review, Dickson guided the department through an intense campaign that saw football season ticket sales more than triple, as well as secure funding for the new Greer Baseball Field, Yulman Football Stadium, Devlin Fieldhouse, The Hertz Center and numerous other facilities and program updates.

Following his retirement from Tulane in 2016, Dickson formed R.P. Dickson Consulting LLC, which has assisted many universities with multiple projects including Title IX reviews, departmental organization, fundraising and marketing campaigns, and facility development.

In 2019, Dickson accepted a year-long role as the CFP New Orleans ambassador, serving the Extra Yards for Teachers Campaign that supports public school teachers of New Orleans.

The Dicksons have four grown children and six grandchildren.

The University of Tulsa sponsors 17 sports, including 10 women's (basketball, cross country, golf, indoor track and field, outdoor track and field, rowing, soccer, softball, tennis and volleyball) and seven men's (basketball, cross country, football, indoor track and field, outdoor track and field, soccer and tennis). The university has been a member of the American Athletic Conference since July 2014 and has won 22 AAC championships for the league's second-most titles during that time span.

Weiberg Takes Reins as OSU Athletic Director

Former Deputy Director Replaces Mike Holder, Now AD Emeritus

After spending the last four years as Deputy Athletic Director at Oklahoma State, Chad Weiberg officially recently moved into the role of Athletic Director.

He replaces Mike Holder, who after 16 years at the helm of OSU Athletics, transitions into the role of Athletic Director Emeritus.

As OSU's Deputy Athletic Director, Weiberg was the chief operating officer, second-in-command and responsible for the day-to-day operations of the athletics department. He served as Holder's administrative liaison for football and men's basketball and was responsible for football scheduling.

During his time as Deputy AD, he played a significant role in successfully navigating OSU Athletics through the COVID pandemic. Notably, he developed a partnership with the Oklahoma State University Center for Health Sciences that helped produce the planning and resources to keep Cowboy and Cowgirl student-athletes healthy, safe and ready for competition.

Weiberg was a key figure in several important initiatives that benefitted student-athletes and fans alike. A little more than one year after Weiberg's arrival, OSU added a director of counseling and sport psychology position within the athletic department to better serve the mental health of student-athletes. In 2020, Weiberg played a role in launching - and continues to serve as a member of - the Oklahoma State Athletics Council for Diversity and Inclusion.

He also played a key part in improving OSU's gameday experience. Highlights include the addition of one of the largest video boards at a college-only football stadium and the addition of alcohol sales at OSU athletic venues.

Weiberg is a 1994 graduate of Oklahoma State University, with a bachelor of business administration degree, and earned a master's in business administration from OSU in 2002. After earning his undergraduate degree, he served as the director of corporate sales and donor relations for OSU Athletics until 1999. He served as senior director of field operations for the OSU Alumni Association from 1999-2002 before becoming the director of development for the OSU Foundation/College of Business Administration from 2002-03. He held a similar role for OSU Athletics from 2003-04 before moving to Kansas State.

At K-State, Weiberg served the KSU Foundation as Director of Corporate Relations for a year before becoming the Director of Major Gifts for K-State Athletics in 2005. Weiberg assumed the lead role for K-State Athletics' Ahearn Fund in 2009 and, for his team's efforts, was recognized as the National Fundraiser of the Year by the National Association of Athletic Development Directors in 2014. Weiberg was the Senior Associate Athletic Director for Development when he left K-State in 2015 to become Deputy Director of Athletics at Texas Tech University, a role in which he served for two years before returning to his alma mater in 2017.

College athletics have played a large role in Weiberg's life from an early age. His father, Mick, and brother, Brett were both college basketball head coaches and his brother, Jared, played basketball at OSU under Eddie Sutton for a year before moving into the role of team manager. Weiberg's uncle, Kevin, served as commissioner of the Big 12.

Weiberg and his wife, Jodi, have two children, Ella and Grant.

PRESIDENTIAL CONGRATULATIONS: OSU President Dr. Kayse Shrum congratulates Chad Weiberg on his appointment as OSU's Athletic Director.

