Holiday eating stress you out? Here are some helpful tips!

By Chrissy Krueger RN, RD, CDN, CDCES, Diabetes Education & Care Specialist, Oak Orchard Health

As a Diabetes Educator, at Oak Orchard Health, I hear a lot about the anxiety and stress of overeating during the holidays. Whether it's Thanksgiving, Christmas, or another seasonal holiday, learning to eat healthy during this time can be a challenge – but you can do it. Keep in mind that each holiday represents just one day, and you can get back on your healthy meal plan the next day.

Here are a few tips to help you get through the holidays feeling good about yourself.

Start by preparing in advance.

If the party is not at your home, consider asking the hostess if you can help by bringing a dish to pass. That dish will be a healthy one for you and delicious for others. That's your "go-to" dish when you're feeling hungry or other options are not too appealing.

Skipping meals before the holiday dinner isn't a good idea.

Skipping meals can result in moodiness or irritability. For some, it can also lead to low blood sugar. You should not get yourself so hungry that you will eat anything and everything! Try to eat regularly throughout the day, maybe smaller meals than usual, but do eat breakfast and lunch.

Re-think the holidays.

Why are you gathering? To be with family and friends? Sharing experiences with each other? The point is that holidays aren't just about food. In fact, after eating your meal, avoid lingering near the holiday spread. Go into another room to mingle. Also, consider taking a walk with someone you haven't seen in a while.

Avoid taking leftovers home.

Unless a loved one was unable to attend and you want to bring them some treats, avoid bringing leftovers home. If you're the hostess, don't make too much food and if you do, have a plan for giving it away to your guests or a local senior center or food shelter.

Don't give up your healthy lifestyle.

Often people use Thanksgiving as a reason to start overeating throughout the holiday season. Try to think of each holiday as a one-day event and get back on track with your healthy habits the next day. You'll feel better!

Heart-healthy portions.

Whether you have diabetes or not, these are great guidelines on how to fill your plate. A good rule of thumb is that half your plate should contain non-starchy vegetables such as green beans, broccoli, or cauliflower, a quarter of the plate with protein, and a quarter with carbohydrates. Riced cauliflower is very popular and can be substituted for mashed potatoes – or make half the mashed potatoes with real potatoes and the other half with riced cauliflower. Your guests won't know the difference!

Desserts.

If you have room for dessert, try to limit your portion sizes. An eighth of a pie or 2" square of cake can be enough. If you're going to bring a dessert, choose one that has fewer carbohydrates and sugar. People with diabetes can eat desserts but it's all about the size of the portion. The smaller the better.

Always carry a glass of water.

Having a glass of water and sipping it throughout the day will help you avoid picking on food. This will also help to reduce your alcohol consumption.

No thank you.

Be comfortable saying no thank you when offered another portion. Those who truly love you will not change their mind based on how much or what you eat!

Holidays are not just for eating.

If you're the hostess, you can plan to do something with your guests like playing games or taking a walk. Plan to have everyone step away from the table and go to another room to play a game like charades or a card game. The more active the better.

If you do overindulge, don't beat yourself up about it. Just get back on track. Take a walk the next day and start eating healthy again. Remember, don't skip meals either!

If you need help managing diabetes, are interested in nutrition and/or incorporating a healthy lifestyle, contact Oak Orchard Health and ask how to be referred to the nutrition diabetes care specialist. Happy holidays!

Signs of a HEART ATTACK

Some heart attacks are sudden and intense, but most heart attacks start slowly, with mild pain. Often people affected aren't sure what's wrong and wait too long before getting help. Symptoms include:

CHEST DISCOMFORT. Most heart attacks involve discomfort in the center of the chest that lasts more than a few minutes, or that goes away and comes back. It can feel like uncomfortable pressure, squeezing, fullness or pain.

DISCOMFORT IN OTHER AREAS OF THE UPPER BODY. Symptoms can include pain or discomfort in one or both arms, the back, neck, jaw or stomach.

SHORTNESS OF BREATH with or without chest discomfort.

OTHER SIGNS may include breaking out in a cold sweat, nausea or lightheadedness

Women are somewhat more likely than men to experience other common symptoms, particularly SHORTNESS OF BREATH, NAUSEA/VOMITING, AND BACK/JAW PAIN.

If you or someone with you has one or more of these signs, don't delay!

Call 9-1-1 immediately!

Do you have HEEL pain or ARCH pain?

HEEL SPUR SYNDROME/PLANTAR FASCITIS is a common problem among people who are active. It starts as a dull intermittent pain in the heel which may progress to a sharp persistent pain. Classically, it is worse in the morning with the first few steps, after sitting, after standing, or after walking.

- Plantar fasciitis often begins with irritation and tearing of the fibrous band of tissue on the bottom of the foot, which may eventually result in the formation of a heel spur.

- Contributing factors: flat pronated feet, high arched feet, poor shoe support, increased age, sudden weight increase, increased activity level, family tendency.

- Approximately 2-3 times your body weight of force is exerted on each foot with walking. Flexible, non-custom molded arch support found at those advertised shoe stores cannot support these forces and usually do not provide long-lasting relief, do not come with a lifetime warranty, and are typically more expensive than custom-molded ones made by our office.

- 95 percent of our patients symptoms are resolved with conservative treatment, avoiding surgical intervention.

- We also offer surgical procedures with the best post-op success rates using Endoscopic Plantar Fasciotomy techniques and EPF resulting in minimal incisions and scarring, immediate ambulation and often back in a shoe in one week.

If you can't remember when your feet didn't hurt, now is the time to give us a call!

Things to Look for in a New Job

Professionals change jobs for various reasons. But regardless of what's behind a career change, many people can benefit by looking for things in a new job that can make them happy both professionally and personally.

• Salary: Of course everyone would love to earn more money when changing jobs, but there is more to changing jobs than just improving your bottom line. As you begin your job search, consider how much you currently earn and if that allows you to live a life you love. If so, don't overemphasize finding a new job that pays considerably more than your currently earn. On the flip side, young professionals who want to start a family in the years ahead should consider the costs associated with such a decision and how the salaries they earn at their next jobs may affect what they want down the road.

• Work/life balance: Before beginning your search for a new job, think about why you want to switch careers or companies. Long hours often leads to burnout. If you're looking for a new job because you're burned out, try to find a job that affords you a better work/life balance. A study from the Happiness Research Institute in Copenhagen found that, with the curious exception of people who work more than 55 hours per week, stress rises accordingly with the numbers of hours worked each week.

• Satisfaction: When attempting to achieve a better work/life balance, it can be easy to overlook satisfaction at work in exchange for more time at home. But studies have shown that feeling satisfied by what you do can have a profound impact on your overall happiness. It's possible to find an engaging career that still affords you time away from work, and such a career can ultimately pave the way toward a happier life.

• Commute: Bending over backwards simply to get to work and then get home from work can have an incredibly negative impact on your life. A study from the Office of National Statistics in the United Kingdom found that commuters, especially those who spend between 60 and 90 minutes commuting to work, have lower life satisfaction and lower levels of happiness compared to people who don't commute. Before accepting a job offer, estimate your commute time to and from the new office and try to determine the impact of that commute on your quality of life.

Many people aspire to find a new job at the dawn of a new year. Job seekers should consider a host of factors before switching jobs to make sure they make the best decisions. ■
