Bedford County and its towns

They invite people, progress, and perspective.

By Tina Neeley

Bedford County's landscape will invite you; its wildlife enchant you, and its people welcome you. Economically diverse and committed to better tomorrows, Bedford County has been evolving since its establishment in 1807 when the governor split Rutherford County into two counties, at residents' request. Rich in history, education, agriculture, and tourism, everything you need is nearby. The Nashville and St. Louis Railway carried the county into a new era, establishing depot towns to attract trade, tourism, and traditions. Continuing the momentum, the county has become home to a new distillery, festivals, small businesses, and residents seeking a more gentle way of life.

Shelbyville

Named for Major General Isaac Shelby of the Revolutionary War, Shelbyville is at the heart of good living. Float or fish the Duck River, tour Nearest Green Distillery, or take in a horse show. Better yet, make Shelbyville your home! Enjoy small-town life where family, community, and forward thinking connect.

Wartrace

Foundational to Bedford County's walking horse industry, the breed's first celebration was held in 1939 on the town's square. Historical homes and buildings testify to the town's heritage. Approximately 140 of them are on the National Register of Historic Places. Life at a slower pace, and interstate access offers the best of both worlds.

Bell Buckle

Once the largest livestock shipping depot between Nashville & Chattanooga, Bell Buckle's early days were characterized by economics and education. According to tennesseencyclopedia.net, Bell Buckle is one of the most visited railroad towns in Tennessee. The Webb Art and Craft Festival, and shops and restaurants on its square draw year-round crowds.

Normandy

Incorporated in 1858, Normandy is a town shaped in its formative years by the Nashville & Chattanooga railroad expansion in Bedford County. The 1976 completion of Normandy Dam, and the opening of the fish hatchery transformed Normandy from a railroad town to a favorite stop for recreational camping, fishing, and watersports.

Unionville

Founded in approximately 1827 and home to more than 2,100 residents, Unionville is a tight-knit community where everyone knows your name. The birthplace of Tennessee's Governor Jim Nance McCord, Unionville's name resulted from uniting two different post offices into one. Its schools, appropriately named Community, further unite the small town.

Shelbyville-Bedford County Chamber of Commerce hosts the first ever Best of Bedford contest.

People desire to be recognized or affirmed, although it's not something many will publicly admit. Whether you're gifted at making smooth-tasting coffee or calculating advanced data within a spreadsheet, it's nice to feel appreciated! Chamber Executive Director Lacey Deeds understands this simple concept and organized a contest to facilitate giving honor where honor is due!

For the first time in the Shelbyville-Bedford County Chamber of Commerce history, the chamber held, what going forward will be called, the "Best of Bedford" contest. This first annual contest consisted of 19 different categories. The general public was encouraged to participate by submitting nominations by October 15, 2021. Chamber Director Lacey Deeds was thrilled with the community engagement and shared, "The community's response was phenomenal! It showed huge support for our local businesses here in Bedford County." Each category received seven to nine nominations on average. The top three nominees in each category were advanced onto the voting ballots. Voting opened on November 1 and lasted through December 1. The voting process took place through an online survey. A link for the survey was posted on the chamber's official Facebook page and sent out in the chamber's monthly newsletter.

For most people, but business owners especially, support, encouragement, and a simple pat on the back go a long way. It is reassuring to hear that your business makes a difference in others' lives, especially after the last few years, following COVID-19. So if you have not said it before, say it now with the chamber... business owners, thank you for serving our community!

Winners of the Best of Bedford contest were officially announced on January 3, 2022. Winners later received plaques and yard signs at the Awards Gala on March 24. If you are out and about in Bedford County and see one of these signs, congratulate our local small business owners on their well-deserved award!

~~NEW~~ progressive FUTURE

Fawn Weaver is using whiskey to better the lives of BIPOC.

Story by Tina Neeley

picture may be worth a thousand words, but Fawn Weaver and her team are blazing a trail inspired by a man of whom no photographs exist. As told in a 2016 article by Clay Risen, published in the New York Times, Nearest Green's story captured Weaver's attention. It launched a brand determined to build a new future for an overlooked minority of distillers.