Tim Johnson Era Underway at ORU After Being Named Athletic Director for the Golden Eagles

Tim Johnson became athletic director on Aug. 1, and joined the ORU staff prior to the 2015-16 school year after spending five years at Clemson University.

In his role, Johnson oversees all ORU Athletic external departments and directs capital fundraising, major gifts, and other sources of revenue generation and strategic initiatives for the Golden Eagles athletic department. Johnson also oversees the baseball program, program evaluation, coaching professional development, and serves on ORU's executive staff.

In his time at ORU, the Golden Eagle Club has increased its membership by 215%, achieved its highest fundraising totals, and premium seating sales. He has guided campaigns to renovate the baseball stadium, men's basketball locker room, men's and women's soccer locker rooms, volleyball locker room, install infield baseball turf and construct ORU's first track and tennis complex on campus.

Johnson negotiated a department-wide Nike contract in 2018 that more than tripled the value received by the department and also led the charge to update ORU's athletic logo and brand in association with Hampton Creative.

In 2016, ORU's athletics donor guidebook won the "Grand Award" for best sport publication in Oklahoma and also took home the "Achievement Award" for "Before and After."

Prior to ORU, as both an Assistant A.D. and Development Officer at Clemson, Johnson was responsible for development/stewardship, annual giving, letter-winner interaction, and development and fundraising. He served on Athletic Director Terry Don Phillips' senior staff and acted as a sport supervisor – where he was heavily involved in building Clemson Football under Coach Dabo Swinney.

The Clemson Football program won its first ACC Title in 20 years in 2011 and went on to win a National Championship in 2017. Johnson assisted in preparation for multiple bowl games, including the Meineke Car Care Bowl, Orange Bowl, and Chick-fil-a Bowl.

He also supervised aspects of compliance, marketing, and all departmental contracts for the Tigers. Johnson helped develop the Clemson Athletics strategic plan and developed Safety and Security plans for Clemson Athletic Venues as part of Clemson's Risk Management Committee.

In addition, he aided in Clemson's Billion Dollar Campaign "Will to Lead/Will to Win" in association with Clemson's Vice President for Development and Alumni Relations, Brian O'Rourke. Through his involvement with IPTAY, Johnson promoted membership, helped with fundraising strategies, and was active on capital campaign committees.

Prior to Clemson, Johnson graduated from the University of Arkansas with both a Bachelor of Science in Business Administration (2005) and a Juris Doctor (2008) and practiced law in Fayetteville. During his time at Arkansas, Johnson worked on Coach Houston Nutt's football staff from 2002 to 2007. He received his MBA from Clemson University in 2014.

Johnson is a member of the Arkansas Bar, Arkansas Bar Association, American Bar Association, and The University of Arkansas Letterwinners Association (A Club). He is also a member of NACDA, NAADD, and is a College Athletics Leadership Symposium (CALs) alum.

Johnson married the former Brittany Arnold of Fayetteville, Arkansas. They live in Tulsa and have two daughters, Emelia and Eleanor.

NuNu Campbell Adds to Holland Hall's Defense

Two-Way Starter is a Difference Maker

By MIKE MOGUIN
GTR Sports Writer

A key moment in Holland Hall's victory in the Class 3A state championship last year was when defensive back NuNu Campbell intercepted a pass early in the game. The Dutchmen would go on to rout Lincoln Christian 35-7 in the final. "It was huge. It was so early in the game, it just really set the tone for us as a defense and kind of gave Lincoln (Christian) the idea that it's not going to be easy," Campbell said. "They had a good receiver, Kolbe Katsis, and we shut him down. We had to let them know that we can play good football just as much as they can."

In the 2020 season, Campbell (6-0, 175) made 47 tackles, including 22 solos and 5.5 for losses, four interceptions and eight pass break-ups. As a wide receiver, he had six receptions for 138 yards and one touchdown. Another pick came in the semifinals against Stigler.

