

Poliquin recognized by U.S. Chamber of Commerce

The pro-business group honors members of Congress for their votes and work on measures supporting job creation.

Maine Second District Congressman Bruce Poliquin received the Spirit of Enterprise Award from the U.S. Chamber of Commerce recently in recognition of his near-perfect score of 95% - among the highest ratings of all members of Congress - by the pro-business group for his work and votes to support job creation in Maine during his first year in Washington.

After the ceremony,

Poliquin released the following statement: "I greatly appreciate the Chamber's award and recognition of the work I've done in Congress to help create jobs. I understand there is still much more to be done to grow our economy. As many Mainers unfortunately know all too well, disastrous policies from Washington are smothering Maine businesses and threatening hundreds of jobs across our State. In the coming year, I will continue to fight for fair policies that promote business growth and expansion and allow for more workers to be hired in our communities throughout Maine."

"We are pleased to recognize Congressman Poliquin for engaging in pro-business policymaking that helps strengthen our nation's spirit of enterprise," said Tom Donohue, president and CEO of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. "The Spirit of Enterprise Award honors those members of Congress who are committed to ensuring that American businesses can continue to operate and succeed in a free enterprise system."

Last week, Poliquin spoke at the Lewiston-Auburn Metropolitan Chamber of Commerce breakfast at the Franco Center, where he was honored for his 95% See Poliquin, page 3

BIW Simulation Room dedicated at CMCC

The General Dynamics-Bath Iron Works Simulation Room at Central Maine Community College was formally dedicated in a brief ceremony held recently at the College. Located on the third floor of The Tower, the new academic building that opened last fall, the simulation room is equipped with group pods, each with a computer and screen, and moveable writing boards that are ideal for brainstorming sessions. Due to the room layout and maneuverability, class focus can easily switch between lecture and group work. Now viewed as a prototype, the College is exploring the conversion of some existing spaces into similar simulation rooms.

The room was made possible by a generous gift from BIW, which has long been a strong supporter of the College and the Maine Community College System. Many BIW employees have completed training programs at CMCC in areas such as supervisor development and precision machine milling.

Governor's Address: Legislature needs to wake up and help create jobs

With the sudden closure of Madison Paper Industries, 214 more Mainers will lose their jobs. The Legislature's response is typical: they are holding more meetings and attempting to increase energy costs.

Dear Maine Taxpayer, With the decline in demand for the paper Madison produces, it is no surprise the mill was failing. Maine companies face these challenges every day, as well as fierce competition from the national and global marketplace. We should not be making it harder for them to operate at home.

When is the Legislature going to wake up? I've been saying it for years: high energy costs, high taxes and more regulations from special interest groups are crushing the jobs that Mainers so desperately need. In fact, a General Consul from a foreign country just did a study and found Maine has the 19th highest cost of doing business in the United States. But Democrats won't do anything to improve our business climate and help create jobs.

The solutions are right in front of us. The Legislature just has to act on them. First, the Executive Branch needs more authority over the tree growth program. With so much land in tree growth, not enough wood is being cut in Southern Maine, which drives up wood costs in Northern Maine. This program must be better managed to lower the cost of wood.

Second, energy costs must be reduced. Dozens of companies told us energy costs are making it difficult—if not impossible—to do business here. High energy costs have been a major factor in the mill closings that put hundreds of Mainers out of work. To reduce energy costs, we must be open to all resources, rather than artificially creating markets for solar. We also should encourage our biomass industry to build co-generation power plants.

Third, we need to approve a competing measure that would increase the minimum wage at a reasonable and manageable rate. The businesses that propel Maine's economy simply cannot absorb a rapid increase in the minimum wage. Our job creators would be forced to lay off workers or increase their prices to cover the sudden jump in labor costs, which would hit elderly Mainers, our youth and those on fixed incomes particularly hard.