The article revealed the underexposed fact that Green, a slave who was later emancipated, taught the craft of distillery to Jack Daniel, the world-renowned whiskey distiller. A surprising explanation appeared after speaking to people in the Lynchburg community and with Green's descendants. The friendship of a slave and a young white orphan was not a surprise or unthinkable within the Moore County community.

A 2017 article at tennessean.com states, "What Weaver began to discover was that Lynchburg, at the time of Jack Daniel and Nearest Green, was perhaps a more progressive place than most — surrounded by the South's racial tension, but in some ways, less susceptible to it."

Weaver's interest led to countless hours of research and interviews and to the original farm of preacher/distiller Dan Call, where Nearest worked while training Jack in what has become known as The Lincoln County Process. Weaver and her husband purchased the old 313-acre Call farm, where the original Jack Daniel's Distillery was located. The two-room dogtrot cabin—where Green lived during the Civil War—and the Greek Revival home—where Call and Daniel once lived—have been rebuilt by the same construction team that restored Daniel's original office and other historic buildings around Lynchburg. The original spring, where the water for early bottles of Old No. 7 flowed, can still be seen pouring gallons of water out 24 hours a day.

This immersion in Green's story led Weaver to have the histories of Jack Daniel's whiskey and the spirits world updated to include the story of the first known black master distiller. And that, she knew, would be only the beginning of how Green's story could change the world.

Weaver asked Green's descendants how they felt he could best be honored. "With his name on his own bottle," a descendant replied.

And from there, Green's legacy and influence have evolved under Weaver's leadership.

“Every bit of our 323-acre, four-phase, $50 million build-out is a master class in storytelling and history-making.”

Weaver created the Nearest Green Foundation to preserve and honor the history of the distiller. The Foundation erected a permanent memorial for Green at Lynchburg’s Highview Cemetery and created a scholarship fund for Green’s descendants.

Of this, Uncle Nearest Premium Whiskey was born and has become the fastest-growing whiskey brand in U.S. history.

The portfolio is the Most-Awarded American Whiskey or Bourbon of 2019, 2020, and 2021, with nearly 380 awards and accolades since the brand’s 2017 launch, including 46 Best in Class honors. Uncle Nearest is currently available in all 50 states and 12 countries and is sold in more than 25,000 stores, bars, hotels, and restaurants.

Although the whiskey production was originally sourced using the Uncle Nearest process, Uncle Nearest is now bottling their own 100% distilled, aged whiskey through a partner facility. The whiskey will eventually be distilled at the Uncle Nearest headquarters at Shelbyville’s former Sand Creek Farm on U.S. Highway 231 North. According to its website, “Every bit of our 323-acre, four-phase, $50 million build-out is a master class in storytelling and history-making.”

Tours of the Uncle Nearest facility are now conducted on weekends, and the distillery has become a significant stop on the Tennessee Whiskey Trail. Visitors will find a welcome center, the world’s first non-alcoholic speakeasy, barbecue restaurant, tasting room, and more. Tours can be booked online at unclenearest.com.

Looking ahead and expanding the influence

“Every single time you take that sip, you should be telling the story of

of Green, Weaver’s vision has grown to include securing the future of entrepreneurship for those historically overlooked.

The Uncle Nearest leadership team is 100% female in an industry that males have historically led. An article in the May 2021 issue of American Whiskey called roll: CEO & founder, Fawn Weaver; Kate Jerkens, chief business officer; Sherrie Moore, director of whiskey operations; Nearest’s great, great-granddaughter, Victoria Eady Butler, master blender; and Lucia Creed, marketing vice president.

After reviewing Uncle Nearest’s employment applicants, Weaver noticed the scarcity of applications from people of color with any spirits experience. Recognizing the need for access to training, Weaver and Jack Daniel’s united and formed the Nearest & Jack Advancement Initiative and instituted a distilling school in cooperation with Motlow State Community College.

This fund provides a leadership acceleration program that offers apprenticeships to black industry members, allowing them to train under the country’s top distillers. It includes a business incubation program that will give black-owned spirits brands access to funding, branding, capital, marketing firms, and distribution networks.