"Offensively, we had a really good quarterback (Wallace Clark, now with OU baseball) and a good receiver (Marc Gouldsby) and the connection between the two was surreal. On top of that we had two other receivers who were just as good. With three good receivers, the team as a whole had the goal to win it all, it was easy to put up numbers. We all want the same goal, vice versa for defense. When you put it all together and make sure everybody has the same goal, the same mentality, the same mindset, it's easy to go out on the field and do what you want to do on Friday night."

Campbell reflects on how the moments felt when the last second ticked off the clock in the last year's state championship game and the gold ball became theirs.

"When you're out there on the field, it is 11 guys on both sides. Plus, you have more players on the sideline cheering for you," Campbell said. "So at the last second of the game, you don't want to do anything but think about what it took to get here, thinking about the hours spent at practice, watching film, studying, perfecting the craft, it's a brotherhood. You want to let your guys know that we did it and we got what we came for, and we're not looking back regretting being here."

Last year, Campbell started on defense and substituted for Gouldsby as a wide receiver. However, with Gouldsby having graduated, Campbell is in the role as a two-way starter this season.

"It just lets you know that the team needs you more and now you have work to do," Campbell said. "You have to step up to the table and do what you have to do."

As for the college level, Campbell has offers from Tulsa, Kansas, Utah State and Washington State. He is also looking at UTSA and Ball State.

"It is definitely exciting. It can get overwhelming, depending on how you handle things," Campbell said. "It is a process you have to do a lot of thinking about because the decisions you make in this process in picking schools are for the next four years."

Can the Dutchmen repeat as Class 3A champions in December? Campbell believes so.

"It's a challenge every year trying to build a team and get back to the mindset to what we were last year," he said. "We have a young quarterback ready for the challenge whom I trust in and whom this team trusts in. We'll figure out the way to get it done and that's what the offseason and practice is for, to prepare. I'm ready to see our team take on another challenge and see about doing this thing again."

LOOKING TO REPEAT: Holland Hall senior DB/WR NuNu Campbell is expected to be a two-way starter and impact the Dutchmen as they play for another Class 3A state championship.

Tulsa Rig Iron Hosts Rep. Hern at 'I Make America' at Keifer Facility

Tulsa Rig Iron (TRI), designer and manufacturer of mud pumps, mud recycling systems and more, recently welcomed U.S. Rep. Kevin Hern (R-Okla.) to its manufacturing facility in Kiefer, Oklahoma for an "I Make America" event, a grassroots campaign of The Association of Equipment Manufacturers (AEM) which advocates for policies that support manufacturing jobs and help America's equipment manufacturers compete globally.

The purpose of Hern's visit was to hear the concerns of workers and business owners and address some of the regulatory issues affecting U.S. manufacturing companies.

"The mission of this event is to highlight equipment manufacturing both small and large in the U.S.," said Terry Flynn, vice president of sales and marketing for TRI and emcee for the round-table discussion and town hall style Q&A. "It's encouraging to have the involvement of a representative to congress to hear the struggles we deal with in this industry."

Hern, a member of the powerful Ways and Means Committee in Washington, D.C., toured TRI's state-of-the-art manufacturing facility before addressing those in attendance.

"My whole advocacy is making sure I can do everything that I possibly can as a member of congress to get government out of the way and put Americans to work," said Hern as he addressed members of AEM as well as representatives from TRI's partners in Tulsa Pipeline Equipment Manufacturers (TPLEM), Midwest-

In 2004, sons Trevor and Troy took the company helm and made the decision to concentrate the company efforts on building the best mud pumps and recycling systems available. Since that time, Tulsa Rig Iron has continued to set the industry standards for mud pump and recycling systems and is the manufacturer of choice for contractors around the globe.

Breeze Airways Launches Nonstop Service From Tulsa to New Orleans and San Antonio

Breeze Airways has launched nonstop service from Tulsa to New Orleans and San Antonio. Both routes operate year-round, four times per week. New Orleans and San Antonio are the second and third nonstop routes served by Breeze from Tulsa International Airport, joining nonstops to Tampa which began at the beginning of June.

