Mille Lacs Lake anglers can harvest one walleye starting Dec. 1

Winter anglers on Mille Lacs Lake can enjoy a walleye harvest opportunity for the seventh season in a row. Starting on Thursday, Dec. 1, anglers will be allowed to keep one walleye between 21-23 inches or one walleye longer than 28 inches on Mille Lacs.

"Our assessment netting shows that the walleye population is abundant enough to sustain some harvest again this winter," said Brad Parsons, fisheries section manager for the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources. "We know offering harvest opportunities when possible is important for anglers."

Winter regulations are set after completion of the DNR's annual fall netting assessment of the lake. The 2022 assessment found higher numbers of walleye than in the 2021 assessment, with walleye caught in similar numbers to what were found in the 2017-2020 assessments.

State-licensed anglers share the harvest of multiple species on Mille Lacs with eight Ojibwe tribes that have fishing rights under the 1837 treaty. The safe harvest levels for the fishing year will be set in early 2023 through discussions between the state and the tribes. The DNR will determine regulations for the 2023 open water season once the state's allocations, calculated based on those safe harvest levels, are known, with an announcement of regulations in the spring.

Insights from fall assessment

The 2022 assessment showed improvement from the 2021 netting. Fisheries staff observed an abundance of walleye similar to numbers seen in recent years. The 2013-year class continues to be the most abundant, followed by fish hatched in 2017. The 2017-year class fish are now 18-21 inches long, with faster growing individuals exceeding 21 inches.

Fish that hatched in 2020-2022 were also sampled in higher numbers. It is encouraging to see additional year classes that may eventually contribute to the fishery, but the ultimate impact to the walleye population won't be known for several years, Parsons said.

"Although there is no guarantee these fish will survive to adulthood in high numbers, we are cautiously optimistic that these year classes could contribute to the fishery in future years," Parsons said.

The fall assessment also looks at food abundance and walleye health. Perch and cisco are the primary food source for Mille Lacs' walleye. Perch abundance has increased because of strong 2020–2021year classes.

Walleye condition, or "plumpness," improved significantly for fish greater than 14 inches, reflecting the increased availability of forage fish. The higher abundance of food in the lake also has likely affected anglers' catch rates, which were lower in 2022 than in recent years.

"A lower catch rate in the late summer and fall can sometimes carry over into the winter if forage is abundant, but predators can also reduce forage later in the winter and the bite may improve," Parsons said.

Complete winter fishing regulations for Mille Lacs Lake are available on the DNR website (mndnr.gov/millelacslake).

Chronic wasting disease suspected

The Minnesota Department of Natural Resources received preliminary test results indicating the first suspected case of chronic wasting disease in a wild white-tailed deer in the Bemidji area. The adult male was harvested opening weekend of the firearms season about 10 miles south of Bemidji in deer permit area 184.

While preliminary test results strongly indicate a CWD infection, this needs to be confirmed by additional analysis. "While disappointing, this find is not completely unexpected," said Kelly Straka, wildlife section manager for the DNR. "We're announcing this preliminary CWD positive result to encourage hunters in the Bemidji area to have their deer tested."

Following this preliminary result, the DNR will make self-service sampling stations available in deer permit area 184. If the preliminary positive is confirmed, the DNR will take additional management actions per the agency's CWD response plan, which may include late special season hunting and targeted culling.

CWD is a fatal neurological disease that affects cervids, including white-tailed deer. It is found globally and in about half of the states in the U.S. CWD remains relatively rare in Minnesota but is a concern because the disease is easily transmissible and always fatal. Since 2002, 168 cases of CWD in the wild population have been documented, most of them in the southeastern part of the state.

Artist's rendering of the new $45 million surgical services and specialty clinic expansion at Riverwood Healthcare Center in Aitkin.

During the week of July 25-29, construction work began on Riverwood Healthcare Center's surgical services and specialty clinic expansion in Aitkin. The new surgery wing, designed by DSGW with Kraus-Anderson as the construction contractor, is slated to be a state-of-the-art surgery wing.

The hospital's surgery department, originally constructed in 2002 when a new hospital and clinic facility was built on Bunker Hill Drive, needed updating and expansion. Several factors have driven the need for change. These include a growing number of surgeons and surgical specialties, surgical procedures volume, a need for larger operating rooms that can accommodate digital innovation advances, more space for patient education and family waiting, and enhanced patient privacy.

ROXANNE MCGILLIS

Roxanne Lee McGillis, 57. died in Aitkin on Monday, November 14, 2022. A gathering of family and friends along with a luncheon will take place Saturday, November 19, 2022 from 1 p.m. until the 3 p.m. Celebration of Life at the 40 Club Banquet Cente with Pastor David Becker officiating.

Born on November 11, 1965, Roxie was raised in Aitkin, by her mother, Linda McGillis and her step-father, Jack McGillis. Caring for others came natural to Roxie at an early age. When she was seven, she eagerly awaited her baby brother's arrival and didn't want to let anyone else hold him once he was born; he was all hers. After graduating from Aitkin high school, she worked her way through college, attending the University of Minnesota and later the College of St. Catherine to become a registered nurse. She cared for sick and injured children at St. Joseph Health System and the Shriners Children's Hospital, and made many lasting relationships with not only her co-workers, but also with the parents and kids who were lucky enough to have her as their nurse. At age 28 when Roxie found out she was expecting, she was so excited to welcome that little girl into her life. She was proud of Ally and all her endeavors, whether it was academics, soccer, or dance. Roxie was an independent single mother, and the two of them shared a strong bond. She raised Ally with the same unconditional love, support, and kind-heartedness she herself through college, she worked as a waiter at a Wyndham hotel. From the time that she started working there, the hotel had received 3,000 positive comments about Roxie, and in 1999, she received the Employee of the Year award for the whole, international organization. They produced a congratulatory video for her, featuring commentary from both customers and co-workers. Chris Rock presented the award to Roxie at the annual Wyndham award ceremony. It was just one example of how friends and strangers alike couldn't help but love her. Through her struggles with cancer, Roxie was selfless, always more worried about the needs of others than she was her own. Even as she battled cancer in her own body, Roxie found a way to help her neighbor battle hers. She cared deeply for her friends and family, and never forgot to ask her loved ones for the latest updates on their health concerns or life happenings.

Roxie is survived by her mother, Linda Mc-Gillis; siblings: Brenda McGuire, Dawn (Steve) Slette, and John (Nicole) McGillis; the love of her life, Jon Richert; daughter, Ally Johnson and step-daughters Taylor and Talia Richert;,nephews and nieces: John, Joe, and Jay McGuire, and John, Bayley, Blake, and August McGillis, and Madison and Hannah Slette; father Dick Kuschel; and many, many more family and friends.