In addition, to foster diversity and advance black, indigenous people, and people of color leadership in the American whiskey space, Weaver has created the Uncle Nearest Venture Fund. The $50 million investment fund’s first priority is black-owned spirit brands. The fund will also consider any brand founded or led by a woman or person of color, according to the June 2, 2021 story in Black Enterprise.

In a 2021 New York Times story, Weaver said, “I am looking for the brands that have the ability to be the next Uncle Nearest. What that means to me is they are not building to flip; they’re not building to sell. They’re building to create generational wealth.”

Now a Shelbyville resident, Weaver pours promise and opportunity into the community and the world at large. Considering the amount of ground covered by Weaver since beginning the journey in 2017, the sky’s the limit!

That's how we make sure that his legacy is not only cemented, but it continues on beyond us to the next generation."

Ryan Purdom

Purdom's BBQ

Ryan Purdom's story starts as a humble dishwasher at 82 Market and Diner in Bell Buckle. Purdom began working at the country diner right out of high school. He continued to work there while he put himself through college and later Emergency Medical Technician (EMT) school. Purdom's original intention for working at the diner was solely a financial decision. He wanted to create a bit of cash flow for himself. However, when Ryan got a shot at holding the tongs himself, he wound up falling in love with the craft of preparing mouth-watering meals. More specifically, Purdom grew a knack for smoking meats to perfection.

After completing school, Purdom went to work full-time in Rutherford County as an EMT. However, he still had a desire to cook. Therefore, his next step towards honing his craft was participating in barbecue competitions. Purdom won all kinds of awards, including a first-place title at Murfreesboro's BBQ Festival. Although Purdom was having a lot of fun competing, it became costly! Between the entry fees and the cost of meat, Purdom shared that he lost about $300 to $500 at each competition. He started cooking in bulk and selling what he made to help pay for the competitions. Orders started coming in so frequently and steadily that Purdom upgraded his setup to a food truck complete with two smoker trailers. Thus, Purdom's BBQ was officially born. Purdom shared that he and his wife Karen's short-term goal for the barbecue business is to find a permanent location for their truck. A long-term dream would be purchasing multiple trucks to create a fleet and opening up a brick-and-mortar location. Ryan expressed, "I don't know if we'll ever get there, but I never knew we'd get to where we are now."

Most recently, the couple has been hired to serve their barbecue at many different events including more than 20 weddings this year alone. They are proud of the growth of their business and have no plans to slow down anytime soon.

If you want to try Purdom's slow-cooked barbecue, head over to their Facebook page to find out where they will be next! facebook.com/purdomsbbq

Danielle Armbruster

The Shops at Main & McGrew

Danielle Armbruster and her brother Alex opened their antique shop in 2016. Starting a business in a small town, in a state you didn't grow up in, is no small feat. What made it more difficult was being a couple of young adults in their 20s that the community did not take seriously. Danielle shared, "People would refer to us as a 'bunch of kids'. It was a barrier that we had to get over. We had to work extra hard to prove we were serious, and we knew what we were doing." The Armbruster siblings did not let the opinions of others stop them from moving forward with their business plan and opening of The Shops at Main & McGrew.

Hailing from Ohio, Danielle and Alex grew up in a family whose love for antiquing was a bond they all shared. The siblings had their parents to blame for instilling in them the "love of the hunt" at such a young age. Finding different and unique items filled them with joy.

When Danielle found herself finishing up her time at Belmont University, she realized how much she had come to love Tennessee.

With her newfound realization, she decided to stay and began looking for a place to put her roots down. Danielle said she accidentally discovered Shelbyville but was wooed by the charm of the old town. Then, when she laid eyes on the building that now houses their shop, her plan to open an antique shop was pretty much a done deal.

The Shops at Main & McGrew look a lot different than what most people think of when they imagine shopping at an antique store. Before the siblings opened their doors, they went around to as many other antique stores as possible and took notes on what could be improved. They noticed that it took a long time to check out, because different vendors were selling items yet there was no point-of-sale systems setup. Danielle shared, "It's an industry that has never really taken the time to update itself. Modern cash registers and digital payment options weren't available in most stores. Many stores still used pen and paper and accepted only cash." As young business owners, Danielle and Alex wanted to bring antique shopping into the present day, so they did! Guests are constantly telling the two how unique and different their shop is.