Tulsa was the fifth of the initial 16 cities to launch service in the Breeze route network. Breeze is the fifth airline founded by aviation pioneer, David Neeleman, who previously started JetBlue Airways, WestJet, Azul, and Morris Air. The airline will be the seventh currently serving the Tulsa market.

"We are excited to welcome New Orleans and San Antonio to the nonstop route network from Tulsa International Airport, and even more thrilled that they are on Breeze Airways," said Andrew Pierini, Director of Air Service Development and Marketing at Tulsa International Airport. "Breeze is bringing nonstop service to some of the most desired destinations our passengers want to travel to, and we thank them for their expansion here in Tulsa."

Branded as the new "Seriously Nice" U.S. carrier, Breeze Airways will operate 13 single-class Embraer aircraft this summer, flying routes with an average flight length under two hours. The 10 E190 jets will be configured to seat 108 Guests while the three E195 aircraft will have 118 seats. Guests may choose from fares that include 'Nice' seats, or 'Nicer' seats with extra legroom. All Embraer aircraft will be a two-by-two seat configuration, so there are no middle seats. Breeze will start taking delivery of 60 brand new Airbus A220 aircraft, beginning in October, expanding the network nationwide. The A220s will include a premium cabin, called 'Nicest' seating, in a two-by-two configuration at the front of the plane. The remainder of the aircraft will feature a two-by-three seat configuration.

David Neeleman, Founder and CEO of Breeze Airways, said, "There are a significant number of unserved markets from Tulsa that will provide us with many years of growth opportunities. And we're thrilled to be able to give Tulsa residents nonstop service so they can get where they want to go twice as fast for half the cost."

America's Energy Reliability is Essential

America's energy reliability is essential for both the power generation and transportation needed for our country. As the last two articles on America's energy reliability have stated, accessibility, affordability and reliability are vital for a strong U.S. economy and security.

As noted in a column I wrote in 2014, after being asked, what is the US electric grid?, "There are three systems that provide electricity throughout the country. There is not a U.S. power grid. (A power grid is defined as an interconnected network for the delivery of electricity from suppliers to consumers).

The three grids are in the contiguous 48 states. These are the following grids: 1) Texas system, 2) the Western system which goes from the Pacific Ocean to the Rockies, and 3) the Eastern system.

As the U.S. Energy Information Administration (EIA) states, "Transmission and distribution lines owned by an individual utility are no longer resources to be used only by that utility. Electrical systems have been expanded and interlinked. The systems now provide the associated transport of electricity on the transmission lines where buyers and sellers may be geographically spread apart."

According to the EIA, "originally, each generating company was responsible for maintaining its own electrical system safely and planning for the future needs of its customers. Later, voluntary standards were developed by the electric utility industry to coordinate for linked inter-connection operations. These voluntary standards were instituted after a major blackout in 1965 that impacted New York, a large portion of the East Coast, and parts of Canada...the inter-linked systems now include over 3200 electric distribution utilities, over 10,000 generating units, tens of thousands of miles and distribution lines, and millions of customers."

By MARK A. STANSBERRY

Our national security has long been one of the most important assets we cherish. For that reason, we cannot afford to become addicted to energy at any cost. Today, nothing in America moves without energy, but the definition of energy security also extends to power generation.

We don't have a good balance of sources that can get us to our goal of total independence. We are still using many forms of energy. Although certain energy sectors are more predominant than others, there is definitely room for natural gas to grow.

Natural gas holds promise for power generation. The share of U.S. natural gas-fired electricity generating capacity increased from 17% in 1990 to 43% in 2020. Given the enormous finds here, we should establish a more efficient, accessible natural gas transportation and distribution system.

In January of 2014, a warning went out that it was important that reduction of electric usage was needed in Texas (the Texas Grid).

The risk of power outages was strongly possible. According to an article by Loren Steffy, in January, power plants unexpectedly went offline when the state needed them most. This time blackouts were averted, but barely. He goes on to state, "as the threat of rolling blackouts in winter and summer demonstrates, Texas isn't producing enough electricity to meet our needs."

