FOLKLORE IN A FUDGE SHOP

Tumbleweed Smith

Tumbleweed Smith

Dean Jones grew up in Carthage and worked in different businesses around town since he was 16. Many of those businesses have closed and most everybody has forgotten about them. But Dean tries to jog their memory. Every Tuesday he'll post a clue about a forgotten retail business on Facebook. The first 3 people to name the business get prizes in the form of fudge from Dean's Fudge Shop called Fudge and More, located on the square in downtown Carthage. First place winner gets a pound of fudge, second or third places get a half-pound each.

Dean has had his shop 27 years and makes everything from scratch. He makes some chocolate items. "I do white chocolate, dark chocolate, milk chocolate, dark chocolate sea salt caramels, but fudge is my main product," says Dean. "I do many different flavors like tiger butter, vanilla pecan, chocolate pecan, good ole plain chocolate, amaretto chocolate swirl, vanilla chocolate swirl, mint chocolate swirl and pumpkin pie fudge with pecans in it."

He doesn't do Internet or catalogue business, just walk in. He has generations of customers. "Some of them tell me they used to come in when they were little girls or little boys and now they're bringing their kids in."

Dean's place is in the old post office building and it lives up to the name of the business, "We do sell more than fudge," says Dean. "I sell arts and crafts, some of which I make. My wife and I used to do craft shows, selling the items we made. We saw that when people go to craft shows they might not buy any art or crafts but they always buy something to eat. A friend of mine made fudge. I decided that's what I needed to do, open a fudge shop in Carthage. I really enjoy it. It's so much fun to see who comes in the front door."

Dean decorates his store according to the season. Last Halloween he had the Ghost Busters Vehicle in front of his shop while an electronic spook show played in his store window.

Among the many items in his shop is one called a Dumb Bull that creates a scary sound. "My grandfather used to scare us kids with it. It's basically a nail keg with both ends knocked out and a deer hide stretched over one end with a string through the middle of the hide. When you reach in the keg and pull on that string, it lets out a roar that scares little kids when they're in the woods, especially at night. If you put resin or bees wax on your fingers and pull on the string it makes the sound louder. It has been known to stampede cattle."

Dean says he went in a hardware store to buy a keg of nails and the storeowner said he hadn't carried nails in kegs for years. The storeowner asked Dean, "What in the world do you want a nail keg for? Are you going to make a Dumb Bull?" I've reported on that thing for years and never knew the name of it until I met Dean.