Danielle's advice to other young entrepreneurs is, "Stand up for yourself. Your voice is essential no matter how old you are. People will eventually listen and will learn to respect and work with you. It was a struggle for us, but we pulled through."

Dining Dreams

Davila family leans on community hospitality while running two Mexican restaurants and a coffee shop.

By Tina Neeley // Photography by Brooke Snyder

In the highly charged atmosphere typical to coffee shops, apron-clad Rita Davila greets customers, works in the kitchen, and keeps an eye on everything happening around her. She is in her element. Her commitment to providing an enjoyable dining experience is laser-focused.

Davila and her family are no strangers to the food-service industry. You've likely eaten at their restaurants but don't know their names and faces.

Previously from Lebanon, Tennessee, her husband, Jorge Davila, always wanted to be in the restaurant business. Although Jorge is a native of Peru, Rita had observed the most successful dining establishments in the area were Mexican restaurants. Luckily, the owner of Shelbyville's La Hacienda Mexican Restaurant knew of Jorge's interest and contacted the Davilas in 2014 when he decided to sell. The couple accepted and began to fulfill their dream, but it was quickly apparent that driving daily from Lebanon wasn't practical.

The couple moved to Shelbyville shortly after the purchase of their first restaurant.

With La Hacienda operating successfully, Casa Mexicana became available to purchase. In much the same way, the connection was preexisting, and in 2018 the couple acquired their second restaurant.

“We love Shelbyville and all the support we get for our restaurants from the community.”

Managing, with the help of her brother-in-law, Renzo Davila; son, Mauricio Davila; and daughter-in-law, Aranza Davila, Rita and Jorge settled into life as restauranteers.

The couple frequented The Coffee Break on Shelbyville’s historic square and loved its atmosphere and history. Once again, the couple knew the coffee shop owners, and when the business became available, Rita didn’t want to miss the chance to buy it.

It might seem quite a jump from Mexican restaurants to a coffee shop, but it was a leap Rita made gracefully. Cooking there is easy and natural because Rita cooks American food at home.

Although the family works collectively in the Mexican restaurants, Rita is the only one working at The Coffee Break.

“It’s been fun!” she said. “We love Shelbyville and all the support we get for our restaurants from the community. We love the people. They’re so friendly here.”

Each location offers something unique. Come to La Hacienda for trivia on Thursday nights and test your knowledge. On Tuesdays at Casa Mexicana, you can play bingo. Both events award cash prizes. Daily specials at The Coffee Break offer lots of variety, and their bakery case will tempt you year-round.

Managing three restaurants is a full-time adventure. Still, there’s time with family away from work, especially at holidays when all locations are closed, to make family time a priority for everyone – the owners and their employees.

As if owning three dining locations isn’t enough, Rita is transitioning from her former position as an insurance underwriter. Hopefully, she said, the company will have her replacement trained and in place this year, freeing Rita to do what she loves.

Hard, but worth it, you can tell.

Improving the Industrial Park

The Shelbyville-Bedford Partnership is tasked with economic and community development

The Shelbyville-Bedford Partnership is tasked with economic and community development. A component of the economic development mission includes industrial recruitment for the Shelbyville and Bedford Industrial Park. Shelbyville and Bedford County jointly support an industrial park in the county's northwest corner. The park's general oversight and operations fall under a five-member appointed board of directors composed of city and county representatives.

Successful industrial recruitment requires the completion of site improvements known to foster growth within an industrial park. The Shelbyville-Bedford Partnership and 231 Board work together to facilitate the best circumstances for success in the park. The list of stakeholders interested in the success of the park at the state and local level include; the City of Shelbyville, County of Bedford, Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA), Tennessee Department of Economic and Community Development (TDECD), Middle Tennessee Industrial Development Authority (MTIDA), South Central Development District (SCDD), Shelbyville-Bedford Partnership (SBP) and others. The Bedford County Fire Department, Tax Assessor's Office, Register of Deeds, and Bedford County Trustee's Office are also on the list offering appropriate support.

