National Farm Safety and Health Week

September 18 to 24, 2022

4 FARM SAFETY TIPS

Celebrated from September 18 to 24, 2022, National Farm Safety and Health Week is an annual occasion that focuses on promoting health and safety on farms. If you live or work on a farm, you share the responsibility of keeping yourself and others safe. In honor of this event, here are four things you can do to ensure neither you nor anyone you're working with is involved in a farming accident.

1. Keep your warning signals functioning

Ensure the warning lights and sounds on the machine you're using are functioning and that the labeling is clear and visible. These signals provide essential warnings to their operators and those around them.

2. Be careful around power take-off (PTO) shafts

PTO shafts transfer power from a tractor to an attached implement. Although extremely useful, PTOs can be dangerous. Therefore, make sure to keep loose clothing and items away from the shaft and never reach or step over one while in operation.

3. Invest in rollover protection

If you don't already have one, consider investing in a rollover protective structure (ROPS) for your tractor. Every year, farmers are injured or killed in tractor rollovers.

4. Get plenty of sleep

If you're tired, you're more likely to make mistakes that could cost you or someone you're working with a limb or their life. Get the sleep you need and quit working if you're too tired to continue safely.

Safety and health are the responsibility of everyone working on a farm.

Protecting agriculture's future
