Market To Open

By EMILY RAMSEY
Managing Editor

Broken Arrow's Rose District Farmers Market opens April 23, to be held every Saturday 8 a.m.-noon, through Sept. 24.

Due to construction that will soon begin on Main Street, the market will not operate in the Pavilion on Main Street but, instead, will operate in a parking lot located southeast of City Hall at First and Dallas streets.

As for vendors that shoppers can expect, "this is the first year that, entering into the season, every booth is filled with no open spaces available," says Farmers Market Coordinator Judy Prieto, with a lot of new and returning vendors, including many produce vendors and craft and specialty items including dog items, flowers, meats, eggs, cheeses, breakfast foods, pickled products, home and yard decor items, and bird feeders.

In addition to bringing variety to the market, Prieto endeavors to impact the whole family: "I want to create an experience for children that they want to repeat by continuing to go back to the market as they get older."

As in past summers, dogs are allowed at the market. Although, Prieto reminds patrons to think before bringing their dogs, considering whether the market will be a good environment for their dogs.

The market will also feature a Kids Corner that will be hosted each Saturday by a different nonprofit group that will offer an activity for children. In addition, five large events will be held throughout the summer, starting with the market's opening day when it will hold its Earth Day festival. Recycling organizations will be present to allow patrons to recycle items for free, including televisions, microwaves and other electronics.

Main St. in downtown Broken Arrow. The garden is a project of Keep Broken Arrow Beautiful. All proceeds from the organization's Rose Gala, on April 9, will go toward phase one of the project.

By EMILY RAMSEY
Managing Editor

In April and May, Keep Broken Arrow Beautiful (KBAB) will hold three events that continue to further the organization's goal "to clean up the city" and, in effect, keep Broken Arrow beautiful, says Board Chair Peggy Striegel, while also raising money and awareness for the organization's next large rose project.

On April 9, the Rose Gala will be held at the Main Street Loft, 200 S. Main St., at 6 p.m. The evening will include a live auction, silent auction and 1920s-themed entertainment with hors d'oeuvres and a cash bar. Tickets are $50 per person.

Proceeds from the Rose Gala will go toward KBAB's Nelson Commemorative Rose Garden, a future rose garden to be located at 1500 S. Main St., next to the Central Park Community Center. The organization's rose committee, which oversees, plans and manages rose projects in Broken Arrow, is in charge of the rose garden project.

Plans for the garden include water features and a one-acre rose garden, walking trails and benches. The park would also include a large glass building and gazebo, which would both be available for events, says Striegel.

Phase one of the park's construction, with a cost of $4 million, would involve total infrastructure installation. The following construction phases are expected to each cost approximately $500,000.

For many years, members of the organization have had a vision for a rose garden in Broken Arrow, Striegel says.

KBAB is currently at the beginning stages of fundraising, with the design work recently completed by R.L. Shears Company, P.C., the landscape architecture firm chosen for the project.

Trash Bash will take place at the Central Park Community Center, 1800 S. Main St., 8-9:30 a.m. on Saturday, April 30 with free coffee and snacks, trash bags, gloves and safety aprons. Keep Broken Arrow Beautiful volunteers will be on hand to help volunteers select their mile, trail or park to clean up.

Coming May 21 is the all-day Rose Festival, which will be held one block east of Main Street in conjunction with the Rose District Farmers Market. The festival is free and open to the public. The festival will also offer the opportunity for patrons to win ribbons and cash prizes in its rose art/photography contest. Individuals can also enter a rose from their garden for judging on the morning of the festival. Entry is free and cash prizes will be awarded. There will be live music and kids' activities along with various vendor booths.

KBAB's ongoing programs include Adopt A Mile, Adopt A Corner, Neighborhood Beautification, B.A. Helping Hand, Paint The Town Red and Beauty Patrol.

KUDOS OF THE MONTH: Dress For Success

Dress for Success had its start in 1997 and is currently in nearly 150 cities in 20 countries. The nonprofit organization opened its Tulsa affiliate in 2001, with 2016 marking its 15-year anniversary.

DRESS FOR SUCCESS
TULSA

Dress for Success Tulsa's motto for its 15-year anniversary is "I am you: Empowered," because "we are all women, we've all been through stages in our lives, and we all need each other," says Ronda Adkisson, executive director of Dress for Success Tulsa.

Dress for Success Tulsa provides career services to women who are in search of employment, including employment education, tools, resources, support and professional attire.

Women are referred to Dress for Success Tulsa by more than 140 nonprofit organizations, agencies, shelters, colleges, and technical institutes and are not charged for the services provided.

At the end of February, Dress for Success Tulsa moved into a 5,000-square-foot location, at 3103 S. Harvard Ave., from its previous location at 11th Street and Peoria Avenue.

Construction of the facility was donated by Simmons Homes and its subcontractor crews. On April 7, Dress for Success Tulsa will hold its grand-opening event with a ribbon-cutting ceremony at 9:30 a.m. The store will be open 11 a.m.-6 p.m. for public tours.

a wreck saved my life.

While on his way to meet friends, Eric's vehicle was hit by a semi-truck. The impact threw him onto the floorboard. Although he did not have any visible wounds, he was transported by ambulance to The Emergency Center at Hillcrest. They discovered he had multiple internal injuries caused by the wreck and a pre-existing 100% blockage in his heart. Fortunately, cardiologists from Oklahoma Heart Institute were just steps away and quickly performed a heart procedure, saving his life.

Civic Leaders Continue Campaign In Final Weeks Before Vision Vote

By MIKE NEAL
President and CEO
Tulsa Regional Chamber

On April 5, Tulsans have an opportunity to do great things for our community by voting to renew Vision 2025 funds. The Vision Tulsa package is a balanced plan that addresses our public safety and streets needs while also investing in job opportunities-without raising taxes.

Public Safety

This portion of the Vision plan will add 160 police officers and 65 firefighters.

It will improve response times for police, and new street crime units will focus on serial crimes like burglary and robbery. A portion of the Vision tax will be made permanent for an ongoing investment in our public safety needs.

Streets And Transportation

Streets, traffic and public transportation efforts will improve throughout the city. Because our need for well-maintained streets is ongoing, a portion of the tax will be made permanent, again without raising taxes.

Economic Development

We'll get funding for our city's school districts for teacher recruitment and student safety as well as new facilities and programs for higher education. Another project would bring an F-35 jet fighter simulator training center to the Air National Guard. Numerous other projects would add jobs and enhance quality of life in Tulsa.

River Development

This project will result in two river lakes – an improved Zink Lake at its existing location and a new lake in South Tulsa/Jenks. It's projected to add $122 million to the local economy and 1,850 new jobs.

The plan is a strategic balance between preserving our parks and trails and creating zones for strategic economic development. The river development will further enhance the Gathering Place and allow our river to be something Tulsa can really be proud of.

Tulsa cannot sit back and let other cities pass us by with their own economic development efforts. Vote YES for Vision Tulsa on April 5th!

HIGHLIGHTING PUBLIC SAFETY: Area civic leaders addressed the importance of the overall Vision Tulsa package highlighting its public safety components on March 22. The event was held near the Tulsa Police Department Riverside Division at 75th Street and Riverside Drive. From left are Dewey Bartlett, Tulsa Mayor; Clay Ballenger, Tulsa Fraternal Order of Police president; Karen Gilbert, Tulsa City Councilor District 5; Chad Miller, Tulsa International Association of Fire Fighters president; Anna America, Tulsa City Councilor District 7; and Karen Keith, Tulsa County Commissioner.

SHARON CAMERON for GTR Newspapers

JENKS SUPPORT: The Jenks Chamber of Commerce's March luncheon featured a discussion of the upcoming Vision for Jenks vote. The luncheon was held March 16 at the Hive, 115 S. First St. in Jenks. Jenks Mayor Kelly Dunkerley, right, presented information about the projects slated for the April 5 ballot, and attendees asked questions about the proposal. With the mayor are Jenks Chamber President Josh Driskell and Tulsa County Commissioner Karen Keith.

Daniel Regan Talks ‘Street Cred: 66,’ Activism

Tulsa’s Young Professionals’ 2016 Board Chair Focuses on Community

By EMILY RAMSEY
Managing Editor

Editor’s Note: Daniel Regan is one of Greater Tulsa Reporter’s “10 People to Watch in 2016,” as announced in its January 2016 issue. GTR was the first news group in greater Tulsa to introduce “10 People to Watch,” which launched in January 2009.

Throughout the year, GTR will publish a series of articles featuring each of its “10 People to Watch,” with next month’s article to feature Tulsa City Councilor G.T. Bynum.

Daniel Regan’s interest in affecting change takes many forms, whether discussing his current role as Tulsa’s Young Professionals’ 2016 board chair, his political activism, his seat on local boards of directors or his role as vice president of downtown Tulsa’s largest commercial property management company.

As this year’s TYPros chair, Regan, who joined TYPros in its infancy in 2005, is especially focused on its upcoming Street Cred event, Street Cred: 66, to be held April 30.

Street Cred is TYPros’ annual community redevelopment initiative, with past events taking place in the Pearl District, downtown Tulsa, 61st Street and Peoria Avenue, and along Southwest Boulevard.

This year, the event will focus on Route 66, which follows mostly along 11th Street through Tulsa, and will shine a light on Route 66 and the need for multi-modal options, says Regan.

Route 66 is the original transit corridor, and we want to promote its use by capitalizing on its current usage as well as using the road in new ways, Regan says.

These “new ways” refer to additional forms of transportation, namely, transit and bicycles.

Street Cred will highlight two of Tulsa’s transportation plans that are awaiting implementation: the east-west Bus Rapid Transit (BRT) line, which will receive funding if the economic development portion of the Vision Tulsa sales tax renewal package is approved on April 5, and the GO Plan, Tulsa’s regional bicycle-pedestrian master plan. (See full article about the GO Plan on page 13.)

“We have these two plans already created,” he says. “This will show the potential of these plans, that we could adopt these plans now.”

TYPros will work with the City of Tulsa to close the two outermost lanes of 11th Street between Delaware and Peoria avenues for the week leading up to Street Cred in order “to show long term what it would look like with transit and bike lanes.”

TYPros is also encouraging people to use that road to bike to work during that week.

Street Cred will have a number of activities going on that day to engage the neighborhoods, businesses and organizations that are located in that area.

Regan’s other focus as TYPros chair lies in an interest of his that first began when he worked on his uncle’s campaign for lieutenant governor in 2006. That started Regan’s interest in politics as he saw the ability that every individual has to make an impact.

“I learned from that experience that when you participate and show an interest, you can affect change in a positive way,” he says.

Regan went on to serve as finance director for Dan Boren’s campaign for U.S. Congress from 2009-2011 and as finance director and deputy political director for Kathy Taylor’s campaign for Tulsa mayor in 2013.

Therefore, Regan, who has previously served as head of TYPros’ government relations crew, wishes to use his time as chair to encourage greater engagement of young voters under age 40.

“Unfortunately, a large part of my generation thinks that they can’t have an impact, and they are disillusioned,” says Regan.

By working with universities, area chambers of commerce and nonprofit organizations, however, Regan hopes to have a greater strategic impact on those who have, in the past, sat on the sidelines. Plus, there’s an additional benefit to engaging younger voters, he adds.

“When we engage the younger age group, it has a ripple effect on older voters, like their family members.”

Regan currently serves on the boards of Foundation for Tulsa Schools, Downtown Coordinating

Courtesy TYPros

MAKING A DIFFERENCE: TYPros’ 2016 Chair Daniel Regan is a fourth generation Tulsan with a passion for downtown Tulsa and community activism. Regan’s efforts this year as chair revolve around Street Cred: 66, to be held April 30, and its endorsement of multi-modal transportation, and engaging young voters.

