Tumbleweed Smith

In the early 1960's I attended a meeting of the Big Spring Little Theater in Dr. Milton Talbot's house. On the way in, along the brick walkway leading to the center of the house, I felt like I was entering a work of art. I don't remember what happened at the meeting but I do remember that house. I was single, just out of the Army and the house seemed like a sanctuary tucked away below street level with juniper lining the sloping driveway. I wanted that house and the secure feeling of stability it gave to family members and guests.

Tumbleweed Smith

When the Talbots moved to Austin the house stood vacant for a year. Perhaps it was too different to move quickly in the local real estate market. By 1971 I had worked away from Big Spring enough to know that Big Spring was where I belonged. I was married with 2 young sons. My wife Susan and I were ready to move. We needed more room. We had saved enough money to put a down payment on the Talbot house. We moved in on November 2, 1971. After living in it 50 years it still is like being in a work of art. I feel the same way I felt when I first saw it.

It was designed by noted architect Harwell Harris and built under the Talbot's supervision in 1959-60. Harris had designed another home and one church in Big Spring (St. Mary's Episcopal). When Lisa Germany, Harris's biographer, brought him to our home he stood in our living room and said, "Thank you for taking care of my house." We were flattered. That was 7 or 8 years after we had been in the house. Initially we thought it was so nice we didn't want to change anything. But we finally got brave enough to put new paint on the walls, re-do some wall paper, flooring and draperies. The house is 70% glass and we've replaced all the windows and sliding glass doors.

Back in November of '71 Kevin and BZ, 7 and 3 at the time, began to explore the canyon off the deck. They found two caves and learned they were called Lemon Cave and Rabbit Ears. Our dog, Brown Lady, accompanied them on their adventures. Sometime they would spend all day building forts or some other structure in the canyon. It had a dry creek bed but when it rained there were waterfalls and a running stream of water. In December of 71 we had an open house and New Year's Eve Party. Guests were greeted with a giant tumbleweed with more than 100 tiny light bulbs on it.

We've had many guests, neighbors and family members over the years. One special one was bandleader Stan Kenton who sat on our deck and watched cardinals enjoying our birdbath. Thanksgiving has always been a big deal at our house and sometimes we had as many as 25 people over for turkey and football. We used to have family slide shows in our living room. Those were special times.

Our sons and grandsons have sat in a big lacebark elm tree outside our dining room window. Sometimes they read, sometimes they just looked around, alone with their thoughts. We are grateful that our sons and grandsons, daughters in law and soon to be a great grandchild have always known where to find us.