Site Development Grants from TDECD with a matching portion from the city and county helped the site's marketability this spring and summer. The Partnership saw the need for funding to continue cleaning up and enhancing the industrial park property, recognizing that clearing the site makes for better visibility for line of sight viewing during prospect visits. Funding this spring paid for vegetation and fence row clearing, road viewing extensions, and the start of a building foundation, known as a pad. A pad is a precursor to a speculative building. Most successful communities in our geographic area already have speculative buildings. One of the communities widely regarded as successful is on its seventh speculative building.

When a company shows interest in an industrial park, the visitors are commonly referred to as prospects. Site visits are an opportunity for the community to present its best possible case for the prospective visitors to locate here. The community focus during a site visit is to show that all the expected improvements have been invested in the park. Funds from federal, state, and local stakeholders allow for improvements to the park to show well and function well in the end.

Nothing guarantees success in recruitment, but there is a checklist of items for best practices to reach success. The 231 Board of Directors and the Partnership are focused on achieving items on the best practices list with the guidance of our stakeholders.

The immediate plan is to continue to engage our stakeholders and partners to build a competitive and winning industrial park. Job growth within a community is key to economic success. Good paying jobs attract people with the ability to give back to the community and contribute to future success. The state of Tennessee and specifically Middle Tennessee, is growing economically and through the population exponentially. The intent is to manage the growth to produce a better Bedford in quality of life and place for our citizens and visitors alike.

Dr. Tammy Garrett

on the spot to school superintendent

By Tina Neeley
Photos contributed by Carol Garrette

She listens to everyone on the team, including students.

Having completed her first year as Bedford County's school superintendent, Dr. Tammy Garrett, who sees parents, students, teachers, supervisors, principals, and board members as one, is proud of her team's success.

"The talent, the knowledge, the heart of the people in Bedford County have stood out to me the most," Garrett said. Blessed to come into a group of talented teachers, principals, administrators, and board members, Garrett believed a coach was all that was needed to jumpstart a great school year. "We've been working together as a team, and I believe from that, we'll be successful," she said.

Originally from Franklin, Tennessee, then rural Spring Hill, her parents worked long, hard hours and wanted a better life for Dr. Garrett and her brother.

"They always pushed me, especially my mom. She was the kindest human ever," Dr. Garrett said.

Garrett's vision for her future was sharpened by her school and athletic experiences, teaching her perseverance and teamwork. In high school, a family friend recognized her potential and took her to the financial aid department of Middle Tennessee State University, where she was offered a scholarship on the spot, an opportunity that fulfilled her parents' hopes and Dr. Garrett's dream.

It's a dream she hopes to stir in the hearts of area students when they see the many opportunities available to them through our school system.

Once the future seed is planted, academic achievement propels students toward their goals. Dr. Garrett explained that growth has to occur before academic success, so her goal is to be competitive statewide next year.

Academic achievement is enabled by all on the child's education team. Dr. Garrett also wanted to increase morale and improve the support from the central office. Success is visible there as well. Dr. Garrett finds good listening and communication skills are critical. She listens to everyone on the team, including students, and recently formed the Superintendent's Student Advisory Council representing grades 4 through 12.

Looking to the future, Dr. Garrett sees several ways to improve the potential for our students' success.

"It's vital to get the students out of portables. More than we've realized, these portables have an impact on their overall experience and progress," she said.

"It's important to teach soft skills like teamwork, problem-solving, and critical thinking; those kinds of things will prepare them to be workers in the future of our great community," Garrett continued.

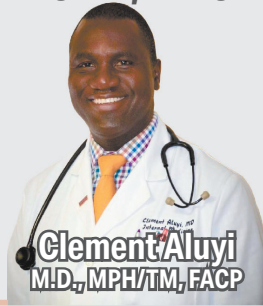

These feed into our community's business and economic future, creating employees needed for its success.

Dr. Garrett said, "We're looking at our Career Technical Education program, sitting down with businesses and asking if what we're offering needs to be changed to meet their needs."

With such a busy, dedicated lifestyle, Garrett still makes time for self-care, something she feels is important for everyone. Garrett enjoys the kindness of the people and the quiet lifestyle of Bedford County. Reading, traveling, lake life, and time with her adult children keep her motivated as she continues to motivate our community.