Council, VisitTulsa, Impact Tulsa and others. He is also a founding member and co-chair of the Great Raft Race, a past Tulsa event that was re-launched in summer 2015.

He became vice president of Kanbar Properties in 2014, his position allowing him to play a role in developing downtown Tulsa, another subject close to his heart, he notes.

Regan is a fourth generation

Tulsan with a passion for cities’ urban cores. “I’ve always had a fascination with downtowns, so to be able to have some impact on downtown Tulsa is wonderful.”

And the timing, he admits, couldn’t be much better.

“I get to help shape the look and landscape of downtown Tulsa and at a time when the energy and vibrance of downtown Tulsa is coming back to life.”

Honoring Our Vietnam Veterans and Their Families

COMMENTARY

By DEWEY F. BARTLETT, JR.
Mayor of Tulsa

In Washington, D.C., there are numerous memorials, museums and monuments to American history. Most of these locations are grand examples of Classical and Neoclassical architecture, featuring high ceilings, tall columns and marble statues. However, there's a different kind of memorial in our nation's capital.

Just to the north of the Lincoln Memorial stands the Vietnam Veterans Memorial. It is a symbol of recognition to the men and women who served and sacrificed their lives in the Vietnam War. It is simple in design but has a powerful impact: two black granite walls, engraved in chronological order with the names of the men and women who gave their lives in service to the United States.

The Vietnam War shaped an entire generation of Americans and continues to influence our national policies today. One of the lessons of the Vietnam War is the need to recognize and honor our veterans. At the time these veterans came home, they were not properly thanked or honored.

Those who serve should be recognized and appreciated for their service, and as a grateful nation we have an obligation to do so.

Last month, I was honored to attend a special recognition ceremony for Vietnam veterans at our local VFW. As your Mayor, I am inspired by the heroes who fought for our freedom and humbled by those missing in action, held prisoner of war, and the wounded who still carry the scars of war, both seen and unseen.

This past February, I was also honored to attend the dedication ceremony for a POW/MIA Chair of Honor at the BOK Center. The POW/MIA Chair of Honor Program reminds us of those still missing or captured. The chair is to remain perpetually empty to help people remember that even though our soldiers are not here, there is still a space for them. This is the second Chair of Honor in Tulsa. The first Chair of Honor is located at ONEOK Field. So the next time you attend a baseball game there, or an event at the BOK Center, please take a moment to remember those missing or held captive.

As a city, I hope you'll join me in honoring those who answered the call to service in Vietnam as well as their families who carried on here at home. To quote President Calvin Coolidge, "The nation which forgets its defenders will itself be forgotten."

CHAIR OF HONOR: Jeff Nickler, general manager of the BOK Center, left, and Mayor Bartlett unveil the POW/MIA Chair of Honor to serve as a reminder of those still missing or captured. The dedication ceremony was held at the BOK Center in February.

AWC Announces 2016 Newsmakers Honorees

The Association for Women in Communications has announced its 2016 Newsmakers honorees: Jill Donovan, Leigh Goodson and Katie L. Plohocky. Each year, AWC selects a group of outstanding Oklahoma women who have made positive headlines while advancing opportunities for women and improving their local communities and the state.

Becky Dixon is this year's recipient of the AWC Saidie Lifetime Achievement Award, presented in memory of Oklahoma television pioneer Saidie Adwon. The accolade celebrates an accomplished professional in the journalism and communications field.

AWC members will recognize the women at a luncheon on May 4 at 11:30 a.m. at Hyatt Regency Tulsa, 100 E. 2nd St. Tickets are $55/members and $65/non-members. To purchase tickets, please visit www.awctulsa.org. For sponsorship information, contact Ivy Griffey at ivy_griffey@hsc.net.

Newsmakers:

Jill Donovan, motivational speaker and founder of Rustic Cuff

Jill Donovan, a former law professor at The University of Tulsa, used her obsession with cuff bracelets to teach herself leather-making and metal design in her guest bedroom late at night.

Within three years, Donovan went from being an adjunct law professor to a nationally known jewelry designer, turning her part-time hobby into a full-time business. Today, Rustic Cuff jewelry is sold in more than 175 stores across the country as well as select Dillard's locations and Nordstrom.com. The brand has been featured on many national TV shows including Good Morning America, The Today Show, E! News and The View.

KATIE PLOHOCKY

In the past year, Donovan has opened her second Rustic Cuff retail store and launched another highly successful line, Kate Forty-eight, which features semi-precious and custom necklaces.

Leigh Goodson, president and CEO of Tulsa Community College

As a top official at Tulsa Community College since July 2014, Goodson has facilitated the school's participation in the national education initiative Pathways Project. The program focuses on raising college graduation rates by building better bridges for students from high school graduation to college completion.

Goodson has led the development of TCC's 2016-2020 Strategic Plan, which was written and approved after a collaborative process involving faculty and staff. She also created new leadership positions through internal reallocation at TCC to address critical, underdeveloped college

Musical Theatre and More Up Next at the PAC

A recent audience survey that polled 82,000 Tulsa Performing Arts Center customers confirmed that the most popular form of entertainment at the Center is musical theatre. The usual suspects – “The Phantom of the Opera,” “The Lion King” and “Wicked” – drew the most praise. Audience members also let us know that they enjoyed “The Book of Mormon” and are longing to see the runaway hit “Hamilton.”

Show Buzz

By NANCY HERMANN

Our musical theatre fans will be delighted with April's roster of shows, beginning with Rodgers and Hammerstein's “Cinderella.” This lovely production, with a most memorable score, plays at the PAC through April 3, presented by Celebrity Attractions. Coincidentally, music and film buffs can settle in for a Rodgers and Hammerstein sampler Apr. 9 when Tulsa Symphony presents a Pops evening devoted to this eminent writing team's music for the movies.

More musical theatre is planned Apr. 15-30 when Theatre Tulsa stages “Fiddler on the Roof.” Mark Frie, who was superb in the lead role for Theatre Tulsa's “Les Misérables,” stars as Tevye. I don't recall ever seeing a local theatre production of “Fiddler.” I know for sure that I have not seen “Billy Elliot, The Musical” in Tulsa. Presented by Tulsa Project Theatre, Apr. 29-May 7, this is the story of a young boy who abandons boxing for ballet. His true passion is dance, which doesn't make sense to many in the English mining town where he lives.

Not all stage events in April are musicals. “Steel Magnolias,” a tender story with touches of humor, is familiar to most of us because of the hit film. Set in Truvy's Beauty salon in the late 1980s, this is a Robert Haring play about love and friendship among six women. Playhouse Tulsa presents, Apr. 1-10.

Enchantment Theatre of Philadelphia's “Peter Rabbit Tales,” hosted Apr. 8 by the PAC Trust, is perfect for younger family members, but not “Why Torture is Wrong, and the People Who Love Them,” presented by Theatre

Pops, Apr. 21-24. Any Christopher Durang play is challenging material and totally suited for adults. This black comedy centers on “homeland insecurity,” with a cast of dubious characters and issues we can laugh at and then think about in-depth later.

Earlier in the month, Apr. 6, Gen. Keith Alexander, a retired four-star Army general, who was Commander of the U.S. Cyber Command, will give a talk for OSU Tulsa Business Forum. And, historian and author Doris Kearns Goodwin speaks at the PAC, Apr. 22, for Tulsa Town Hall. Both events are sold by season subscription.

This mega month of entertainment includes the Jerusalem Quartet, Apr. 3, presented by Chamber Music Tulsa, playing Beethoven, Bartók and Schumann. Pianist Barron Ryan performs for Brown Bag It, Apr. 6, and Jessica Lang Dance is hosted by Choregus Productions, Apr. 12. Lang's work is beautifully crafted to incorporate a range of inspirations that find artful expression through dance.

Trekkies and those who enjoy orchestral music will want to check out “Star Trek: The Ultimate Voyage,” Apr. 23. All the music from the many Star Trek films and TV shows, with film footage beamed in high definition to a 40-foot-wide screen, are part of this evening of entertainment presented by 35 Concerts. As Mr. Spock would say, “fascinating.”

Judy Collins, a folk and pop music singer whose work defined an era, performs in Chapman Music Hall, Apr. 24. I had a chance to interview the woman who inspired Stephen Stills to write “Suite: Judy Blue Eyes.” Now in her seventies, she stays active and in demand – selling out theatre gigs and working on a new Sondheim PBS Special. Reviews say her voice is as crystal clear as ever. The Woody Guthrie Center hosts her for a concert that will include “Both Sides Now,” “Send in the Clowns,” “Amazing Grace,” and many more of her hits.

The PAC has an astute “frequent-flyer” audience that is in touch with what is playing in theaters across the country. We were very interested in what they had to say in a recent survey, and we also want to gather information from other sources. We'd like to hear from people who just occasionally come to events at the PAC, or maybe who have never been. If there are programs, performers, musicals or other types of entertainment that are on your bucket list, I hope you will contact me and share. We want our PAC to reflect the tastes and interests of our community, and we invite you to help.

Nancy Hermann is Director of Marketing at the Tulsa Performing Arts Center.

FIDDLER ON THE ROOF: Threatened by Russia's political climate in 1905, a father, played by Mark Frie, tries to protect his family and stay true to tradition. Presented by Theatre Tulsa, Apr. 15-30.

STAR TREK, THE ULTIMATE VOYAGE: A multi-media concert celebrating the 50th anniversary of Star Trek includes a 40-foot-wide HD screen and a live orchestra, Apr. 23.

JESSICA LANG DANCE: This company's performances have been named among the best dance events of the year in Chicago, Boston and Dallas. The troupe is hosted by Choregus Productions Apr. 12.

RODGERS AND HAMMERSTEIN AT THE MOVIES: Movie music of Rodgers and Hammerstein accompanied by film clips concludes Tulsa Symphony's inaugural Pops Series, Apr. 9.

BTW Class of 1966 to Honor Ten Outstanding Women

Chuck Cissel, president of the Booker T. Washington High School Class of 1966, has announced that the annual Black Women Rock Tea Fundraiser will be held at the Greenwood Cultural Center on Sunday, May 1 from 4 to 6 p.m. The tea will honor 10 accomplished women, graduates from the 1966 class and several women who have been community leaders for years.

Olympic Gold Medal winner and ordained minister, Madeline Manning-Mims, will receive the SHERO Award for her outstanding work as an Olympic Chaplain and as a gold medal winner. Many will know that she was awarded her 1968 gold medal in the 800 meters track race. In addition, Mims recently earned her doctorate from Oral Roberts University in religion and theology.

Cissel commented when speaking with Dr. Mims, "Since you now have your doctorate, should we now refer to you as Dr. Mims?" and she said politely, although it is new, "I suppose that will be the case."

Others to be honored are

Frances Jordan-Rakestraw, executive director of the Greenwood Cultural Center; and Jo Bright, former director of the Salvation Army Boys and Girls Club of Metro Tulsa. Birdie Clifton, a retired licensed nurse, will receive the Pioneer Award for her many years of service as a nurse and director of the Carver Senior Center. Sandra McClelland and DeArnetta Ward, both from the BTW Class of 1964, will be honored for their work, respectively, in breast cancer and the lives of our youth in North Tulsa.

Four Ph.D.'s from the Class of 1966, Dr. Sandra Rouce, Dr. Mildred West, Dr. Patricia Bell and Dr. Gloria Strassner-Faine will also be honored. All female guests are encouraged to wear hats, pearls and gloves.

