Pets and vets: service dogs for veterans with PTSD

Approximately 20 percent of American veterans suffer from post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD), a mental health problem that develops after an individual experiences a traumatic event. It's associated with nightmares, flashbacks, difficulty sleeping, depression and substance abuse. Fortunately, service dogs may be able to help.

THE BENEFITS

Growing evidence suggests that service dogs can be used as an effective complementary treatment for veterans with PTSD. Here are some of the benefits of pairing those who've served with service dogs:

- They can help increase physical activity. Service dogs assist with mobility and encourage physical activity, which leads to better overall health and well-being.
- They can help improve mental health. Service dogs help lower anxiety and depression, reduce nightmares and improve sleep in veterans with PTSD.

- They can interrupt harmful behaviors. Service dogs are trained to recognize and interrupt panic attacks, flashbacks and other behaviors that could be harmful by licking, nudging or pawing their veteran.

- They can help retrieve medication. Service dogs are taught to alert their veteran when it's time to take their medication. They can even retrieve it for them.

- They can provide a sense of security. Service dogs will watch their veteran's back when they're in public and alert them if someone is approaching from behind. This can help the veteran to feel more secure and less on edge.

Service dogs provide unconditional love and healing for veterans. They can reduce PTSD symptoms and enhance quality of life. This year for Veteran's Day, consider supporting an animal-assisted therapy program in your area.

5 ways to celebrate Veterans Day

If you're wondering how you can best honor those who served their country on Veterans Day, here are five ways you can mark the occasion on November 11.

1. OBSERVE TWO MINUTES OF SILENCE

All Americans are encouraged to pause for two minutes of silence at 11 a.m. on Veterans Day. This is a time to reflect on the contributions and sacrifices of all U.S. veterans.

2. CONNECT WITH A VETERAN

Make the time to speak with a veteran about their experiences in the military. Alternatively, you can send a veteran a postcard or e-card to thank them for their service. If you don't know a veteran, you can send a card or letter through organizations such as A Million Thanks.

3. MAKE A DONATION OR VOLUNTEER

More than 40,000 charities in the United States support veterans and their families including Fisher House Foundation, Homes for our Troops and Disabled American Veterans. Many of these organizations have volunteer opportunities.

4. SHOP AT A VETERAN-OWNED BUSINESS

Help veterans and their families support themselves by patronizing a veteran-owned business. If you don't know of any, you can search for one in your area at veteranownedbusiness.com.

5. LEARN ABOUT MILITARY HISTORY

To better appreciate the sacrifices American veterans made, learn more about the important battles in which they fought. You can do this by reading a book or watching a movie about military history.

Keep in mind that you can do most of these things year-round. To make a meaningful impact on the veterans in your community, continue to support and connect with them even after Veterans Day is over.