Fourth, liberals and socialists must stop picking on their favorite target: the "one-percenters." By constantly trying to "tax the rich" and drive them out of our state, they are chasing away the business owners and investors who create good jobs for Mainers. When they leave, they take their wealth—and their jobs—with them.

Finally, we must remove the bureaucratic red tape that discourages business owners from trying to expand and grow their companies. We need strict regulations; however, they should not be wrapped so tightly in red tape that companies can't cut through it to create jobs Mainers need and deserve.

Unfortunately, these common-sense solutions have no place in the job-crushing agenda from the liberals and socialists in Augusta. Their lack of action is causing layoffs and preventing other businesses from creating new jobs. Meetings and sound bites don't help the Mainers who just lost their jobs. Contact your legislators and tell them to wake up. If they don't take action, the next Mainer to lose his job could be you.

Thank You,
Paul R. LePage

job-creation voting score from the Chamber. Geoff O'Hara, vice president of Regional Affairs and Advocacy at the U.S. Chamber, applauded him at the breakfast for his standout score.

The Chamber's prestigious Spirit of Enterprise Award is given annually to members of Congress based on their votes on critical business legislation as outlined in the Chamber publication, "How They Voted." Members who supported the Chamber's position on at least 70 percent of those votes qualify to receive the award.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce is the world's largest business federation, representing the interests of more than 3 million businesses of all sizes, sectors, and regions, as well as state and local chambers and industry associations.

Kate Braestrup

Lewiston Public Library will present Maine author Kate Braestrup for a talk about her most recent book, "Anchor & Flares: A Memoir of Motherhood, Hope & Service" on Thursday, March 24 at 6 p.m. Her presentation will be followed by a Q & A, book sale and signing. The event is free and open to the public.

As a young mother,

Bestselling author at LPL tonight

Braestrup discovered the fierce protectiveness that accompanies parenthood. In the years that followed, through mourning her husband and the joy of remarriage and a blended family, she experienced the blessings and complications of that instinct. But when her eldest son joins the Marines, she finds herself at a crossroads: Can she reconcile her desire to protect her children with her family's legacy of service? Can parents balance the joy of a child's independence with the fear of letting go?

As she grapples with faith and fear, inspired by the families she meets as a chaplain and by her son's journey towards purpose and fatherhood, she learns that the threats we can't predict both rip us apart and knit us together. Through her inimitable voice and generous spirit, this memoir lovingly explores the complexities of parenthood and service.

Kate Braestrup serves as chaplain to the Maine Warden Service. She is the author of a novel "Onion" and several bestselling memoirs. She lives in Maine with her husband and their six children.

Only Step Forward

Young professionals bode well for Auburn's future

By Jonathan P. LaBonté
MAYOR OF AUBURN

Maine and our region's greatest long-term challenge for economic growth is attracting and retaining a trained, highly qualified workforce to help businesses succeed and expand. That's one reason, not long after I moved back to Auburn in 2005, I worked with a small group of "young professionals" to start the Young Professionals of the Lewiston-Auburn Area, or YPLAA (pronounced

"why-play").

A number of Maine communities have created groups like YPLAA to network with those roughly in the 20-to-40 age group and support them in starting and sustaining successful careers. Attracting recent college graduates or those early in their careers to Auburn and the region can be helped by highlighting the creative, successful people that already call this place home.

While YPLAA set out to do that with a recent "40 under 40" online voting contest, I wanted to take this space to highlight a few professionals in our community that I admire for their success to date. They didn't make the nominees list, but are definitely in my top 40 list.

I first offer Dana Staples Dana is a young man who grew up in Auburn and attended Edward Little High School. He studied at the University

Mayor Jonathan P. LaBonté of Southern Maine and is now a software engineer at Tyler Technologies. In his professional career, he is the leading voice for the Maine App Challenge, sponsored by Tyler Technologies, a competition for high school students statewide to develop mobile phone applications for a chance to win scholarships. His work promoting this program and the opportunity of technology careers for Maine's students is exciting.