It is time we come together! The U.S. has the immediate challenge of striving for energy independence. It is extremely important that the U.S. be in a strong position of securing energy reserves within its own boundaries and maintaining a dependable energy infrastructure.

America needs America's energy! All forms. All American. Future generations are depending on us to keep the American dream alive!

PSO/AEP DONATION: Public Service Company of Oklahoma (PSO), a subsidiary of American Electric Power (Nasdaq: AEP) has announced a $50,000 social and racial justice grant from the AEP Foundation to Youth Services of Tulsa (YST) to support the organization's Transitions Program: Putting Youth on the Path to Self-Sufficiency. The program addresses the issue of homelessness for those 17 to 24 years old by providing housing and skills needed to transition to self-sufficiency and permanent housing.

The announcement was made at a press conference that included PSO President and Chief Operating Officer, Peggy Simmons and David C. Grewe, Executive Director of Youth Services of Tulsa, shown above.

The AEP Foundation is the charitable arm of AEP and is partially funded by PSO. The gift is part of the foundation's Delivering on the Dream: Social and Racial Justice grant program, which is a five-year commitment to fund organizations with programs dedicated to advancing social and racial justice in communities served by AEP.

"Through our long association with, and support for, Youth Services of Tulsa, we at PSO and AEP are keenly aware of the many social issues that lead to youth homelessness," said Simmons. "On behalf of the AEP Foundation, we are pleased to announce this grant to help promote equity and opportunity so young people may achieve self-sufficiency and find their path forward to a successful life."

In 2020, the AEP Foundation began the Delivering on the Dream program to award social and racial justice grants to organizations that play pivotal roles in working to eliminate systemic racism. The grant to YST is the AEP Foundation's first Delivering on the Dream grant awarded in Oklahoma.

"Youth homelessness is a significant challenge here in Tulsa and across the country," said Youth Services of Tulsa Executive Director David C. Grewe. "YST will house more than 100 youth this year, equipping them with the skills and supports they need to gain independence, achieve their educational and employment goals, and realize their full potential."

Gathering Place Names New Executive Director

JULIO BADIN

After an extensive search, Gathering Place has announced the hiring of Julio Badin as its new Executive Director.

Badin's 22 years in the hospitality and entertainment industries, combined with a passion for community programming and guest experiences, will help to further advance the mission of Tulsa's award-winning riverfront park.

"My entire professional career has been in the hospitality and entertainment industry, and I've loved every minute of it," said Badin. "However, after coming to understand Gathering Place's mission and meeting the Park's outstanding team, this presented such a compelling opportunity. I'm excited to fully engage with and serve an entire community in a way that I haven't been able to do in the past."

Prior to joining the Gathering Place team, Badin served as the Senior Vice President of Customer Experience at Dallas Fort Worth International Airport where he oversaw experience strategy and execution at all five terminals, including operations, project management, and the DFW Airport Pandemic Preparedness Plan. Additionally, Badin spent 18 years with The Walt Disney Company where he held key leadership roles managing customer experience, attractions, retail, culinary and financial performance.

"Julio clearly possesses the skills to continue to deliver and improve upon the high-quality experience that all Tulsans have come to expect from Gathering Place," said Jeff Stava, Construction Director and Trustee of Tulsa's Gathering Place, LLC. "Julio's previous work at Disney and DFW demonstrated over and over again his ability and dedication to creating and implementing family-friendly, inclusive and engaging experiences for all visitors. We look forward to him continuing that great work here."

In addition to Gathering Place, Badin will also be responsible for overseeing the operations and programming for Guthrie Green and Duet Jazz Club.

Burr has built his companies on the principles of building relationships on every level. In addition to Barracuda Staffing, he is the owner of Barracuda Consulting and a partner in Red River Payroll.

He says his main objective, whether it is with his clients, applicants or staff, is to put people in the right position to succeed. He prides himself on developing custom hiring and recruiting solutions for every client.

Under Burr's direction, Barracuda Staffing has maintained substantial growth year over year and continues to get noticed as a strong growing staffing company. They have twice been recognized for their growth by making the Inc. 5000 list in 2017 and 2019, and were also voted as one of America's Best Places to Work in 2018.