THE WEBB SCHOOL

BELL BUCKLE

FIND YOUR VOICE

The Webb School has a 152-year history of providing challenging academics with an emphasis on personal integrity in a small family-like setting. It is a place where young adults are not just expected to learn - they are encouraged to lead, helping to develop their own unique voices.

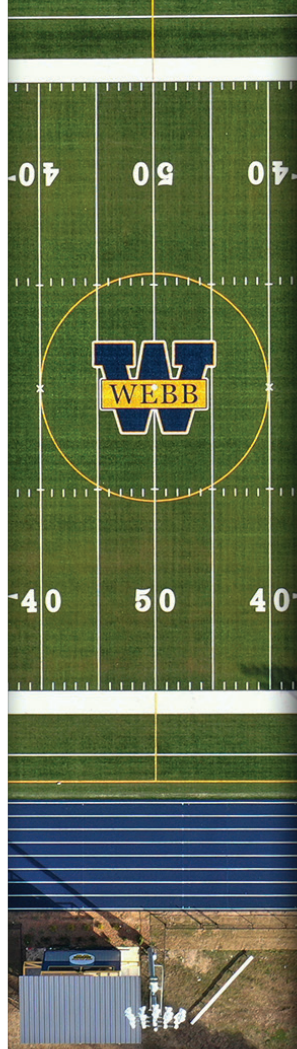

The Webb School is a co-ed, college preparatory day and boarding school for grades 6-12.

www.thewebbschool.com - Bell Buckle, TN - 931-389-6003

Webb embraces the future

The school is focusing on core values, academics, arts, and athletics.

The Webb School in Bell Buckle is looking forward to “what’s next.” The Webb community paused in October of 2021 to complete the school’s 150th anniversary celebration that began in August of 2019 and was postponed due to the pandemic. Webb is now fully embracing the future while holding fast to the school’s hallmarks.

“Focused on academics, arts and athletics, Webb is a school community of limitless possibility and capacity,” said Head of School Ken Cheeseman. “I am full of hope for the future as we reaffirm our core values and embrace new opportunities.” He added, “Our faculty and staff continue to partner with parents in preparing our students to impact the world in meaningful and positive ways.”

Cheeseman noted that Webb has a history of providing challenging academics and an emphasis on honor and character. Students are encouraged to embrace independent thinking and creative initiative, practice civic responsibility and excel on the state, regional, and national levels.

Webb’s strengths in preparing students for college and life find support in several unique programs and other opportunities.

Writing across the curriculum and public speaking are major emphases. In the Emerging Voices program students learn to create original ideas, assemble a body of research, and communicate those ideas effectively through writing and public speaking. They showcase their skills each year by performing declamations, orations, performance creations, and senior paper presentations.

Webb's Outerlimits and Wilderness Instruction and Leadership Development programs combine the classroom with the outdoors. Students develop leadership skills and confidence as they lead trips in Tennessee and beyond. Rock climbing, caving, backpacking, kayaking, and rafting are just some of the activities students can master.

A global education is built into the curriculum to continue graduating active citizens of the world. Students from 23 countries and 15 states provide a unique and diverse community. Each class, activity, and meal is an opportunity for students to connect and expand their viewpoint.

The flexible curriculum and small class sizes challenge students, allowing them to exceed their expectations. A 7:1 student-to-teacher ratio, and average class size of 12, encourages students to engage in their classes, sharing opinions and information with teachers and classmates.

Students can develop new passions in Webb's fine arts program that offers two theatre productions each year as well as a choir, string orchestra, piano and guitar classes and numerous opportunities for the visual arts, including photography, pottery and AP art courses. They can also challenge themselves and excel in Webb's competitive sports including basketball, baseball, cheerleading, cross-country, football, golf, lacrosse, soccer, softball, tennis, track, volleyball and clay target.

New and redesigned facilities are continuing to enhance Webb's campus and support its goals.