According to Carole Andrews, the chair for the event, "In addition to the special guests receiving their awards, there will be musical entertainment by the legendary music icon, Ms. Ernestine Dillard and other musical guests, sumptuous bakery goods, and delicious teas and coffees. The event is to inspire young women and men in the community to take action, work towards higher educational opportunities and pursue successful careers."

The BTW Class is celebrating its 50th class reunion in July and this event is part of the programming for the year. Cissel says, "We have a Golden Oldies but Goodies Night on Friday, July 29 at the Tulsa Assembly Center and on Saturday, July 30 the Orange and Black Ball in the Hyatt Regency Hotel Ballroom. More details to come."

Admission at the door is just $10 for the tea and all of Tulsa is invited.

Tulsa Town Hall Presents Presidential Historian & Author Doris Kearns Goodwin

The Tulsa Town Hall 81st season concludes with renowned presidential historian and author Doris Kearns Goodwin on Friday, April 22. Author of six critically acclaimed New York Times bestselling books, she received a Pulitzer Prize in history for No Ordinary Time: Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt.

Other bestsellers are The Bully Pulpit: Theodore Roosevelt, Howard Taft, and The Golden Age of Journalism; Team of Rivals: The Political Genius of Abraham Lincoln; The Fitzgeralds and the Kennedys: An American Saga; and Lyndon Johnson and the American Dream. Wait Till Next Year is Doris Kearns Goodwin's touching memoir of growing up in love with her family and baseball.

Goodwin is also known for her historical insight as a news commentator on NBC, CBS, FOX and CNN. With elections in 2016, her topic is timely with "Leadership Lessons from the White House: Doris Kearns Goodwin on the American Presidents."

Her appearance in Tulsa is made possible by a generous gift from The Helmerich Trust.

Tulsa Town Hall's 2015-16 Speaker Series is sold out. The 2016-17 Speaker Series will be announced in April.

TULSA BALLET STAYS BUSY

HARDESTY CENTER: The Tulsa Ballet's Hardesty Center for Dance Education is getting closer to completion in Broken Arrow. The development of the facility is part of a $25 million Integrated Campaign for Tulsa Ballet, the largest fundraising initiative in the history of the company. Construction began in July 2015, and the building is expected to open in August. Upcoming Tulsa Ballet performances include the Emerging Choreographers Showcase, April 22, 24; and the Signature Series, May 6-8, 13-15.

Tulsa Ballet will present a series of performances throughout Italy in the spring, which will be the fourth international tour for Tulsa Ballet. The Italian tour will begin on March 30, in the northern city of Trieste and then continue with performances in Udine, Mestre, Vicenza, Gorizia and Perugia, concluding April 8 in Brindisi.

Tulsa Ballet will perform three pieces, created by three of the top choreographers in the world today, to showcase the versatility of the company and appeal to diverse audiences. The program will include: "Classical Symphony" by Yuri Possokhov, "Petite Mort" by Jiri Kylian and "Rooster" by Christopher Bruce.

The Rooftop Offers Casual, Outdoor Dining

LOCAL DINING

By BLAKE AUSTYN
Contributing Writer

The Rooftop, 214 S. Main St., opened in Broken Arrow's Rose District in 2014 as the second restaurant for Jason Scarpa on Main Street. He first opened Main Street Tavern, 200 S. Main St., in 2011 and took ownership of In the Raw Broken Arrow, 216 S. Main St., in 2015. Scarpa plans to open a Main Street Tavern location in Claremore in the early part of this year.

The Rooftop sits on the second floor, above In the Raw, and features semi-outdoor covered and open-air seating as well as an indoor area with a bar and seating. The restaurant has a contemporary, modern feel but with a value-priced menu with no dish costing more than $12. The menu consists of appetizers, pizzas, sandwiches, salads, and a few pasta dishes and desserts.

I visited The Rooftop recently with my mother. Our waitress was Summer, a new waitress who was energetic, informative and very pleasant.

We started with appetizers. We were in the mood for bruschetta but couldn't decide one which of the two options to choose, so we ordered both.

The Traditional Bruschetta comes with the traditional crusted bread topped with tomato, pesto, mozzarella and parmesan—very fresh and light.

The Modern Bruschetta comes topped with whiskey and balsamic soaked raisins, gorgonzola, Italian sausage, and capers. Our waitress told us that it is "a very unique dish, and the gorgonzola flavor is strong."

She was right. Fortunately, we love gorgonzola. It's a very unique dish; I would return to the restaurant just for that.

For our entrees, we shared the Smoky 'Shroom Pizza and the Turkey and Mozzarella Sandwich.

The Rooftop's pizza offerings are all unique. However, I would argue that the Smoky 'Shroom is one of the more traditional, basic-flavored pizzas on the menu. No one particular flavor stood out, but it was still enjoyable and had an easy flavor that paired well with beer.

The Turkey and Mozzarella Sandwich came with sun-dried tomato aioli, turkey, mozzarella, olives, bacon and lettuce on ciabatta bread. Unfortunately, the turkey was sliced deli meat. I would have preferred real turkey. I appreciated the sandwich's side of cold pasta salad, with tomatoes, basil pesto and capers. It was a very fresh addition to the sandwich.

Mom and I decided to share a dessert: the Cheesecake, which Summer told us was New York style. It was very creamy and very representative of a New York style cheesecake. The dessert can also come topped with chocolate sauce, and, upon request, Summer brought it to us on the side.

The Rooftop offers various events, such as Trivia Night, throughout the week. Restaurant hours are Monday-Sunday 11 a.m. – 2 a.m..

As we move into the warmer months, Scarpa plans to offer evenings where customers can watch movies and live concerts on the 144-inch HD TV screen that sits on the outdoor patio.

Plans are currently in the process to install an elevator in order to provide access for those unable to walk stairs.

Outdoor Spring Cleaning and Earth Day Celebrations

TRASH TALK

By BETH TURNER
Tulsa Master Recyclers Association

Early spring, just as the weather starts to warm before the bugs and the leaves burst onto the scene, is a great time to clean up nature.

Pickin' Up Trash

More than 120 Turkey Mountain enthusiasts came to a February cleanup hosted by Tulsa Urban Wilderness Coalition. According to TUWC Media Liaison Laurie Biby, volunteers picked up trash, shored up trails, seeded grass and more.

Biby says TUWC formed from people against development of the mountain after a strip mall was proposed for the land at 61st Street and Highway 75.

Following the public outcry last year, The George Kaiser Family Foundation purchased 200 nearby acres of the area with the goal of keeping it pristine.

However, this March, The GKFF announced their purchase of 60 more acres, including the land of the proposed strip mall.

Thank you, GKFF

Please allow me this opportunity to thank The George Kaiser Family Foundation for their continuous vision for Tulsa County. Ever grateful and amazed at your generosity and thoughtful investments into enriching our community's future, thank you.

Keep an eye on TUWC online for more clean-up days and trail information.

Nearby Nature Pick-Up

Another annual outdoor cleanup saw record numbers of volunteers. Several Tulsans joined more than 200 people at Turner Bend River Outfitters along the Mulberry River in Ozark, Arkansas. Two trailers of trash, another of metal and a celebration party that ended with only one kitchen-sized bag of waste.

A few crazy items found along the river and highways include a dozen tires, a car, thousands of beer cans, two terrariums and a pregnancy test. (It was negative).

I can't tell you how satisfying it is to pick up trash amidst nature's beauty. Byrd's Adventure Center will host a fall cleanup of the area Sept. 10.

Happy Birthday, Earth!

Each April 22, we commemorate this great planet we all call home. Earth Day falls this year on a Friday, so if you want to toast to the Earth, head to a local brew pub like Prairie Artisan Ale or Marshall's for a beer with a smaller carbon footprint.

For a more family-friendly flare, Tulsa Zoo will host Party for the Planet on Monday, April 18. Bring an old cell phone to recycle for a discount at the door.

TCC Northeast will host EcoFest Conference and Festival March 28. If free food, live music and eco-learning doesn't entice, just go for the scenery. That campus is beautiful.

The M.E.T. hosts Enviro Expo Saturday, April 21 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. The event will be downtown Tulsa on Main Street.

If getting out of the house is difficult, log on for an eco-lesson from our future leaders. Peters Elementary Green Team wrote and performed a play following lessons learned from school partner Oklahoma Green Schools. You'll find the link on youtube.com/Union Public Schools.

Quick Eco-Tip

Here's an easy tip for Earth Day: Choose dark colored screen savers, and use Blackle.com as your search engine online. Blackle is Google's eco-friendly cousin. Same search engine, it just uses a black background with white lettering. The lighter the picture on your screen, the more energy it takes to display it. Plus, the darker colors are easier on your eyes.

Stay Engaged

Send in your eco celebration photo or your best eco-tip in honor of Earth Day, so that we can commemorate together. Tweet about it @TrashTalkTulsa or email bethturner@me.com.

Honey Bees: Invaluable to the Ecosystem

Donning a heavy beekeeper suit, I could not help but wonder why beekeeping tends to incite so much passion in its supporters and hobbyists.

Yet, as I continued in my research, spoke to more beekeepers and learned about not only the value of bees to the ecosystem but also the many roles that bees play in their own society, my attitude went from dismay to awe.

Most individuals who start to learn about honey bees and beekeeping usually end up getting involved, says Neil Van Dalsem, a local beekeeper who took up the hobby nine years ago after his wife bought him beekeeping classes for his birthday.

"I don't think she thought that I would end up buying bees," he continues.

But that's just what happened after he began learning about everything going on in that bee hive.

There are Worker Bees, whose lives span only six weeks, who have various tasks inside the hive such as cleaning it, taking care of bee larva, guarding the entrance of the hive from intruders. Some Worker Bees have the task of leaving the hive in search of pollen and nectar to bring back to the hive.

There are also Drones, which are male bees with the sole task of mating with the Queen Bee.

Only one Queen lives in each hive, and her sole purpose is to lay fertilized eggs.

Another example of bees' complex behaviors is referred to as their "dance language," a special dance that Worker Bees engage in when they have found a nectar source. The dance provides information as to the exact location and distance of the source and the quality of the nectar.

In addition to the complexity of bees and their processes, bees also play a major role in humans' lives.

About one third of the food that humans consume would not be available without the help of bees and their pollination. This includes many fruits and vegetables: apples, blueberries, peaches, pears, watermelon, cucumbers and squash, according to the Nature Conservancy.

In addition, honey bees produce honey, pollen, wax, and propolis, which have nutritional, craft, manufacturing, and medical applications.

Something that has been in the news lately is Colony Collapse Disorder, in which bees were found to suddenly disappear from their hive. This began to occur in 2006.

Scientists have found that every few years, they will see a large die-off of bees, with various factors to blame, such as pesticide use, farming practices and infestation of the varroa mite.

Helen Hickey, a 45-year chemist who has been keeping beehives for upwards of 16 years, believes that humans are largely to blame for bees' disappearance with the widespread use of pesticides and deforestation by corporations who don't replace what they have destroyed with the proper plants that bees need.

"Bees are teaching us lessons: that we're destroying our environment," she says. "But I'm inspired by the new generation of young ones who are more focused on sustainability and the needs of pollinators."

Van Dalsem encourages individuals, when determining which plants and flowers to add to their gardens, to consider planting ones that provide pollination for honey bees. Also, while most people aren't keen on allowing weeds to grow in their lawn, weeds such as dandelions provide pollen for bees.

In addition to awareness of bees' needs, it's important that individuals grow in their understanding of bees so as not to kill them needlessly.

For example, people may see a

large group of bees, called a swarm. A swarm forms when a group of bees, including a Queen, split from the hive in order to create a new hive. In this way, the bee colonies grow.

When a hive decides that a group of its bees will soon swarm, the bees turn one of the larvae into a Queen by feeding it a special diet.