The Small Business Success Series was sponsored by Tedford Insurance.

BUSINESS & PEOPLE NOTES

Public Service Company of Oklahoma (PSO) announces Wayne Greene as its new region communications manager. He will transition into that role currently held by Stan Whiteford, who is retiring later this fall.

GREENE

A highly respected journalist with more than 30 years of experience, Greene joins PSO from the Tulsa World, where he started in 1987 and served as editorial pages editor since 2014.

Prior to his latest role, Greene served 13 years as the World's city editor and four at the World's state Capitol Bureau in Oklahoma City.

Among his many awards and accolades, in 2016 Greene was named "the conscience of the community" by the Tulsa Regional Chamber, and in 2019 he was inducted into the Oklahoma Journalism Hall of Fame.

In his role at PSO, Greene will be primarily responsible for public and news media communications.

"Wayne's extensive involvement with our community and his knowledge base of how energy intersects with our customers every day makes him an excellent addition to our team," said Tiffini Jackson, vice president of external affairs.

Greene is a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of the University of Oklahoma and was a National Merit Scholar.

RCB Bank is pleased to announce that Richard Willhour III is now the market president of the Broken Arrow and Union locations.

WILLHOUR

Willhour has been the market president in Catoosa, Inola and Coweta for eight years and will retain his position in Coweta moving forward.

"I appreciate the opportunity to be a part of the Broken Arrow and Union team," said Willhour. "The staff at both locations are highly effective bankers and have proven they can get the job done."

Willhour is currently a school board member of Inola public schools and a board member for the Inola Education Foundation. He was also past president of the Inola Chamber of Commerce and the Oklahoma Banker's Association.

"I'm looking forward to getting involved in the Broken Arrow community," he said.

Willhour, his wife and two sons also manage a commercial cowherd. When he is not at the Bank, you will likely find him working cattle, fixing fence, hauling hay and fishing with his sons.

Hall Estill, Oklahoma's leading law firm, with offices in Tulsa, Oklahoma City, Denver and Northwest Arkansas, announces the addition of Terence "Terry" Brennan to the Tulsa office in an Of Counsel position.

BRENNAN

"Terry makes a great addition to the team," said Mike Cooke, Managing Partner for Hall Estill. "His experience and depth of knowledge will allow him to provide excellent counsel to our clients across our practice areas."

Brennan practices in the areas of complex business and personal litigation, focusing on compliance and risk issues where he assists clients in a variety of areas, including oil and gas, business and personal torts, and environmental law. Licensed to practice in both Oklahoma and Wisconsin, he earned his undergraduate degree, with honors, from the University of Wisconsin and his J.D. from the University of Wisconsin Law School.

The City of Broken Arrow has announced the hiring of Aaron McColloch as its new Communications and Media Relations Manager.

MCOLLOCH

"The Communications and Media Relations Manager is the primary spokesperson for the City of Broken Arrow while managing the City's Communications Divisions, which includes the City's website, social media channels, newsletters, press events, media relations, and Cox Cable Channel 24" said City Manager Michael Spurgeon.

McColloch is an award-winning communications professional having spent more than 20 years in local news in the Tulsa TV market holding various positions including chief photographer, assistant news director, and digital director. He has won numerous awards from the Associated Press, Oklahoma Association of Broadcasters, National Press Photographers Association, a Heartland Regional Emmy, three Regional Edward R. Murrow awards, and two National Edward R. Murrow awards.

McColloch is a life-long Oklahoman, born and raised in Tulsa. He has lived in Broken Arrow for the better part of the last 10 years.

The Tulsa Police Foundation has hired Tiffany Egdorf as its new CEO.

EGDORF

The foundation is a locally based 501 C-3 that serves to raise awareness and funds for the needs of the Tulsa Police Department that will benefit officers and citizens in the City of Tulsa. It is a joint effort between law enforcement and the citizens of Tulsa to enhance the safety and security of each.

