A NEW PLAY FOR HORSE LOVERS & OTHERS

Tumbleweed Smith

A trio of professional horse trainers, 2 of them with doctors degrees and one with a masters, recently wrote a play with a long title: TWO OLD COWBOYS TALKING AT THE BEST LITTLE HORSE HOUSE IN TEXAS.

"It's clean," says Dr. Michael Johnson of Commerce, one of the authors. "It's a parody of characters that we've all known."

Tumbleweed Smith

He is an expert on horse behavior and has written books on the subject. His co-author is his friend Greg Dial of Blanco. The third member of the cast is Dr. Mary Marzak of La Grange, a veterinarian.

"We were going to do this and if it bombed we would never do it again," says Michael. "It didn't bomb."

Obviously the play is about horses and some of the characters involved with the proper care and training of them. But the play's appeal extends beyond horse lovers.

Michael says when he started he was going to tell this unique story about growing up on a ranch and make people laugh. "I was so wrong. It did make people laugh, not because it was a unique story but because it was a universal story."

One of the characters Michael plays is a teenager.

"This kid jumps on stage. Jimmy Joe Jones. Eighteen years old, knows everything in the world. You can't tell him anything. And everybody in the audience knows who he is because they either were one or they raised one."

He also plays a shyster horse trainer named Bronco Bill. "I tell Mary what can I do for you, darlin'? I can give you anything you need for your horse. It'll be real cheap and very effective, guaranteed success. We promise we can train your horse and if we can't your horse is an idiot and you need to get rid of him."

The play is scripted with some improvisation. One of the first times it was presented was at Fort Griffin State Park near Albany.

"Before we were gonna go on, I had a sinking spell. Not nervousness, just some thoughts that it's short, trite, it's not funny. But I was wrong. The audience really liked it. They recognized all the characters and have gone through the same things depicted in the play. I wondered if the reason it was so well received was because all those people there were pretty skilled horsemen or did they like it because it was like GREATER TUNA? I thought maybe it was because we were speaking to our tribe. I don't think that anymore."