"I firmly believe that Webb can be the best small boarding/day school in the Southeast and perhaps the country, in instilling a love for and excellence in the three A's: academics, arts, and athletics," said Cheeseman. "Since my earliest days in education, I have seen the combination of clear, high standards aspired to within the deep, healthy relationships between teachers/coaches and students to produce the best, most transformative learning."

"I firmly believe that Webb can be the best small boarding/day school in the Southeast and perhaps the country"

This is your hospital

Vanderbilt brings specialized healthcare home.

By Tina Neeley

Vanderbilt Bedford Hospital continues its commitment to investing in the Shelbyville and Bedford County community. In the nearly two years since Vanderbilt University Medical Center (VUMC) acquired Shelbyville Tennova Hospital, the quality of healthcare available to area residents has grown almost as fast as the population. And the use of the hospital and its partner providers has exceeded Bedford County's population of 50,237 people.

Bill Rich, president of the hospital, said, "Last year, there were just over 97,000 patient encounters, whether it was coming into our emergency room, going to any of our clinics, having surgery, physical therapy, wound care, being admitted to our hospital – any clinical encounter anyone had in Bedford County. I think that shows we're here to make sure we have the services that the community needs, and I think it also shows the community wants us here."

VUMC's investment began with its acquisition of the hospital and continues today and into the future.

"The first year was about stabilization, getting through the transition from Tennova to [VUMC]. Then it was about gap analysis and what the needs of this community are, so we can develop plans to address those needs," Rich continued.

A big part of those plans included updating the hospital's equipment as well as its medical record system. The new system, E-Star, connects all of VUMC's facilities and partners with live, up-to-date information.

Rich said, "E-Star is a big piece of how we continue to grow and fulfill our mission of serving Bedford Countians."

Information from visits to a VUMC primary care provider is linked with tests at VUMC facilities, anywhere they are located. A visit to the emergency room resulting in hospital admittance, becomes part of the chart. All tests and information-to-date are available to anyone in the Vanderbilt network that is treating the patient.

"As long as it's within the Vanderbilt Health system, it is here for all of our providers so we can coordinate and take better care of our patients. Even at the main campus in Nashville, providers can look at your entire medical history and see everything. That's a wonderful real-time example of care coordination. Even the patient can access their medical history," Rich said.

Another way VUMC is meeting needs is through the emergency room. Beginning July 1, all emergency room physicians, nurse practitioners, and physician assistants will be Vanderbilt-employed personnel, not those provided by staffing companies. If admitted for further care, the dedicated hospitalist will also be a Vanderbilt employee.

Rich said, "We've replaced everything in our lab with state-of-the-art, top-of-the-line lab equipment. Also, we have a new 3D mammography for enhanced imaging and new beds and mattresses in patient rooms. We've also been able to recruit six new providers in nine months which is great for our community."

"It's a wonderful feeling when your local community supports you because we know patients have choices. We want you to own your hospital, be proud of your hospital, and we want the whole community to see it that way," said Rich.

Lynchburg Outdoors Celebration of Speed

Celebration-of-Speed

Each year, a particular local business owner makes a loud ruckus throughout the town of Shelbyville. No really! Patrick Bedford of Lynchburg Outdoors hosts a motorcycle race that quite literally brings the sound of rumbling motorcycle enthusiasts to Shelbyville each year! The Celebration of Speed race day has become an annual event held at Shelbyville, Tennessee's world-famous Walking Horse Complex.

The races at this event are either flat racing or speedway racing. This type of racing differs from motocross, as the speedway is flat and goes around in a circle. The competition is open to both amateur and professional racers of all ages. It is safe to say that the appeal to this sport has no bounds when it comes to age, as the youngest class of riders is a shocking 6 and under age group. Then, the older class of riders is a 50+ age group. Racing, unlike so many other sports, is a sport that you can enjoy for a lifetime. Falling in love with racing at a young age is actually what inspired event organizer Bedford to rally the troops for the first race over five years ago. After five years of Celebration of Speed, the event has significantly gained traction. It has become more sophisticated year after year. Both racers and spectators travel as far as Poland to watch and race.