Current TPD Foundation Chairman and TPD Foundation Founder Roger Chasteen will be resigning from the board effective July 8, 2021.

Egdorf most recently served as president & CEO of Lindsey House. During her 10 years with the organization, she started and directed multiple programs, expanded the organization and empowered families to flourish.

She was responsible for overall agency direction at Lindsey House, including a capital campaign, new building construction, fundraising, advocacy and managing external relationships and collaborations.

She has a Bachelor of Science from Oklahoma City University, a Master of Arts from Phillips Theological Seminary, and a Masters' Certification from the University of Tulsa.

Egdorf is a graduate of Leadership Tulsa Class 53, Thrive Class 1, and the Rotary District 6110 Leadership Academy. She is on the board of directors for the Rotary Club of Tulsa and Leadership Tulsa. Most importantly, Egdorf is a life-long Tulsan and loves being a part of the Tulsa community.

Regarding the new position, Egdorf said, "It is my honor to serve in this role and expand the reach of the Tulsa Police Foundation for the betterment of our community. I embrace our mission to raise funds and awareness for the Tulsa Police Department, while working to create stronger relationships between our law enforcement personnel and the citizens of Tulsa."

Page Family Contributes to Tulsa Architecture

In 1907, my newlywed grandparents, the C.C. Coles moved into the Robinson Hotel while they were waiting for construction on their first house, a small bungalow, to be finished. Months later, my grandfather hired two men and a horse drawn wagon to move furnishings and belongings into their new home. A year later, the baby grand piano my grandfather had bought his bride (on the installment plan) arrived by train and was delivered to their new house by horse and wagon.

As Tulsa started to boom with help from the Glenn Pool and other oil strikes, moving people and their goods became an important business. In 1910, Page Storage and Van Lines was established as one of Tulsa's first moving companies. Today, 111 years later, four generations of the Page family have owned and worked in this business. The iconic graphics on Page trucks are a part of Tulsa history.

In 1927, 17 years later, Roy Page, with an optimism common in the 1920's, decided to build a headquarters/storage building. He went to one of Tulsa's leading architectural firms, Rush Endicott and Rush whose Tulsa Club/Chamber of Commerce Building was currently under construction. His instructions to them were to design an eye catching cutting edge building. With the help of their staff designer, Bruce Goff, they delivered the site selected was the south side of 13th Street at 1301 S. Elgin. This allowed furniture to be loaded directly from the adjacent railroad tracks to a dock and from there to a freight elevator at the rear of the structure. The building was five stories and fitted out with art deco bronze and glass light fixtures and operable steel awning windows for natural ventilation. The interior included specialized storage for valuables: a large cold storage room for furs (said to be the largest in the Southwest), a silver vault, a large rug vault and safes for jewelry. Part of the ground floor was reserved for pianos. The entire concrete frame structure was designed for heavy loads. Flaring interior column capitals in a mushroom shape eliminated the need for intermediate beams by shortening spans.

The outer edge of the floor slabs and perimeter columns were exposed to view emphasizing the structure and providing a decorative effect. The exterior pinkish bricks were wire cut and hung on the structural frame with no attempt to hide what held the brick.

At the exterior, two vertical pylons of Bedford Limestone framed and emphasized the main entrance. Although initially resented by the adjacent residents, many came to admire the building and later became good customers.

During World War II, Tulsa was considered a significant enemy target by many because of the location of the war plane manufacturer, McDonald-Douglas, and its related pilot training school and because of oil production centered in Tulsa. Thomas Gilcrease moved his western art collection to the Page Building for safe keeping. The collection remained there until the end of the war in 1945. One wonders where the new temporary storage place will be when the collection is moved again due to the museum rebuilding project.

BRUCE GOFF DESIGN: Roy Page hired world-famous architect Bruce Goff in 1928 to design the five-story Art Deco furniture inspired depository located at 1301 S. Elgin Ave. in Tulsa. The building was demolished in 1977 to make room for the Broken Arrow Expressway.

In 1977, the historic Page Building was demolished to make way for the Broken Arrow Expressway. Despite the efforts and resistance of the Page family, imminent domain prevailed. What government wants; it gets.