"It's amazing when you consider that bees have these tiny brains but such a complex life cycle and biology," says Van Dalsem.

Because swarms tend to occur as the weather starts to warm, he encourages individuals to be on the lookout for swarms around trees, and if they find a swarm, instead of spraying it and killing the bees, they can call a beekeeper who will retrieve the swarm at no cost. A list of area beekeepers can be found on the Northeast Oklahoma Beekeepers Association's website: neoba.org.

OSU-CHS Psychologist Honored

Richard Walter, scholar-in-residence of forensic sciences at Oklahoma State University Center for Health Sciences and world-renowned pioneer in crime scene assessment, has been selected as a recipient of the Paul W. Kehres Meritorious Service Award from the American Academy of Forensic Sciences.

The prestigious award is intended to honor exceptional service and leadership within the academy. The multi-disciplinary professional organization works to advance the application of science in the legal system and encourage collaboration in the forensic sciences. The award was presented during the group's 68th annual scientific meeting in February in Las Vegas.

Roughnecks, Hillcrest Create Partnership for 2016 Season

The Tulsa Roughnecks and Hillcrest HealthCare System recently announced that they will continue their partnership for a second season. Hillcrest HealthCare System will remain as the official medical provider of the Roughnecks team as well as the presenting sponsor of the team's 2016 season.

With the agreement, Hillcrest will continue to provide day-to-day care and medical and training treatment to all of the Roughnecks players.

"We are excited to have the opportunity to provide high-quality care to the Tulsa Roughnecks for the second consecutive year," says Kevin Gross, Hillcrest HealthCare System president and chief executive officer. "Whether we are providing medical care on the field or encouraging fans to make their health a priority, this partnership allows Hillcrest to continue to fulfill our mission of creating a healthier community."

Dr. Jon Orjala, DO, an orthopedic surgeon with Hillcrest's Utica Park Clinic, will serve as the Roughnecks' official team doctor.

Hillcrest HealthCare System is a comprehensive health system with approximately 5,000 employees that serves the communities of eastern Oklahoma.

The Roughnecks opened USL regular season play on March 26 when they hosted Rio Grande Valley (Houston Dynamo 2) at ONEOK Field.

Senior Resource Website Launches

In an effort to empower older adults and their families with valuable information on aging well in a rapidly-growing seniors housing industry, the American Seniors Housing Association (ASHA) recently launched a new website. Devoted to the complex components of today's senior living options, www.wherelivematters.org is part of ASHA's five-year strategic plan designed to provide seniors, adult children and others with meaningful seniors housing information.

Alongside other senior living experts from across the country, Letitia Jackson, with Senior Star, served on the 11-person committee which developed and launched the website. As an industry leader, Senior Star endorses "Where You Live Matters" content and encourages all senior living consumers and/or providers to use this powerful educational tool.

"Where You Live Matters" provides a one-stop resource location for a consultative approach and valuable resource for those searching for expert advice. Among the helpful tools is a 16-page glossary of senior living terminology, as well as numerous videos, testimonials and editorials from seniors and industry experts. The site also includes informational categories such as comparing lifestyle options, learning about retirement community living, making family decisions, and preparing and managing finances.

GO Plan Looks to Increase Transportation Options

By EMILY RAMSEY
Managing Editor

It is no secret that Tulsa has a robust cycling community. The consistent growth of Tulsa Tough alone has proven that.

However, Tulsa's group of what is termed "confident cyclists," who are willing to cycle on main roads, makes up not even 10 percent of the local community, says James Wagner, principal transportation planner for INCOG (Indian Nations Council of Governments).

"Research shows that two thirds of community members are interested in but concerned about the idea (of traveling on bicycles on main roads), which tells us that our infrastructure keeps them from feeling that they can ride safely on streets."

So, Tulsa's potential to increase its number of cyclists is there.

"It's not that they don't have a bike or that they don't want to use their bike. We feel this is an untapped market," Wagner continues.

Thus, the GO Plan, a bicycle and pedestrian regional master plan, was created. Participating in the plan's creation were representatives from Tulsa and 10 surrounding cities, including Jenks, Bixby, Owasso, Broken Arrow, Coweta, Sand Springs, and Glenpool.

The plan took just under two years to complete; it was finalized in December 2015.

The focus of the GO Plan revolves largely around creating bike-safe lanes on main roads that help cyclists to connect to the area's existing regional trail network, which runs throughout Tulsa and beyond to surrounding cities, and on additional main roads that allow individuals to turn their cycling into a daily function, for example commuting to and from work or school, Wagner says.

Now that the plan is completed, the next step is adoption by each of the 11 cities.

In the meantime, a portion of the GO Plan is expected to soon show up around downtown Tulsa in the form of Bike Share.

Phase one of Bike Share is expected to come into effect in 2017, says Jennifer Haddaway, transportation resource center coordinator with INCOG. This will involve installing 12 bicycle stations, for a total of 108 bikes, throughout downtown, within the IDL.

"The idea for the Bike Share program is that it be used for short trips of about 30 minutes," she continues. Haddaway gives the examples of an out-of-town visitor using a bike to get around downtown or a business person needing to quickly travel from south downtown to the Brady Arts District.

Various usage options will be available including a yearly membership and a 24-hour access pass.

Funding for Bike Share is being provided partly by a three-year CMAQ (Congestion Mitigation and Air Quality) grant, the George Kaiser Family Foundation and the City of Tulsa.

Currently, the program is still in need of private funding assistance.

Phase two of the program would launch three years after the creation of phase one and would add 12 additional bicycle stations to areas outside of the IDL, such as Brookside, Cherry Street, the Gathering Place and Kendall-Whittier.

An additional portion of the GO Plan coming soon will be to address two different options for bike lanes, either on 3rd Street from the

Dr. Rhett Harwell, D.C., Clinic Director

Ask The Doctor

Your health questions answered by Dr. Rhett Harwell, D.C.

You Don't Have To Just Live With Back Pain

Q: Dr. Harwell, for several years now I have been dealing with back pain. Early on, an MRI revealed some spinal stenosis and arthritis issues. I've tried Ibuprofen, acupuncture and an epidural injection with no long-term positive results. An orthopedic specialist recommends surgery but I've just heard too many stories of failed surgeries. I feel I'm running out of options. What do you recommend?

- Edward S.

A: The human back is such a complex collection of delicate bones, muscles and nerves. It's amazing to consider but also just about the number one source of chronic back and neck pain for the majority of Americans. Having back pain, muscle spasms and shooting leg pain can bring your life to a standstill.

Don't let pain keep you from enjoying time with grandchildren, participating in an active lifestyle or even climbing the stairs without pain.

Pain is your body's warning sign telling you something is wrong. Sure, you can numb the pain if you take enough pain pills, but, if you just mask the pain, it can prevent healing and maybe even damage your back further.

Renuva Back & Pain Centers could be the solution to your pain. They offer FDA-approved non-surgical, drug-free pain relief treatments. Their unique CoreCare™ treatment protocol combines proven therapies, such as Digital Decompression and Class IV Laser Therapy, commonly used by professional athletes and trainers.

Before the FDA would clear Laser Therapy for human use, they wanted to see proof that it worked.

This led to two landmark studies: The first study showed that patients who had the Laser Therapy had 53% higher rate of improvement over those who had a placebo. The second showed patients who used Laser Therapy had less pain and more range of motion within just days of treatment.

Likewise, Decompression Therapy has numerous studies that support its effectiveness:

The Journal Of Neuroscience Research concluded "Decompression Therapy should be considered first, before surgical procedures."

The Orthopedic Technology Review found that "86% of the 219 patients who completed Decompression Therapy reported immediate resolution of symptoms."

If you call Renuva Back & Pain Centers at 918-615-9811 by April 29th, they are offering a special price of $59 for their Pain Evaluation. What does this include?

♦ An in-depth consultation about your pain where the staff will listen to your case.

♦ A complete neuromuscular examination.

♦ A set of digital x-rays (if needed) to determine if a spinal problem is contributing to your pain.

♦ A thorough analysis of your exam findings so they can map out a plan for you to be pain free.

♦ Plus two treatments so you can experience this amazing therapy and see if it could be your pain solution.

Call 918-615-9811 by April 29th and get everything listed for $59.

The Renuva office is at 6804 S. Canton Ave., Suite 110, located on the northeast corner of 68th and Canton Avenue, between Yale and Sheridan.

I wish you the best in dealing with your pain issues effectively.

Six Tulsa Students Attend Legacy Weekend at OSU

Eva Campbell, Bree Echevarria, Emily McCool, Griffin Miller, Aidan Randle and Zephany Randle, all of Tulsa, participated in Legacy Weekend 2016 at Oklahoma State University on Feb. 6 and 7.

Legacy Weekend, hosted by the OSU Alumni Association and the Student Alumni Board, brought 24 legacies to Stillwater. While at OSU, legacies and their families got an up-close view of the campus, attended an OSU information panel and showed their orange pride at an OSU basketball game.

"Legacy Weekend is a wonderful opportunity for legacies to experience OSU in a different setting," says Melisa Parkerson, director of student programs for the OSU Alumni Association. "It's also a great time for them to interact with current students and gain a perspective on why OSU is America's brightest orange."

Campbell is a freshman at Holland Hall, Echevarria is a junior at Cascia Hall, McCool is a junior at Bishop Kelley, Miller is a junior at Bixby High School and both Aidan and Zephany Randle attend Jenks High School.

Legacy Weekend is open to registered legacies of OSU Alumni Association members. The 2016 event hosted participants from four states. More than 40 SAB members interacted with the legacies during the fun-filled weekend on campus.

"Through this event, legacies get a better idea of what to expect at OSU," says Melanie Jackson, SAB programming executive. "It's important for legacies to stay famil-

SAB members are a select group of OSU students chosen for demonstrating excellence in scholarship and leadership on the campus. In addition to planning and presenting Legacy Weekend, SAB members serve as liaisons between OSU alumni and students.

The Alumni Association defines a legacy as a child or grandchild of an active association member. For more information about the OSU Legacy Program or about the OSU Alumni Association, visit orange-connection.org.

Owasso Student Sews the Seeds of Success

Tulsa Tech's business management/entrepreneurship program teaches students how to create powerful marketing and management plans. Students develop sales presentations and product demonstrations for a competitive marketplace and also have an opportunity to network with many of our community's local business innovators at facilities such as 36 Degrees North, Tulsa's newest basecamp for entrepreneurs.

Brenna Palmer, a junior at Owasso High School, has owned and operated her unique small business for the past six years, and the management/entrepreneurship program immediately caught her eye.

"I found out about Tulsa Tech at my high school, and noticed the business management and entrepreneurship class right away," Palmer says. "Since I already had my own business, I thought this would be the perfect fit."

"I started my business, Brenna's Corn Bags, in 2010," she says. "Although I had always managed it by myself, I really felt like this class would help me improve some of the things I already knew and teach me some great new ideas about operating my own business."

For the past six years, Palmer's small business has produced hundreds of customized, hand-sewn therapeutic corn bags. The bags contain corn grain and, when heated or cooled, provide all-natural relief for tired, achy muscles and joints.

The bags are available in standard sizes and can be customized with various fabrics and prints. Palmer also works with customers if they have a special print design in mind.

The 16-year-old's main marketing presence has been online, at brennascornbags.com and brennascreations.com, although word of mouth has also proven to be a helpful source of sales. "In the beginning I mostly produced specialty items for individuals," Palmer says. "Then I began expanding into the wholesale market and providing orders to salons and pharmacies."