Here in Auburn, Dana has been a volunteer on Auburn's Recreation Advisory Board and has assisted in the advocacy for converting the former Ingersoll Ice Arena in the Ingersoll Field Turf Arena, our region's only indoor turf facility. Dana volunteers in many other ways in Auburn, and I'm glad he chose to settle back in his hometown with his skills.

On the education front, Auburn is fortunate to have Central Maine Community College calling the shores of Lake Auburn home. We are also fortunate that young professional Betsy Libby serves as its Dean of Academic Affairs, a position second in command to longtime President Scott Knapp. Betsy has had a successful career in higher education and came back to Maine from a position in the State University of New York system.

Given how essential CMCC has become not only to equipping area businesses with highly trained employees, but also becoming a gateway to college for thousands of area students, having a young professional born and raised in Maine return to lead our community college in academic affairs is a huge win for our region. Her leadership on the transfer program, early college efforts and new partnerships with high schools differentiates CMCC and clearly puts her on my short list for 40 revitalizing our downtown is an angle not to be missed, and Corrie Bernatchez is a professional under 40 who is more than worthy of recognition. Corrie believed that having a fun and unique venue to enjoy treats with family and friends was missing in Auburn and so set out to create Top It Frozen Yogurt, now on Main Street in Auburn.

As an Edward Little graduate, Corrie wasted no time giving back to Auburn by investing and creating jobs. Her business offers creative programming inside and out that draws people to sit on our sidewalks and enjoy our historic downtown. Corrie teamed up with her mother Stephanie, the owner of Maine Gourmet Chocolates (love the needhams!), to open back-to-back storefronts in the Roak Block.

Speaking of families in business together, I'd also put forward Scott and Jon Demers, two local brothers who took one recipe of their grandmother's and turned it into Cheating Gourmet, a line of high-quality frozen foods sold in hundreds of grocery stores and growing. Starting a consumer products business is no easy feat—neither is negotiating food science research, taste testing and securing lucrative freezer space in America's leading grocers.

While their contracted production is not currently based here, the Demers brothers keep their headquarters and sales office here and have quietly built a successful business while holding down other full-time jobs, Scott in real estate and Jon as a Lewiston fire fighter.

These individuals are five very clear reasons I'm bullish on the future of Auburn and the region and how we grow jobs and attract more people here. And they deserve recognition for their efforts.

Enough is Enough

Skilled technical workers are needed to run our economy

By Robert E. Macdonald
MAYOR OF LEWISTON

"If you don't go to college you'll never be a success!" How many times have you heard this apocalyptic prediction?

In Maine, 25 percent of our population has obtained some type of college degree. Degrees range from an Associate Degree (the successful completion of two years of study), a Bachelor's Degree (four years), a Master's Degree (six years) and finally a Doctorate Degree (lots of years of study).

With such a small population of educated people, it is no wonder we have such a large welfare population.

Our Progressive friends

(the ones with more letters following their names than are found in the alphabet) have seized upon this statistic, using it to repeatedly bombard the general public with rhetoric that leaves you with the premise that if you don't attain some type of college degree, you will be condemned to go through life with an "L" for loser branded on your forehead.

You are led to believe the world is your oyster once your hot little hands receive that degree. You are led to believe that employment in your field of study will be almost automatic. You are on the verge of a new prosperous life. Then reality hits.

Suddenly you find that once-promising field you studied so hard for has been saturated by people with the same degree as yours. You look but cannot find a job, at least one in your field of study. Suddenly that smooth-appearing financial road you have been walking on starry-eyed for the last four years is now becoming bumpy and filled with potholes.

In order to meet your financial responsibilities, you are forced to seek employment in the fast food, retail and manual labor industries.

You look around and see your former classmates—the ones that sat next to you in class, played on the same sports team and once dated your sibling—are now married with children, own a home, have a good job and any debt payments they have incurred are going towards equity, not down a black hole. They chose to seek employment over college and now wear a "W" for winner tattooed on their heads.