An amazing coincidence followed. The Pages found a suitable replacement building which was also designed by Bruce Goff. Located at 2036 E. 11th Street, it was a 1928 product of Rush Endicott and Rush Architecture who were involved in the building of the Boston Avenue Church at the same time.

residential washing appliances were very primitive. Many chose to have their laundry picked up and delivered by a commercial company. The Guaranty Laundry Building worked well for adaptive reuse as a Page Building replacement. This five-story building, which when built, was considered a low-cost industrial structure, has an exterior which is organized horizontally with long bands of steel awning windows with projecting sills and lintels between strips of buff brick. Streamlining of the northwest corner was lost when an art deco cornice was deleted during construction. Originally the main entrance became a focal point by interrupting the exterior patterning. The doorway was set off by diagonal mullions and flanking vertical bands of diamonds which extended to the top strip of windows. Sadly, the entrance has been remodeled in years since and the diagonals eliminated. A good picture of the original entrance can be found on page 77 of the Tulsa Art Deco book published by the Junior League of Tulsa.

Local Father and Daughter Turn Their Maple Liqueur Hobby into a Business

Meredith Maple Liquor An Innovative Success

By GRANT ROWL
Contributing Writer

Have you ever looked back on your life and wondered “what if?” What if you pursued that dream, created your own future, tried to do something no one else tried to do? Have you ever wondered what if you succeeded? Michael Meredith, Jr. and his daughter AJ Meredith, did just that by turning Michael’s hobby of making liqueurs into a successful local business.

Michael started mixing liqueurs while attending Duke University in the late 1970s. “I had a friend at Duke who gave me a recipe for a coffee liqueur and that’s what sparked my interest.” He experimented making coffee liqueurs throughout college and continued the hobby after becoming an Aerospace Engineer.

Finally, in the early 2000’s, Michael perfected an amaretto liqueur recipe. The recipe was used with and without amaretto flavoring. The version without the amaretto flavoring became a favorite and was nicknamed “Meredith Maple” by a family friend.

With confident determination, daughter AJ Meredith encouraged her father to turn his hobby into more than just a dream. The idea took off and resulted in what is now a Broken Arrow company, Meredith Maple LLC.

“It was kind of a strange coincidence of events,” said AJ, now Vice President of Sales and Marketing when asked how Meredith Maple Liqueurs started. “I thought, if I don’t do this now I never will, so I kind of risked it.” With AJ’s Master’s Degree in Business Management and her father’s engineering and analytical approach to the creation process, Meredith Maple has a very sophisticated partnership and unique product formula.

sweet maple liqueur, aged on oak and manufactured in Bend, Oregon. It has been described in the press as “one of the most unique flavors on the market.” Local fans enjoy drinking it in coffee, with lemonade for summer holidays, adding it to beer or dry wine as a kicker, or sipping it straight or on ice as an after-dinner drink. A liqueur made for celebration; Meredith Maple is meant to be savored during life’s greatest moments.

AJ not only hopes people will try out the family’s smooth and sweet liqueur, she also wants to encourage others to never give up on their dreams. “We need more leaders to take risks and try new businesses,” she added, emphasizing the importance of more local female entrepreneurs. “As with any dream, there have been challenges and obstacles along the way, but the good far outweighs the bad.” She hopes to inspire others to find what they’re called to do and find their life’s purpose. “We have so many opportunities and I just want more people to feel that passion to be excited and live their dreams like I’m doing out here every day,” said AJ.

Meredith Maple’s goal is to bring the best and most sophisticated maple liqueurs to the market, and we think they achieved just that. Meredith Maple Liqueurs can be found in 85 Liquor Stores, bars, restaurants, and specialty shops across Oklahoma, including Biergarten and Out South in Jenks, Liquids and Kwenchers in Owasso, Parkhill’s Warehouse and PJ’s Bar and Grill Tulsa, and BA Wine and Spirits, B&B Liquor Warehouse, and The Succulent Shop in Broken Arrow.