She credits the business management/entrepreneurship program and her instructor for helping to refine her existing business model. "It may sound corny," laughs Palmer. "But Mrs. Sexton is absolutely one of the best instructors I have ever had. She has helped me so much, and she is never too busy to be there for me as a person and a student."

Arlynda Sexton, Tulsa Tech's business management/entrepreneurship instructor, feels Palmer is the type of student who perfectly represents the spirit of a small business owner.

"There is no better student to have in class than one who has dreams," Sexton says. "They are striving for a goal, accomplishing that goal and sharing that spirit within the class. Brenna is certainly that young lady."

Palmer is very thankful for both of her parents, not only for the sewing machine she received for Christmas in sixth grade but also for the guidance and encouragement that they provide.

"My mom and dad have been the biggest influence in my life," Palmer says. "They encouraged me to start my own business and told me this could help accomplish my goals. So I guess this is where they get to say, 'we told you so.'"

Additionally, the Owasso community will always remember Brenna Palmer's older sister, Haley Palmer, and the impact she had on so many lives. Haley died in 2008 at 12 years old from cystic fibrosis but, during her life, raised thousands of dollars for cystic fibrosis research.

"My sister will always be an inspiration to me," Palmer says. "I'm proud that I've kind of developed my own identity, but my family and I will always be extremely grateful to our community, and to Owasso, for honoring my sister in the way they always have."

Without a doubt, Haley would be proud of her younger sister, and for all of the faculty and staff who work each day to help students make their own path, we are proud of Brenna and wish her the very best.

B.A. Teachers of the Year Spotlight

BY EMILY RAMSEY
Managing Editor

This is the Broken Arrow Express' second installment of Broken Arrow Public Schools' 2015-16 Teachers of the Year, with our spotlight this month on teachers Lindsey Haskins, Edward Hodge, Pam Willingham and Bryan Knutson.

"I got into teaching because I love to watch kids learn," says Park Lane Early Childhood Center's Teacher of the Year Lindsey Haskins.

Haskins, an Inola native, is in her fourth year of teaching, with her first year spent with Bixby Public Schools. She has spent her past three years teaching pre-K at Park Lane Early Childhood Center.

She holds a bachelor's degree in early childhood education from Northeastern State University and knew from an early age that she would be a teacher, she says. "Teaching has always been my dream job."

Among her favorite things about teaching, Haskins notes, is "the feeling you get when that child you have been working with finally understands a skill that he/she has been working on for so long."

Haskins also appreciates that as a teacher she can provide a safe place for students. "Being able to give children that secure place to learn and play gives you a great sense of accomplishment."

"I believe that all children, when given a supportive environment, can learn and grow. I also believe that it is our job . . . to teach them to love to learn."

LINDSEY HASKINS

While teaching was always his aspiration, Edward Hodge, Aspen Creek Elementary's Teacher of the Year, did not make the jump into the education profession until 20 years after graduating high school.

"I always wanted to be a teacher, yet in my earlier years, I lacked the confidence in myself to attend college and become a teacher," he says.

However, with the encouragement and support of his wife, friends and mentors, he returned to college and earned his associate degree from Tulsa Community College as well as a bachelor's degree in elementary education and his master's in school administration, both from Northeastern State University.

Hodge is a Union High School graduate who was born on Ramey

EDWARD HODGE

Air Force Base in Puerto Rico; his family moved to Tulsa when he was eight years old.

He is in his 14th year of teaching, all of those years at Broken Arrow Public Schools and the past three years at Aspen Creek Elementary, where he teaches fifth grade.

"I enjoy watching students grow and challenging them to learn when they think they cannot, love subjects they feared and achieve what others told them was unattainable," he says.

"The best part is I get to make a difference each day in the lives of my students not in just what I teach but also how they leave elementary prepared and ready to handle their secondary years."

"As a teacher it is my job to engage students and make learning fun for them," says Country Lane

PAM WILLINGHAM

Primary's Teacher of the Year Pam Willingham.

Willingham, who currently teaches second grade, endeavors to create lesson plans that will engage all of her students by allowing for differentiation in teaching methods in order "to meet all of their needs, academically and socially, and to prepare them to be ready for the future," she continues.

Willingham is from Del City, Oklahoma, and earned her education degree from the University of Central Oklahoma.

She has spent 16 years teaching at various Broken Arrow Public Schools sites, including Oak Crest Elementary, Westwood Elementary and Rhoades Elementary. She has taught third and fifth graders and English language learners. This is her third year teaching second grade.

BRYAN KNUTSON

"I have always wanted to teach for as long as I remember," Willingham says. "As a little girl, I played school instead of playing with my dolls."

At the top of her list of favorite things about her job is being with her students, having fun with them and "building long-lasting relationships with them," she says.

"Being with kids every day and teaching them academics as well as life skills is the most rewarding career that anyone could ever have!"

Fourth grade reading and language arts teacher Bryan Knutson is Country Lane Intermediate's Teacher of the Year.

Knutson grew up around education, thanks to his mother who

B.A. WRESTLERS EXPERIENCE SUCCESS

ISAIAH PAGE

ZACH MARCHESELLI

SKYLER HAYNES

By MIKE MOGUIN
GTR Sports Writer

More trophies were added to Broken Arrow's tradition-rich wrestling history as the season wrapped up at the state tournament in the last weekend in February in Oklahoma City.

The Tigers did come up 16 points short of repeating as Class 6A state champions as a team. They finished with 109.5 points, making them runner-up to Choctaw, who won with 125.5.

But three Broken Arrow wrestlers were crowned state champions in their weight divisions. First-place medals went to Isaiah Page (170 pounds), Zach Marcheselli (182) and Skyler Haynes (195).

Page edged Jenks' Drew Hinkle 7-5 to win his championship match. Marcheselli was victorious over Choctaw's Easton Rendleman 5-3, and Haynes defeated Mustang's Kaden Truelove, 6-2.

The titles were a first for each wrestler. With Page and Haynes being seniors, it marked a glorious end to their high school careers. For Marcheselli, it was a similar feeling to a freshman campaign that could be the beginning of four-year title run. But he is not taking it for granted.

"You take one match at a time and you don't look that far ahead," Marcheselli says. "You just take one match at a time, one year at a time, and if it falls that way, that would be great."

Marcheselli only had three losses in the 2015-16 season. All came to foes who finished as state champions in Class 5A. Two came to Jerome Townsell of Edison, who won the 170-pound title, another was the Bear Hughes of Coweta, who won at 182.

He learned some things in each of his losses.

"It told me not to be overconfident," Marcheselli says. "That for sure. I think that was a little bit of a problem when I went into those matches."

The losses did serve as a springboard for motivation.

"I wanted to prove that I'm just as good as they are," he says. "So, it definitely made me want to work harder, so I can be the best in Oklahoma."

What were the keys to beating

Rendleman?

"Don't get to nervous with it being a big one on the big stage," Marcheselli says. "He has a real good Fireman's carry and I was trying to be cautious of that."

While winning state was significant for the Tiger freshman, the fact that Rendleman was from Choctaw didn't seem to matter to Marcheselli, although the Yellowjackets won the team title.

"They were already so far ahead, we couldn't catch up," he says.

A constant work ethic, running real hard after practice and not taking any breaks, Marcheselli believes, were the key to his training en route to the state championship.

Marcheselli now joins a long line of athletes who have captured state championships in the sport of wrestling at Broken Arrow.

"It feels pretty good to be a part of it," Marcheselli says. "They're known for really good wrestling and I just want to be a part of that and continue that legacy."

He may take it one match at a time, but now he'll concentrate and repeating next year as a sophomore.

There are many pieces to a thriving community

This Vision Focuses on the Right Priorities

A Vision for more SAFETY, STREETS AND TRANSIT

- 160 more police officers will provide more patrols and manpower to increase safety in neighborhoods and gather intelligence to proactively prevent crime.
- 65 new firefighters will staff the busiest fire stations, and add a new fire station in east Tulsa. New personnel also will enhance the 911 center to increase emergency response.
- Permanent funding will provide for street maintenance, and increased rapid bus transit along Peoria Avenue and Route 66.

A Vision for more ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT, TEACHER RETENTION

- Economists project 1,850 jobs will be added to the economy every year as a result of the Arkansas River development.
- This plan addresses the teacher shortage by partnering with local school districts to recruit and retain quality teachers for our schools.
- An Air National Guard Training Center would bring the state-of-the-art F-35 flight simulators here, and house the fighters in Tulsa at the 138th Fighter Wing.

A Vision for more SHORELINE, WILDERNESS AND PARKLANDS

- 12 miles of new shoreline will be added, along with two new lakes connected by the Arkansas River.
- The expansion of Tulsa's Turkey Mountain will add urban wilderness.
- A plan for development will preserve the trails and parkland Tulsans have come to love, with areas for economic development that is strategic – not strip malls or unsightly projects.

Lacrosse Growing in Popularity

By GLENN HIBDON
GTR Sports Writer

Editor's note: This is the second article about the growth of lacrosse in Greater Tulsa. Last month's article featured the Bishop Kelley program.

Lacrosse is the new soccer in Tulsa. Fifty years ago, soccer began a rise in popularity in Oklahoma and across the United States. Jeff English and Tracy Isbell are hoping it's now lacrosse's turn.

"It's developing a large presence at the youth level," says English, lacrosse conference commissioner for Indian Nations Youth Sports (INYS). "We have 13 different programs and 840 male players. There are high school teams now, and for the first time this spring we have a girl's program."

English oversees boy's teams ranging in ages from kindergarten through eighth grade. There are also teams in Tulsa who play indoor summer league box lacrosse at Soccer City in Broken Arrow. Men's teams were started last fall in divisions of under 40 and over 40.

Isbell, director of girl's lacrosse for INYS, says that females will join the boys when youth play begins on March 26 at Neinhuis Park in Broken Arrow.

"Five years from now we will probably have a women's league," says Isbell. "There will be women who played in the youth leagues and in high school going to college and then coming back around. Eventually, I know we will have women's lacrosse."

Tulsa's discovery of the sport began more than 10 years ago when Dusty Booth arrived in town. Booth grew up in Wichita playing in high school and on a club team. After coming to Oklahoma, Booth coached a high school team and then was instrumental in forming the Tulsa Youth Lacrosse Association and the Bulldogs, a squad comprised of players without a team.

"Dusty Booth is the man who made it go," English says.

Today, there are high school club teams at Owasso, Jenks, Union, Cascia Hall and Bishop Kelley schools. They all play in the Heartland Conference, consisting of 16 teams in Oklahoma, Arkansas, Missouri and Kansas. English says Muskogee, Sapulpa, Bartlesville and other Green Country schools have expressed interest in organizing teams.

"We've had 17 percent growth over last year and 150 percent growth in Owasso," says English, who played lacrosse at Southwestern University in Texas and now has an eighth grade son playing.

A NEW SPORT: Members of Indian Nations Youth Sports (INYS) lacrosse teams pose for a photo with their sports gear. Lacrosse has seen large growth across the U.S. in the past 10 years, and local teams are growing.

Lacrosse features the use of sticks with netting on the end so a ball can be passed back and forth between players. Just like in hockey, the aim is to fire the ball into a net for a point. The sport originated from stick ball, played by Native Americans. Unknown to most, lacrosse is the national sport of Canada.

"We have a large Indian population here, and stick ball is similar to lacrosse," says English, explaining why he thinks the sport has gained such a foothold in Tulsa.

"It's one of the fastest growing sports in the U.S. over the last 10 years. It's a small sport, but it's gaining momentum and has had double digit growth every year."

Unlike English, Isbell says she was "sucked in" to lacrosse when her son starting playing in the sixth grade. She never played or coached, but she sees many physical and health benefits from the sport.