They are the people who are needed to ensure that society moves smoothly each day. Although they may never rise to the role of movers and shakers, without them the movers and shakers would not exist.

Today in our schools we are failing many of our students by concentrating too heavily on academics aimed at getting them on the path to college. We have lost sight and pushed to the side those who, although not academically gifted, become skilled craftsmen when allowed to use their hands and their God-given creativity.

In Lewiston-Auburn and the State of Maine, we are in dire need of skilled technical workers. It's time to give our students a chance to hone their skills. By doing so, they will become an integral part of a local labor force needed to ensure our local economic engine runs smoothly.

It is time to radically redo our current school model and place a greater emphasis on what was once called the "industrial arts." Such an investment will ensure our city is a destination for companies looking for a strong-skilled work force.

It is with great pride that I congratulate the Lewiston High School Cheerleaders for their impressive win and again becoming the reigning New England Champs.

stone buildings, owners and developers want to keep and maintain the real value of their properties; effective conservation is the key to this goal. The program will outline the process for and various challenges in repairing historic masonry buildings, including analyzing a building's condition, considering issues of design and constructability, meeting legal standards for Rehabilitation, and proposing solutions that meet budget.

This work is a team sport, and the presenters will also discuss the role of various team members on a project. The presenters of the program will be Mike Johnson of the Maine Historic Preservation Commission; Scott Whitaker and Stephen Jones of Building Envelope Specialists; and Steve Pedersen of WBRC Architects/Engineers.

The registration fee, which will increase $10 after March 29, is $25 for MEREDA members and $35 for non-members. For more information, call 874-0802. To register online, see mereda.org.

Franco Center to host Adult Prom Night

“Bring your friends for the most fun you’ve had since high school... maybe the most fun you’ve had ever!” says executive director Mitch Thomas, who invites everyone to the Gendron Franco Center’s upcoming, first-ever, “just like high school... only better” Adult Prom Night on Friday, April 8 from 7 to 11:30 p.m.

The principal of fictitious “L-A High School” will be your host for the evening. “We’re all adults here, and you can do anything you want at Prom,” principal says. “However, there are rules! Get dressed up and be prepared for a prom night celebration loaded with lots of laughter, great food, music from across the decades, the ‘prom punch’ you always dreamed of, chaperons, and many more surprises!”

The evening’s program will also include the coronation of a Prom King and Queen, cheerleaders, a photo booth, and more. The doors and bar will open at 7 p.m. A delicious buffet dinner prepared by the Franco Center staff will be served from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. After that, guests will dance from 8:30 to 11:30 p.m. to tunes spanning the decades of the second half of the twentieth century.

The event is sponsored in part by Ann’s Flower Shop. Those attending may call Ann’s at 782-3457 to order corsages and boutonnieres and have them held at will-call for the event. Community Little Theatre at 30 Academy Street in Auburn will open its costume shop for a rent-or-buy day featuring dresses and tuxes from every decade on Saturday, March 26, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The ticket price of $35 includes dinner, dancing, entertainment and other surprises! A similar event planned for Saturday night sold out in just three weeks, and only a limited number of seats remain for Friday, so booking night right away is advised. To reserve seats, call 783-1585 or see franco-center.org.

Husson introduces new degree programs for Fall 2016

Husson University announced recently that it will launch six new degree programs in the areas of science, technology and management to prepare students for career success in current and emerging fields. Including both undergraduate and graduate degrees from Husson University's College of Business, College of Pharmacy and School of Science and Humanities, the following programs will be available in Fall 2016.

Master of Business Administration (MBA), with a concentration in Biotechnology and Innovation. In recent years, biotechnology firms have become a driving force behind the research and development of creative new solutions to healthcare issues. Integrating scientific, clinical, digital and regulatory change, this industry is now one of the fastest-growing sectors of the economy. As a result, there is an increased demand for business professionals who understand how service, marketing, systems, finance and medical research intersect. This program will be offered online at online.husson.edu.