Bedford, the owner of a 6,000 square foot motorcycle shop (Lynchburg Outdoors) in Lynchburg, Tennessee, has been riding for over 50 years. Bedford first hopped on a motorcycle at a mere 6 years old. He has been riding ever since. His passion for the throttle fueled him to open a motorcycle shop, publish an online motorcycle magazine, form a racing community, offer riding instruction classes (Learn To Ride Academy), and founded Celebration of Speed.

This year's event was held on February 26, 2022, at the Calsonic Arena in Shelbyville. Event gates opened to the public at 1 p.m. The main events began at 5:45 p.m. and lasted to about 9 p.m. There were 38 races in total. For those who missed the event in person, CinePros, a film production company out of Huntsville, Alabama, filmed the event. The video has been made available on the Celebration of Speed Facebook page. The Celebration of Speed event and the livestream video were made available through the financial support of all of the race sponsors and advertisers.

Next year's Celebration of Speed race is scheduled tentatively for February 25, 2023. If you or your business are interested in becoming a sponsor, you may contact Patrick Bedford (256) 361-7279.

Things to do

Sunchaser Market

The Sunchaser Market may have started as just another country market off the side of a sleepy highway, but it has goals to become much more! This restaurant, market, and deli is slowly becoming a community hub for good food and fun. Although it still has its Southern flair, complete with daily plate specials, the market is making every effort to serve the Flat Creek and Shelbyville community by providing a space to connect. Hosting cornhole tournaments and amusing fundraisers are some small ways they are expanding their reach!

Things to do

The Celebration, Inc.

Photography by James Jordan

Believe it or not, Shelbyville is home to the largest event facility in Tennessee. While most people only associate Shelbyville's arenas with the world-famous walking horse shows, the Celebration has much more to offer. It hosts many different events throughout the year, including demolition derbies, monster truck shows, softball tournaments, rodeos, motorcycle races, golf shootout tournaments, bluegrass festivals, dog shows, and disc golf tournaments. Events can be held indoors at the Calsonic Arena, the Hall of Fame Club, or the Blue Ribbon Club. Events better suited for the outdoors can be held either at the Celebration arena, the Champions arena, or the Celebration campground.

Things to do

Poker Run

Shelbyville is no stranger to wearing leather and participating in poker runs. A poker run is an organized event in which participants (typically on motorcycles) visit a predetermined list of checkpoints, drawing a poker card at each stop. Participants pay to play, hence the way funds are raised. The object is to have the best poker hand at the last stop. One of Shelbyville's most memorable poker runs was "Four the Boys Benefit and Poker Run." The run was the community's effort to help raise money for four brothers ages 4-11 who lost their mother in a brutal murder. The run began at Georgia's Sports Bar in Smyrna. The cyclists raced on to Dewayne's Bar & Grill in Murfreesboro, The Iron Horse in Wartrace, The Lynchburg Square, and then finally landed at Penalties Sports Bar in Shelbyville.

Want to network with other bikers or participate in an upcoming poker run? Visit cyclefish.com/motorcycle_events/tennessee for more information.

Cascade Hollow Distillery

The Cascade Hollow Distillery is surrounded by 600 protected acres of forest and crystal-fresh springs. Since 1870, the distillery has been faithful to the recipe George A. Dickel created. Today it is crafted just as it was then — Handmade the Hard Way. Take a one hour tour through the fully operational distillery and barrelhouse.

Pritchard's Distillery

Prichard's Distillery is in Kelso, Tennessee in an old schoolhouse where the basketball hoops still hang on the wall. Their quality rums and whiskeys are distilled in copper pots and stored in 15-gallon to 53-gallon charred white oak barrels to allow for the best possible flavor.

Southern Pride Distillery

If you like moonshine, Southern Pride Distillery is the place for you. Using an old family recipe, they mill locally grown corn on-site to produce their premium distilled spirits. On a beautiful farm outside of Fayetteville, the distillery produces seven flavors of distilled spirits and two Double Barrel Charred Shines.

Nearest Green Distillery

In Lynchburg, the name Nearest Green has always meant something special. Hailing from Maryland, we don't know how or when Uncle Nearest made his way to Tennessee. What we can confirm is he is the first African-American master distiller on record in the U.S. and thought to be responsible for helping perfect the Lincoln County Process.