"You don't have to have size or a big body build. Anybody can play," she says. "It's a fun sport, and it's enjoyable to watch for spectators and fans."

English says that lacrosse is less physical than football and players need stick skills in catching and throwing. While speed is an asset, it's not always essential.

"It's a great cross-fit sport. It complements agility, foot work, athleticism and hand-eye coordination," English says.

"It's a great off season sport for football," says Isbell. "You're using different muscles, and both sports are played in different seasons."

There are those who see lacrosse as an elite prep school sport played back east and others who believe the cost of equipment is prohibitive. English says that his group has a working arrangement with Dick's Sporting Goods for discounts.

"Lacrosse is big on the east and west coasts and in the Denver area, but we're starting to see some of our kids playing college lacrosse in (NCAA) Division III," says English. "It's an alternative spring sport. In football, you have stoppages after every down, and lacrosse is more nonstop like basketball."

"All youth sports are based on volunteers; the best reason to get involved is that not a lot of parents know much about lacrosse. There is a lot less coaching from the stands. The biggest part is teaching kids how to catch and throw, and the offense and defense is similar to basketball."

If interested spectators want a look at the sport, English and Isbell recommend the Oklahoma event on June 11-12 at Mohawk Park. Over 60 teams and 1,200 players will come from all across the United States to participate in the tournament.

English's group is currently in discussions with Tulsa's Parks and Recreation Department about having a lacrosse complex being built.

"I do this for my son's interest, and I think it's a great sport for kids who may not want to play traditional sports but still want to have fun being a part of a team," English says.

"I don't have a daughter, and there are only so many slots available for girls to play soccer or softball at schools like Jenks," Isbell says. "With lacrosse, they have an opportunity to play a sport for a big school. I want to see the joy on their faces when they see they are going to play a big sport for their school in a big stadium."

The INYS lacrosse season runs from March 26 until May 21. Inquiries can be directed to www.inyouthlacrosse.com or indianationslacrosse@gmail.com.

Roughnecks, Drillers Look Forward to Season

By GLENN HIBDON
GTR Sports Writer

Dallas beckoned the Tulsa Shock. The 66ers departed for Oklahoma City. Mike Melega is banking on Tulsa's Drillers and Roughnecks sticking around for a long, long time.

Thus far, the marriage of the Texas League baseball team and the United Soccer League franchise has been one made in sports heaven. And the honeymoon continues.

"I feel like we had a very good year (in 2015)," says Melega, president and general manager of both the Drillers and Roughnecks.

Both teams are housed at downtown Tulsa's ONEOK Field.

"We were fifth in attendance among 24 (USL) teams with 4,700 fans per game, and I think the league regards us as one of its most professional operations."

"Tulsa has struggled with some pro sports teams, but the Drillers are starting its 40th season, and we want to make sure the Roughnecks are here 20, 30, 40 years. The lifeblood of any team is season ticket sales, and the Roughnecks' growth is 40 percent this season."

Melega says the soccer team turned a profit in its maiden voyage last year, and the future appears bright.

Ownership of dual sports franchises seems to be the latest trend among both minor and major league teams. Tulsa Baseball Inc. owns the Drillers, and Tulsa Pro Soccer is the majority owner of the Roughnecks. The teams have the same staffs running day-to-day operations.

"Just as SMG operates the BOK Center, we operate ONEOK Field. We're the tenant and operate the facility," says Melega. "Without our management, it would have been more difficult to start (the Roughnecks) from scratch."

Melega points out that Reno will enter the USL next year and ownership of the team already fields a minor league baseball franchise. He says the NBA San Antonio Spurs have purchased a USL team and the movement is taking root.

"You see NBA teams owning WNBA or D-League teams. A lot of the MLS teams operate USL teams," says Melega. "Eleven of them operate USL teams."

"The only negative for us last year was falling one week short of making the playoffs. I do think everybody grew to enjoy the energy of the Roughnecks, and we built a close relationship with our players. They are our players, while the Drillers are Dodgers players."

Maybe so, but when it comes to a playing surface, Melega says his organization must take care of both teams. Starting out, he had concerns about the transition from baseball field to soccer pitch.

"We have an obligation to have a great surface for the Dodgers players and a great pitch for the Roughnecks," he says.

Jonesplan of Tulsa oversees the transition from baseball to soccer, and Gary Shepherd, head groundskeeper, oversees the entire makeover. Sod is moved in from Leonard, Oklahoma, laid down, and then Shepherd mows it, lines it, and top dresses it with sand to give it weight for firm footing. Melega says MLS team NYC FC, owned by the Yankees and Manchester City, has the exact same field configuration.

HORNSBY: Tulsa Drillers mascot Hornsby eagerly anticipates the upcoming baseball season.

There will be 10 transitions this season for the Drillers/Roughnecks.

"Tulsa has a great tradition in soccer, and the guys who stayed around the area still come to the games," he continues.

Melega says that someday his organization would like to have a soccer-only stadium, but the Roughnecks must learn to run before they gallop. The team is off to a promising start entering the 2016 season, which started March 26.

"All our suites are sold out, and that's a good sign," Melega says. "Last year, we played 14 home games, and this year we have 15. Of our 14 games last season, eight were played on Fridays or Saturdays and six on workdays. This year we only have two games on week nights and the rest on weekends and holidays.

"We will have soccer fireworks six times, and we will carry over a lot of marketing strategies with the Drillers," he says.

While the Roughnecks continue to rise in attendance, Melega wants the same for the Drillers. Due to rain-outs last season, overall attendance slipped under 400,000 after topping that mark in 2014.

Tulsa became the first team in Texas League history to soar over 400,000 in 2010 and the first to surpass it again after dropping under that total.

"There is much more opportunity to grow our Roughnecks tickets from the Drillers fans. For the Roughnecks, we see a lot of millennials, people in their 20s and 30s. In baseball, there are more families and kids," Melega says.

Yes, the romance between baseball and soccer in Tulsa is blooming, and Melega is hoping it never ends. He's already making plans for the future.

"We could have the opportunity to hire Roughneck specific employees," he says. "This season, we want to grow our attendance and make the playoffs (in soccer). Fans would love to see us get to the playoffs."

"In soccer there is a little more interest in winning and losing than in baseball. It would translate a little more like the Tulsa Shock or TU basketball. When those teams are doing well, you see more tickets sold. When the Drillers are not doing well, it doesn't hurt us terribly. Making the playoffs would be a wonderful thing and that's definitely our goal."

SPRING HOME IMPROVEMENT

Exterior Lighting Improves Home Safety, Appearance

When drafting a to-do list for home improvements that can increase home value and appeal, several renovations may be atop homeowners' lists. While kitchen or bathroom remodels may be popular renovations, homeowners also should consider outdoor lighting schemes that can make homes safer and more alluring.

Outdoor lighting serves various purposes. Such lighting can draw attention to more impressive parts of a property. In addition, such lighting can improve security and deter criminals.

To get started, homeowners should first examine the exteriors of their homes and make note of existing lighting and where improvements can be made. If you're not sure where to begin, speak with an electrician or a landscape designer, each of whom can offer suggestions on lighting and which options are the best fit for your particular property.

Next, you'll want to consider efficiency and function. The United States Department of Energy suggests incorporating energy-efficient lighting, including energy-saving LED bulbs or fluorescent lights, into your plans. Timers and other automatic controls can prevent waste by turning lights on only when they are needed. Solar lights can be used as accent lights, further saving energy.

Beauty

When addressing aesthetics, think about the appeal of an accented landscape. Include lights to frame the front door and call attention to certain elements, such as decorative trees or water features. Use lights to light up deck stairways or to accent planters.

Safety

Safety is an important consideration when improving a home. Lighting can help illuminate potential hazards or draw attention to borders or property boundaries. Navigating in the dark can be treacherous, so put lights along pathways and near pools or spas. Be sure that lights will clearly mark other walkways around your home, such as those leading from doors to the yard or from the garage to where trash and recycling pails are kept. If a design element, such as a bridge over a water feature or a particular ornamental tree or shrub, is difficult to navigate in the dark, use lights to improve visibility.

Security

Added security is another reason to install more exterior lighting. Dark homes are attractive to burglars. Eliminate dark corners by lighting up areas where thieves may be able to gain access to your home. This includes areas near doorways and ground-level windows. Install motion-sensor lights in such areas so you are not wasting energy.

Lighting may not only deter human intruders, but also it can scare away animals. A raccoon, skunk or opossum may think twice about hanging around your home when your property is bathed in a spotlight.

CURB APPEAL: Revamping exterior lighting elements can improve the safety and look of a home.

Why Hiring a Landscaper May Be for You

Most homeowners want their properties to appear as appealing as possible. While many homeowners want to be proud of their properties and come home to a welcoming home each night, the benefits to maintaining landscaping go beyond the notion that well-cared for lawns make for more comforting retreats.

Because numerous variables, including landscaping, influence property values, it's difficult to assess just how much the property values of homes with impressive landscapes are influenced by those very landscapes. Indeed, studies have produced varying results regarding the effect of well-landscaped homes on property values. But what many studies have shown and what many realtors indicate is that impressive landscaping adds a significant amount to property values, with estimates suggesting landscaping increases home values by anywhere from 5 to 20 percent.

Such estimates are good news for homeowners, and they also highlight the stakes involved when making landscaping decisions. Homeowners with green thumbs may embrace the challenge of revitalizing their lawns and gardens, but many, especially those pressed for time, can benefit greatly from working with professional landscapers.

Maintaining a property requires more than just mowing the lawn every couple of weeks. Even homeowners committed to making their properties as pristine as possible can run into problems when adverse weather conditions pose a threat to lawns and gardens. The following are just a handful of reasons why homeowners may find working with landscaping professionals is the best thing for their properties and their bank accounts.

• Professionals understand the local climate. Experienced professional landscapers will understand the local climate and the challenges it presents to your lawn. Experience can prove invaluable as lawns battle adverse conditions that threaten its survival. While homeowners going it alone may struggle through a trial and error period as they try to address problems threatening their lawns, experienced professionals are more likely to identify the problem immediately, providing a ready solution that can prevent potentially costly repairs down the road.

• Professionals can provide inspiration. In addition to maintaining properties, many landscaping professionals have vast experience improving properties through landscape design. Professional landscapers may have a host of ideas for your property that you would never think of. Homeowners with little to no lawn and garden experience may not realize all the things they can do with their properties, and those who go it alone may end up with unappealing landscapes that do not attract buyers' attention when the home hits the market.

• Professionals can remove some of the stress of managing landscaping projects. Homeowners know that home improvement projects, whether they are addressing home interiors or exteriors, can be stressful. Professional landscapers typically have a network of professionals, including contractors, who they have worked with in the past. Such connections can ensure more complex projects that require both landscapers and construction contractors go as smoothly as possible. In addition, homeowners who receive contractor recommendations from their experienced landscapers tend to rest easier knowing the people working on their properties have already developed a rapport and established a successful track record working together.

C&J School Uniforms Celebrates 20 Years

*Customer Appreciation
Week:
June 6-11*

C&J School Uniforms has kept things uniform for Tulsa area schools since the store opened in 1996. Having met when their children were young and in uniforms, co-owners Joyce Fuller and Chari Edwards shared the desire of providing affordable but quality school uniforms. Their desire became a reality and C&J opened its doors in the Fontana Shopping Center at 51st Street and Memorial Drive.

Business growth over the past 20 years has required the store to move four times, all within the Fontana complex. Presently, C&J sits facing Memorial Drive next to Lenny's Subs.

C&J School Uniforms focus is on outfitting private, public and parochial schools while providing outstanding customer service. The staff is focused on helping families with their back-to-school needs. The store is Tulsa's premiere one-stop shop for school uniforms from head to toe. The shelves at C&J are stocked with quality brand merchandise. Garments are made of durable, easy-to-care-for fabric.