Master of Business Administration (MBA), with a concentration in Risk Management. Risk and uncertainty are present in all types of businesses and organizations. Inadequate risk management can result in severe fiscal, legal, physical or environmental consequences. Focused on the identification and assessment of employee rights and benefits, as well as liabilities, regulations and law, this MBA program is designed to provide students with the knowledge and skills they'll need as leaders in insurance, human resources and other operations positions. Students will learn to understand, analyze, and address risk to ensure that organizations achieve their performance objectives.

Master of Science in Pharmacology. This advanced degree provides students with laboratory bench skills and in-depth knowledge of pharmacology and toxicology. The program admits students who have obtained a bachelor's degree in chemistry, biology or some other science-based undergraduate degree. The program is a great fit for students interested in careers in the pharmaceutical industry, biomedical research or furthering their education to obtain an advanced degree, such as a doctorate. Employment opportunities for pharmacologists include work in the pharmaceutical industry, government agencies, laboratories, and biotechnology companies.

Bachelor of Science in Biochemistry. The need to develop biological products and processes that improve people's lives is fueling the demand for biochemists. These individuals study the chemical and physical principles of living things and biological processes, such as cell development, growth, heredity, and disease. Biochemists can then apply this knowledge in research and commercial enterprises, typically working in laboratories and offices where they conduct experiments and analyze the results. Students who complete this degree will have the foundation of knowledge needed to work in chemistry, healthcare, business and environmental science or go on to graduate work in the health professions. Graduate work can include research as well as medical, pharmacy or veterinary school.

Bachelor of Science in Data Analytics. Data analytics is all about evaluating and making decisions based on information. Students in this program will learn how to use tools from computer science, mathematics and statistics to collect, organize and analyze data. They then communicate these results to help people make informed decisions. This field has a wide range of applications. Finance, energy, environmental, healthcare, sports, marketing, research, and other organizations all need qualified data analytics professionals.

Bachelor of Science in Exercise Science. As people become more health conscious, the demand for professionals who can both prevent and rehabilitate injury or disease is expected to increase. In fact, the demand for athletic trainers in particular is projected to grow 21 percent from 2014 to 2024 - much faster than the average for all occupations. Graduates of this degree program are trained to assess, design and implement exercise plans for people who may be healthy or who have been compromised by disease or injury. Employment opportunities include work in medical, private, commercial and sports fitness facilities as well as clinical settings such as cardiac and pulmonary rehabilitation. Other graduates may move on to medical school or research careers.

“These new degrees will provide students with the specialized skills and education demanded by companies in today’s complex, innovative and technological global economy,” said James Westhoff, Director of Career Services at Husson University. “Our degrees focus on experiential learning and include an emphasis on internships. This learn-by-doing approach gives Husson students’ a unique ability to provide value to employers and is why so many firms compete to hire our graduates.”

“I just retired from the post office after almost 30 years. I really loved being a letter carrier, working outside and getting to know all the people. But it took a toll on my knees. My last route was over five miles and by the end of the day, I felt it. The pain got almost unbearable. When it started keeping me up at night, I said, I have to get this taken care of. Celebrated singer-songwriter Carrie Newcomer will perform in concert at Phippsburg Congregational Church on Sunday, April 3, at 4 p.m. She will be joined by pianist Gary Walters.

The much lauded, Grammy-winning songwriter

Newcomer has attracted a devoted following with her warm voice, captivating melodies, and irreverent but spiritual view of the world. She has recorded 15 solo albums, performed around the world, and recorded with Alison Krauss and Mary Chapin Carpenter. In 2003, Nickel Creek recorded her song “I Should’ve Known Better” on their gold-selling, Grammy-winning album “This Side.” This year, she will be inducted into Michael Feinstein’s Great American Songbook Foundation.

