BARN QUILTS ARE BIG IN NORTHEAST TEXAS

Tumbleweed Smith

If you're anywhere near Bonham, the county seat of Fannin County, you see a lot of quilt patterns painted on barns and other buildings. The paintings represent one square of a quilt.

"The history of barn quilts came about some years ago when barns in Kentucky and different areas were coming into disrepair and "We have a few two feet by two feet but I didn't go that direction because I wanted people to be able to see these from the road and enjoy looking at them." Some are painted directly on the buildings. Others are painted on wood or metal and screwed onto the structures.

"It's outdoor paint of course. We have a huge tourist attraction here and have people come here from all over the United States and Canada. We've even had some from Italy. My goal was basically to celebrate this community and its residents."

She says it's easy to paint a quilt square. "It's all geometric. Get out your ruler and a pencil; draw your pattern on a board or something. It's all between lines and stuff. If you can color, you can paint a quilt square. It's great fun. We have several on our place and people are always driving by and looking at them."

It's also a great project for kids and family members to work together. "Home schoolers can make them. At our high school in Bonham the geography teacher had his students paint a quilt square. It's good for the kids because it's numbers and measuring stuff. It up on their agriculture barn."

Some people looking for ideas about quilt design turn to Google or other social sites. In earlier time the Kansas City Star newspaper put a quilt design in every issue of its publication. Many early quilters relied on the paper for patterns.

"O my gosh, there's so many quilt patterns out there. Everybody has a quilt that grandma made and it's a wonderful way to make her memory last a long time."

The trail is twelve years old and is called The Fannin County Quilt Barn Trail, The Largest Barn Quilt Trail In The State Of Texas.

BUSINESS SERVICES

The business services industry is a very broad industry encompassing many different categories of business operations; all of them provide some sort of non-financial service to other companies. These services include advertising, marketing, consultation, logistics (including travel and facilities services), waste handling, staffing services, shipping, administration, and security services to name a few. Nearly every business in operation has need for at least one of the different kinds of service offered by the industry. Marketing companies are responsible for increasing the sales of a client company by helping the company gain new customers as well as keep current ones. Legal services are needed to deal with business transactions, as well as for litigation purposes. Logistics and shipping companies are responsible for connecting businesses to other businesses or consumers by collecting, storing, transporting, and delivering products. Staffing companies match people in need of jobs, temporary or permanent, with companies in need of qualified employees. Leasing companies fill a client's need for certain items without requiring full purchase. Security companies are responsible for keeping a company's assets secure. Consulting companies are in the business of fulfilling needs for expertise that clients cannot fulfill themselves. These companies may offer professional, scientific, or technical consulting, management or strategy consulting, or human resources consulting.