To ensure a student is appropriately dressed, each school's individual updated dress code is available. In-house alterations are provided for the customer's convenience. Customers will also find unique items such as teddy bears dressed in uniforms, backpacks, headbands and bows, all to match students' uniforms.

Annually, C&J offers a month-long sale in June to begin the Back to School season. This year, June 6 – 11, C&J is having its customer appreciation week. The 20-year celebration will include additional discounts, drawings for prizes, balloons, goodies and more.

After years of experience in this industry, Fuller and Edwards recommend parents begin their shopping early in the summer in order to beat the back-to-school rush.

C&J School Uniforms is open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Friday and Saturday. During the month of August, the store has extended hours.

Fuller and Edwards want to thank all of their customers for their trust and confidence in their small local business for the past 20 years. They invite customers to see them for all uniform needs and accessories.

For more information, visit www.cjschooluniforms.com or call 918-610-7470.

Organization Helps Women Find Job Success

By EMILY RAMSEY
Managing Editor

It has been said, in reference to a well-known fairy tale, that one shoe can change a person's life.

That is not far off from the motto of Dress for Success, an international nonprofit organization that provides clothing and career services for women in search of employment.

It is those services that helped to put Nancy Sposato on a new life and career path eight years ago.

In 2007, Sposato was holding three part-time jobs and looking for a fresh start and employment that would provide health benefits. She approached Dress for Success Tulsa after learning about it through the YWCA.

"Dress for Success helped me build self-esteem and self-confidence," says Sposato. "It helped me build a strong foundation and to set realistic goals going forward."

In May 2008, she was hired as a medical transcriptionist by St.

John Health System, where she remains presently employed.

Dress for Success began in 1997 with the Tulsa affiliate opening in 2001.

Women receive one outfit for their job search and then can return to the store for additional outfits once they have obtained a job position.

"Our goal is to provide them up to a week's worth of clothing," says Dress for Success Tulsa Executive Director Ronda Adkisson.

The organization also offers career services including the Going Places Network, a seven-week course for unemployed and underemployed women, where they gain job searching and professional skills. "Our goal is to have clients employed in seven weeks," Adkisson says.

The second offering is the Professional Women's Group (PWG), which is available for women who have found employment. The group provides ongoing support and guidance regarding various areas of life, including work/life balance, health and wellness, and civic leadership. "When women realize that they can give back, that starts to increase their value because, many times, in the past they did not feel like they had anything to offer," she says.

Women are referred to Dress for Success Tulsa by more than 140 nonprofit organizations, agencies, shelters, colleges, and technical institutes and are not charged for the services provided. Additionally, on occasion women will walk into the shop on their own, looking for guidance.

In addition to improving women professionally in local communities, Dress for Success is serving a much larger purpose of championing women's rights, Adkisson says.

For example, she mentions a woman whom she knows who lives in Poland and spent two years waiting for her government to approve her application to open a Dress for Success affiliate location in her country.

"These women are changing mentalties in their countries, changing the way people look at women's opportunities," says Adkisson, who has been with the organization for eight years as its executive director.

Dress for Success Tulsa will hold a grand-opening event to celebrate the move to its new location at 3103 S. Harvard Ave. on April 7 with a ribbon-cutting ceremony at 9:30 a.m., followed by tours of the store that will be open to the public.

Will Rogers H.S. Hall of Fame Announces 5 Inductees

Induction Ceremony To Be Held April 1

The Will Rogers High School Community Foundation recently announced the Will Rogers High School Hall of Fame Inductees for 2016.

"The Will Rogers High School Hall of Fame is a stellar group of graduates who have achieved fame or extraordinary success in their chosen careers and are a positive influence on tomorrow's leaders," says David Rader, chairman of the Hall of Fame committee. "This year the Hall of Fame Ceremonies will be held on Friday, April 1, with an induction presented in the Will Rogers High School Auditorium for the students and guests in the morning, followed by a dinner and celebration that evening at Southern Hills Country Club."

The 2016 Hall of Fame members are: Frank Pitezel, Class of 1942; J. David Nunneley, Class of 1954; Charlotte Wilson Heth, Ph.D., Class of 1955; Charles Kimball, Ph.D., Class of 1968; Dick Risk, J.D., Class of 1959.

For more information concerning the Hall of Fame induction activities, visit www.willrogersfoundation.net.

To make reservations for the Hall of Fame Induction dinner at Southern Hills Country Club, please call Iris Warlick Studenny at 918-625-1533. Tickets are $75 per person. Advance reservations are required.

Greater Tulsa Author Christopher Metcalf Releases Fifth Novel: The Perfect Patriot

The April 19, 1995, bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah federal building in Oklahoma City changed everything.

For Oklahoma author Christopher Metcalf, the Oklahoma City Bombing holds a permanent place in his memory. He can recall clearly the moment he heard about the bombing on his car radio as he drove to an interview. He was a writer at the Tulsa Business Journal at the time.

"At first, they didn't know what had happened. The radio news people reported there had been an explosion and a rising tower of smoke was visible from miles away," Metcalf recalls. "They turned the television on outside the office. I was interviewing someone for an article and we could see the damage the bomb had done. It was sickening."

That terrible event and the questions around how and why and most of all 'who could do this?' were the source for Metcalf's latest novel - The Perfect Patriot. This is the fifth book in the Lance Priest / Preacher series.

"Even back in 2011 when I wrote The Perfect Candidate, the first book in the series, I knew I would write one of these about the Oklahoma City Bombing," Metcalf adds. "Lance, the main character in my books, was living in Oklahoma and going to college in 1987 when he was recruited into the CIA. The OKC bombing was always going to find its way into a storyline."

For this book, Metcalf puts his main character, a deadly rogue CIA operative, in Oklahoma City days after the bombing. He works to determine who committed this mass murder and how he can prevent it from happening again. The book begins with the birth of Lance and his partner's, former KGB spy Marta Sidorova, first baby. But the bombing immediately changes everything for them, as it did for so many.

"Lance is ice-cold. He is a killer, a liar, a chameleon, a human tornado. But the bombing hits him at a personal level. He feels the need to get involved. And that takes him from Colorado to Oklahoma and into great danger as he digs into the underbelly of the anti-government militia movement," Metcalf says. "Lance, or Preacher his alter-ego, has a knack for finding his way into incredibly dangerous situations that end with incredibly violent results. It is definitely fun stuff."

Five novels in, Metcalf is enjoying the continuing process of self-publishing. The writing is the fun part. The rest - editing, marketing, more editing, advertising, and yet more editing, is the real work. "It definitely takes dedication and determination and some thick skin. But it is really cool to have people out there that I may never meet email to ask 'when is the next Preacher book coming out?' That never gets old."

For more information, visit www.christophermetcalf.com. The Perfect Patriot is available at Amazon.

Cunningham Jewelry Granted Accreditation

Having met all the necessary requirements and having been qualified, Vicki Cunningham, owner of Cunningham Jewelry and Appraisal Services, has been granted accreditation with the National Association of Jewelry Appraisers and has been conferred the professional designation of Certified Master Appraiser. Founded in 1981, the National Association of Jewelry Appraisers (NAJA) states as its purpose, "to recognize, and make available, the services of highly qualified, informed, experienced, independent and professional appraisers of gems and jewelry to those members of the public requiring such expertise." It is the only appraisal association in the United States devoted solely to the appraisal of gems and jewelry. With a membership of over 650 and Ms. Cunningham is only the seventh member to achieve the highest designation of Certified Master Appraiser.

As a Graduate Gemologist (Gemological Institute of America) and Certified Master Appraiser with the National Association of Jewelry Appraisers (NAJA), Cunningham is dedicated to providing expert appraisal services while strictly adhering to the highest professional and ethical standards.

Cunningham has over 25 years of experience in the jewelry industry, ranging from retail to design to appraisal. Her work in the appraisal field spans countless assignments for retail and private clients, as well as estates and consulting.

Cunningham is a member of the following organizations: National Association of Jewelry Appraisers (NAJA), Gemological Institute of America (GIA), Jewelers of America, Oklahoma Jewelers Association, Diamond Council of America and Jewelers for Children.

CANDELIGHT COUPLE: Cari and Gordon Marshall, strong supporters of the Child Abuse Network in Tulsa, are looking forward to this year's CANdelight Ball, to be held April 23 at the historic Mayo Hotel. This year marks the 5th anniversary of the event, which will open with cocktails in the Grand Hall, followed by an elegant dinner and live auction in the Crystal Ballroom, and conclude with a 16-piece band and dancing. Rachel Hunsucker is this year's event chair. For more information, visit www.childabusenetwork.org.

BUSINESS & PEOPLE NOTES

Schnake Turnbo Frank announces Isaac Rocha, past TYPros chair and chair-elect of Mosaic, has joined the firm as an associate for inclusion and diversity, bringing to the firm years of corporate and community leadership and business and board management.

ROCHA

Rocha will consult clients in inclusion and diversity efforts, including organizational assessments, research, scoring and change implementation. He also currently works for The Bama Companies, Inc., as the community relations and development officer where he helps strategically align the company's philanthropic giving, government affairs, inclusion initiatives and community impact.

Rocha serves on the boards of the national Multicultural Foodservice & Hospitality Alliance, Oklahoma State Chamber, Oklahoma Educated Workforce Initiative, Tulsa Regional Chamber, and Workforce Tulsa and serves on the advisory board of the YWCA-Tulsa. He also serves as an appointed commissioner to the Greater Tulsa Area Hispanic Affairs Commission.

He received a bachelor's degree in management and marketing from Oklahoma State University and a Family Office Executive Certification from Pepperdine University.

The Schemmer Associates Inc. (Schemmer), a national full-service architecture, engineering and planning firm, announces that Kyle Williams, P.E., transportation engineer, has received his professional engineering license in the state of Oklahoma.

WILLIAMS

Williams has been in the transportation group at Schemmer for two years in the Tulsa office. He specializes in municipal, local government and Oklahoma Department of Transportation (ODOT) design work. In addition, he has project experience with the Oklahoma Turnpike Authority.

Williams has a Bachelor of Science in Civil Engineering from the University of Arkansas. He is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers (ASCE) and the Civil Engineering Honor Society, Chi Epsilon, as well as an elected trustee for the Tulsa Engineering Foundation.

For more information, visit www.schemmer.com.

Tulsa Route 66 Main Street has selected Jessica Brent to serve as executive director.

BRENT

Brent is a former mobility management coordinator at INCOG and earned a master's degree in architectural urban studies from the University of Oklahoma-Tulsa. She is a skilled community organizer and communicator with a passion for event planning and visual media. Some of her previous projects, such as Sidewalk Stories, have helped bring awareness and action to urban design issues in Tulsa.

Brent says she is excited to harness the enthusiasm locals have for Tulsa's westside to continue growing the Route 66 corridor. The president of Tulsa Route 66 Main Street is Andrew Haar.

SMG Tulsa, the management company of BOK Center and Cox Business Center, named Allie Thomas 2015 Employee of the Year. Thomas serves as an event coordinator in the Event Services Department.

THOMAS

Thomas was recognized for her dedication to the success of events at Cox Business Center, including her work coordinating the 2015 Painted Pony Gala, which is one of the largest events in the facility and also the largest fundraiser of the year for the client, Saint Francis. Additionally, she took the initiative to help start a wellness committee for SMG Tulsa staff and organized a bike ride across Oklahoma on stationary bikes to help spread awareness for Mental Health suicide-prevention day.

