MY SIOUX CENTER HEALTH CAREER JOURNEY

ANITA KLEINWOLTERINK

"I began my career at Sioux Center Health in August of 1989. The daycare was known as Cribs and Crayons back then and in 1998 it became the Early Childhood Center. Over the years, I have loved making connections with our little ones and their families, and I enjoy sharing special anecdotes of their day. It's an honor to play such an important role in their development, whether it's reading books together, singing songs, or building block towers.

There is always room for advancing in the organization if the employee shows a desire to do so.

Sioux Center Health is a faith-based organization. "Guided by Christian values, we commit to consistently deliver an excellent experience to every person at every encounter". I believe that as staff at the Early Childhood Center, we strive to live up to this statement. We strive to provide the best nurturing and learning environment that we possibly can. We keep communication strong between parents and staff so we can be fully equipped to care for their children. Knowing what a difference we as childcare providers can make motivates me each day! It has been an amazing 32 years and I look forward to a few more, God willing!"

The vet of tomorrow: no longer white and male

As the U.S. military undergoes significant demographic shifts, so too does the veteran population. In honor of Veterans Day, celebrated every year on November 11, here are some facts about the future of American veterans.

More veterans are women
According to the United States Department of Veterans Affairs, the proportion of female veterans will almost double by 2043, from nine percent to 17 percent. In the wake of increased enrollment following the events of 9/11, women are actually the fastest growing group of veterans. They face particular challenges when trying to adjust to civilian life, many of which aren't addressed by existing resources.

The average age of veterans is changing
Currently, people aged 50 to 69 make up 42 percent of the veteran population. By 2043, however, the proportion of veterans under the age of 50 will increase considerably, as will the number of those over the age of 70. This means that the services offered to veterans will need to accommodate the needs of a more diverse population in terms of age.

Veterans are becoming more ethnically diverse
As the U.S. military becomes more diverse, it's expected that the veteran population will exhibit the same trend. The proportion of non-Hispanic white veterans is likely to fall to 64 percent in 2043 from 78 percent in 2013.

Since non-White veterans are disproportionately affected by issues such as homelessness and lack of access to resources, it'll be important for the United States Department of Veterans Affairs to work with community leaders to help ensure their well-being.

Veterans of all genders, ages and ethnicity have sacrificed a lot to keep our country safe. On November 11, take a moment to thank them for their service.