In addition to her music, Newcomer has become a prominent voice for social justice and interfaith dialogue. She was recently featured on Krista Tippett’s NPR show “On Being” and has received numerous Palmer, “Healing the Heart of Democracy: A Gathering of Spirits for the Common Good,” was filmed for public television. She has also collaborated with neuroscientist and author Jill Bolte Taylor in presenting “Transformative Stories.”

Newcomer has performed in venues as diverse as Carnegie Hall, the Kennedy Center, London’s Royal Festival Hall, a humble rural school in Africa, a women’s cooperative in India, a Quaker meeting house in Ramala, and an Indiana women’s penitentiary.

Public Theatre takes applications for summer program

The program for young actors ages 11 through 16 runs July 11 through 29.

The Public Theatre is now accepting applications for its 2016 Professional Theatre Training Program for Young Actors ages 11 to 16. The program, which meets Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., includes during its morning sessions classes in stage combat, movement, voice and speech, singing and text analysis. Afternoon sessions consist of master acting classes and rehearsals. Taking place July 11 through 29, the three-week program culminates in a public performance at the end of the final week.

The program encourages young actors to tap into their potential to make the process of creation as important and exciting as the final show. Students will learn to think on their feet and work as an ensemble, building self-esteem, confidence and acting skills while having fun in the process. Participation in the program is through audition only. Serious students who seek professional training are urged to apply. Scholarships are available for a limited number of students with appropriate financial need.

Whether you're an experienced young performer wanting intensive theater training or a "raw talent" looking to channel your creativity and imagination, this high-quality theatre program will challenge and inspire you. Taught by theatre professionals with professional-level standards and insights, The Public Theatre's summer intensive program is a unique alternative to other "drama camps" and a great place to start learning the skills of acting.

For more information on fees and upcoming auditions, call 782-2211, email info@thepublictheatre.org or see www.thepublictheatre.org.

CLT announces cast for "Little Shop of Horrors"

Cast members for the upcoming production include Derrick Lacasse, Felicia Mcleod, Kay Warren and Lindsay Cagney.

L/A Community Little Theatre has announced the cast of its upcoming production of the cult clas-

maid," "Beauty and the Beast" and "Aladdin") are the creative geniuses behind what has become one of the most popular shows in the world. CLT's production will be directed by Vincent Ratsavong, with musical direction by Rebecca Caron.

Michael Litchfield will play Seymour Krelborn, an orphan who works in the crummiest and least successful flower shop on New York's skid row. In fact, business is so bad at Mushnik's Skid Row Florists that cranky Mr. Mushnik (Jason Pelletier) has informed his only two employees, Seymour and Audrey (Christine Gill), that the time has come to close shop for good. In a last ditch attempt to save their jobs, Seymour places a strange and interesting plant he has been caring for in the store window, and a customer is so charmed and fascinated by it that he buys $100 worth of roses. This starts Mushnik and Seymour to thinking: could this plant, which Seymour has named Audrey II (voiced by Rebecca Singer, manipulated by Riley McCurdy), be the answer to their prayers?

Before long, business is booming, Mushnik is thinking of adopting Seymour, Seymour is finding it harder and harder to think of Audrey as just a co-worker, and Audrey is wondering if Seymour might just be the knight in nerdy armor who can rescue her from Orin Scrivello, D.D.S. (Derrick Lacasse), her sadistic dentist boyfriend.

Meanwhile, a group of grade school dropouts named Chiffon (Felicia Mcleod), Crystal (Kay Warren) and Ronnette (Lindsay Cagney) keep popping up to comment on the action and sing backup to songs in tight three-part harmony. Mix in a colorful collection of skid row residents (Abigail Hart, Sophie Wood, Cheyenne Dulac, Maxwell Draper, Christi Belanger and Ricky Brewster) and audiences are in for an entertaining ride.

Performances will take place at L/A Community Little Theatre on April 15 and 16 and 21 through 23 at 7:30 p.m. and on April 17 and 24 at 2 p.m. Tickets are $18 for adults, $15 for seniors and $12 for students. They can be purchased by calling the box office at 783-0958 or at www.laclt.com.