"Allie embodies our SMG Tulsa mission of being 'Outrageously Excellent' as we relentlessly pursue superior experiences for our clients, guests and staff. In the past year she has played an integral role in the success of events at Cox Business Center," says SMG Tulsa General Manager Jeff Nickler.

The SMG Tulsa Employee of the Year is voted on by an internal committee of coworkers who recognize and award the efforts of staff members who go above and beyond the scope of their positions for clients, guests and vendors.

The Oklahoma Business Roundtable announces that Ann Ackerman, Ph.D. is its new president/CEO. Ackerman replaces Oklahoma City business and community leader Carl Edwards who had held the position since October 2012.

ACKERMAN

Ackerman was also a long-term educator and college administrator. She currently serves on the boards of the Oklahoma Health Center Foundation, Annie Oakley Society, Children's Hospital Board of Advocacy, and UCO's Advisory Board. Ackerman belongs to Rotary Club 29 and is past secretary and director. She has served on the Governor's Council of Science and Technology and chaired the Governor's Youth Council and chaired the board of the American Red Cross of Central Oklahoma. Her accomplishments include American Council on Education Fellow, Leadership Oklahoma City's Paragon Award, The Journal Record's WOY Circle of Excellence, and OCCO Employee Award for Excellence. She was named one of 50 Most Powerful Women in Oklahoma for 2012-2014 by Friday, and was one of The Journal Record's 2014 Most Admired CEOs.

The Oklahoma Business Roundtable was founded in 1991 and serves as the state's key economic development support organization.

Flintco, LLC, one of the nation's largest commercial construction companies, is consolidating the leadership for its Oklahoma offices, naming Dave Kollmann as the Central Region president. In his new role, Kollmann will oversee Flintco's Tulsa and Oklahoma City offices as well as Oakridge Builders and Oakridge Constructors.

KOLLMANN

Kollmann has been with Flintco for 23 years, serving as the Tulsa division president since 2006. Under his leadership, the Tulsa office has grown to one of the company's largest and most profitable offices.

Flintco has also named Richard Jagers as the company's new chief administrative officer and Trent Gudgel as in-house general counsel.

Previously, Jagers spent 14 years with Balfour Beatty PLC, most recently serving as senior vice president and chief financial officer for Balfour Beatty Construction U.S. In his new role, Jagers will oversee the company's finance, accounting, legal and risk management teams. He brings over 25 years of experience in global, publicly traded construction and manufacturing companies.

Gudgel brings extensive construction, commercial, business and real estate experience to his role as general counsel. He was previously an attorney and shareholder with Hall, Estill, Hardwick, Gable, Golden & Nelson, P.C. in Tulsa.

A graduate of the University of Oklahoma's College of Law, Gudgel is a member of the Oklahoma Bar Association, the State Bar of Texas, the American Inns of Court and the Defense Research Institute.

Tyler Spradlin, relationship manager at Yorktown Bank, Matt Webb, AVP/private banking at Valley National Bank, and Cody Wilson, credit risk officer at Valley National Bank, all in Tulsa, completed the Oklahoma Bankers Association Commercial Lending School in Oklahoma City.

Spradlin, Webb and Wilson were among 43 graduates of the school, which was held Feb. 28-Mar. 4 at the OBA Harris Event Center in Oklahoma City.

The OBA Commercial Lending School, conducted annually, is designed to prepare bankers to serve effectively as commercial loan officers. Students learn about steps they should take in evaluating business loan requests, how businesses are structured and how to evaluate the management of business borrowers.

Will Rogers High a One-of-a-Kind Treasure

High School Was First Public Works Administration Project in Oklahoma

In a previous column, I discussed the architecture of Daniel Webster High School. But Webster was not Tulsa's first suburban high school. That acknowledgment belongs to Will Rogers High School, 3909 E. 5th Pl., which opened on Sept. 11, 1939. The school is now known as Will Rogers College Junior High and High School.

The site for Will Rogers was a rural setting of 32 acres of grassy cow pasture. (Cattle grazed in the immediate area during construction.) Designed by architects Joseph Koberling and Leon B. Senter, the school, at 200,000 square feet, had a capacity of 1,500 students. It was the first PWA (Public Works Administration) project in Oklahoma and the pride of WPA (Work Progress Administration). These two FDR agencies established in the depression years of the 1930s paid 45 percent of the substantial cost; 55 percent was paid by our local school district.

The building's exterior is buff brick with polished limestone and terra cotta accents. Towards the west end of the front (south) elevation, the building rises three stories above the main floor, forming a small tower. Below, bronze lanterns flank the main entrance doors while terra cotta spandrels interrupt bands of what were originally steel windows. Terra cotta plaques above these doors are sculptured in bas relief. Those on the west depict Will Rogers in early and later life. Those on the east feature a boy and a girl learning.

Upon entering the main vestibule, handsome bronze radiator grills occur on the left and right. The main hall of the school is treated as a fine office building with terra cotta sheathed walls, and terrazzo floors. Ornamental plaster work borders the ceiling, installed by Percy Prosser, a well-known sculptor of the day. Decorating the two main hallways were 50 giant sepia-toned prints depicting seven phases of Will Rogers' life from boyhood through his movie career to his role as ambassador of good will.

The psychology of color was incorporated into the interior color scheme. Originally classrooms were all painted in pastels, colorkeyed to learning. Colors were used to produce moods. Bright hues were incorporated in science and math classrooms, and quiet colors were used for the library. A five color palate made up the color scheme which was eventually adopted as a standard for the whole school system.

Will Rogers had all the special spaces deemed important for a high school in the 1930s. These included an indoor pool, metal and wood shops, various gymnasiums with spectator seating, a cafeteria and full kitchen, a spacious library, and, last but not least, a vast auditorium complete with balcony and a large lobby with ticket booth.

The auditorium resembles a luxury theatre. The elaborate stage is curved and fluted with brass insets of a fan and floral design in tan and gold leaf. The proscenium arch is a rich mixture of floral and classic figure design and fans and fountains in gold leaf, terra cotta red and brass. Elaborate brass light fixtures and false balconies add to a performance atmosphere. The plaster ceiling is ornate with painted and stenciled cast plaster beams. Dominating the west wall is a mural by Alex Rindskopf, a Chicago artist. The James Greenleaf Wittier verse about westward expansion is illustrated with figures of pioneers and Indians.

Over the years, Rogers has received various remodels. A free-standing adult education building was added at the southeast corner of the site. Most recently, an athletic field house has been added to the northwest end of the original building, listed on the National Register of Historic Places, appears as originally built although not without some layers of wear and repair from 77 years of hard use. With money for education in short supply, Will Rogers High School in design and detail will remain a one-of-a-kind architectural treasure never to be duplicated.

Brookside Continues as a Tulsa Destination

Brookside can be called quintessentially Tulsa with its early Creek Nation history in the 1800s, then a landing place for early oil boom town growth in the early 1900s and finally becoming a shopping area for generations of enthusiastic people from the mid-1900s through today.

The Brookside area began as a part of the Creek Indian land just south of Tulsa. This land was granted to the Creek Nation in 1824. They were removed from Alabama to Indian Territory in about 1836. The mixed blood Creek Nation Perryman family was one of the first families to settle in this area and operated the first post office in 1882 at the home of George Perryman near what is now 41st and Trenton. (A marker stands at this site today.)

Early Brookside was considered to be along the river from 32nd to 38th streets and over to Peoria Avenue. Its boundaries have changed many times and have settled today on the main strip along Peoria from 31st to 51st and from the Arkansas River to Lewis Ave. The "village" area is concentrated along Peoria from 32nd to 41st streets.

Early Development

The "Brookside" name was first used by Guy Scroggs when he named his store Brookside Drug in 1940. The "brook" was presumed to be Crow Creek named for an early railroad president. Scroggs is also credited with beginning the "friendly neighborhood atmosphere" prevailing in this area with his policy of awarding free ice cream to good students from nearby Eliot Elementary School.

City Veterinary Hospital was built in the Streamline style of Art Deco architecture in 1942.

Following the end of the Second World War, another building boom began which brought a new generation to the area.

In this post war era, Brookside added new businesses:

Dunwell Cleaners, Ralph E. Johnson was founder, and four generations of this family operated the cleaners until the late 1990s when it was transformed into a restaurant.

Brookside State Bank, the fifth state bank chartered in Tulsa whose chairman was Howard G. Barnett. Today, this is the home of a branch of the Bank of Oklahoma.

Brookside Yesterday

Brook Theater, a 600-seat movie theater was famous for its "Saturday afternoon matinees." Since that time, it has served as the home of the American Theater Company and then became The Brook restaurant and bar.

Van's Hamburgers, opened in the 1950s in the same site as Claude's Hamburgers is today.

Lewis Meyer Book Store, a very favorite place for book lovers located north of the Brook Theater; this space is now incorporated into The Brook.

Rich's Furniture Store was at 34th and Peoria and was a favorite place to find home furnishings.

During the heyday of the 1950s, Brookside became a place for high school students to gather with friends. This led to the "Restless Ribbon" where cars packed with students cruised up and down Peoria, especially through Pennington's Drive-In. Besides seeing friends, Pennington's was famous for its fried shrimp, French fries and black bottom pie.

Brookside Today

Today, Brookside provides excellent establishments such as Elmer's BBQ, Poseidon Adventures, Millinda's Merle Norman, Sharkey's Billiards and Bar, and Cunningham Jewelry and Appraisals. (See page 26 for an article about Cunningham Jewelry.)

Brookside hosts several festivals throughout the year. Herb Day will be held Saturday, April 9 and Brookside Rumble & Roll on Thursday, June 2.

B.A.'s Water Treatment Plant Receives Award

The city of Broken Arrow's Verdigris Water Treatment Plant and the plant's design firm HDR won Oklahoma's American Council of Engineering Companies Grand Conceptor Award at the Engineering Excellence Award banquet, which was held in January.

HDR provided planning and design services for the treatment plant.

In Oklahoma's ACEC competition, four awards are given: one grand conceptor award, four honor awards and three finalist awards. Only the grand conceptor and honor award recipients advance to the national competition, which will be held April 19 in Washington, DC.

The $58 million treatment plant project is the city's largest-ever public works project, the first large membrane plant in the state and one of the largest in the country.

The innovative water treatment plant gives Broken Arrow a supply system with an ample amount of sustainable, high-quality water for future generations. The new plant utilizes a state-of-the-art membrane filtration system, which removes microorganisms better than conventional treatment methods by forcing water through extremely fine, porous tubes. The project finished on time in June 2014 and $8.9 million under budget; the city of Broken Arrow now has total control over its water supply, from acquisition through disinfection and delivery.

worked as a sign language interpreter with Sand Springs Public Schools.

After graduating high school, Knutson attended Oklahoma State University where he soon decided to pursue a degree in elementary education.

His first few years out of college were spent as a substitute teacher for Sand Springs, Tulsa, Jenks and Broken Arrow public schools before he received an opportunity to take over in a fifth grade classroom at Country Lane Intermediate. A few months later, he was hired to teach fourth grade at Country Lane Intermediate. He is currently in his fourth year teaching fourth grade.

Knutson enjoys helping students create their foundation in preparation for deeper concepts in years to come, he says.

He spends much of the summer months writing new curriculum for the coming school year, but he admits, "it's difficult" being away from the school. "It's exciting when we start back up in the fall."

Knutson's yearly goals for his students are twofold. First, he wants them to understand the learning process: "I want them to realize that mistakes are okay and to continue to work even if they find it difficult. We're all trying to get better." Secondly, "learn how to get along with each other, which starts with the adults. How do we as teachers get along with each other?" he says.

"It brings me great joy to see them learn these two things, because then I know as they leave my classroom, they'll be successful."
