MEC Pacesetter Tour stops in Laurel

By Linda Cranford
 Over 100 members of the local business community including members of the Jones County Chamber of Commerce, EDA, Rotary Club, and Kiwanis Club convened at the Laurel Country Club for the 16th stop of the Mississippi Economic Council's annual 22 city Pacesetter Tour of the state.
 After enjoying a delicious lunch, MEC President/CEO Blake Wilson spoke to the group about the focus of the MEC and the Pacesetter Tour. The attendees heard video presentations from MEC 2015-2016 Chair David Gates, of Atmos Energy, Blueprint Mississippi Transportation Infrastructure Chair Joe Frank Sanderson, Jr., CEO of Sanderson Farms, Gov. Phil Bryant, Lt. Gov. Tate Reeves, and Speaker of the House Philip Gunn. Also speaking to the group in person was Doug Henley with Blue Cross Blue Shield.

 Wilson said the MEC relies a lot on scientific and technological research, as well as feedback from the communities across the state. The attendees were asked to participate in providing some of this feedback by answering questions throughout the presentation. By using clickers, participants answered multiple choice questions and the results were immediately calculated on screen.

 "We focus on four pillars of progress," explained Wilson, "economic competitiveness, educational achievement, workforce, and resource management and technology commercialization."
 After hearing from MEC Chair David Gates, the attendees were asked to vote on the question: Will your child or grandchild be able to find a good-paying job in Mississippi, or will they have to leave the state to find a good-paying job when they enter the workforce? The results showed 61% believe our children will be able to find a good-paying job in Mississippi.

 "This is a real turnaround from five years ago," exclaimed Wilson. "Five years ago we asked this question, and 62 percent said they would have to leave the state. So, that's pretty positive, and a lot of positive stuff is being talked about in the State of Mississippi."
 After hearing about many of the positive things that are happening in Mississippi from Gov. Bryant in his video presentation, the audience was asked the question: How do you see Mississippi 10 years from now? Forty-six percent believed Mississippi will be a hot, economic development location, and 23% believed Mississippi will be a newly emerging growth state.

“Put those two together and that is almost 70%, with pretty low numbers in the others. That is the kind of attitude that we have to have to continue to be successful,” exclaimed Wilson. “This is a real shift in thinking here in Mississippi.

Wilson said the MEC is working on four priorities to improve Mississippi’s economic competitiveness: the Excelerate Mississippi with the Blueprint Transportation plan, moving toward having appointed school superintendents rather than elected, phasing out the franchise tax over a ten year period, and phasing workforce funding back into the system.

The next question posed to the audience for feedback was, thinking about Mississippi as a place to live, work and raise a family, in your opinion, is Mississippi... Better than Other Southern States, About the same as Other Southern States, Worse than Other Southern States, or Don’t know. Forty-six percent said better and 41% said about the same.

In speaking about phasing out the franchise tax Wilson said that South Carolina is our most competitive state and they don’t have a franchise tax. “It’s becoming a serious issue and impediment for economic development. Mississippi is one of only eleven states that still have it.”

Speaker of the House, Philip Gunn addressed the issue of phasing workforce funding back into the system in his video presentation. Wilson said there is $50 million sitting in an unemployment compensation surplus fund. “We’ve got to take those funds out and put them to work; and put people to work. It’s not even doing anything, it’s just sitting there. We need to phase workforce funding back into the system.”

Although Joe Frank Sanderson, Jr. was present for the luncheon, attendees heard his video presentation on Excelerate Mississippi and the Blueprint Transportation Study. Wilson recognized Sanderson, and his successor, Robin Robinson, who was also present that will take over as Chair next year.

In the video presentation Sanderson said, “In 1987 business leaders across the state along with elected leaders worked together to construct one of the best four-lane highway systems in America. By connecting Mississippians in all parts of the state, we gained an edge in economic development. But, today...we are on the verge of losing our edge and the massive investment that was made in our state’s transportation system is going to be lost. Roads across our state are beginning to crumble, and bridges are not safe. This is happening on our state owned systems, as well as our local roads and bridges.” Sanderson urged everyone to support the recommendations set forth in the reports by Excelerate Mississippi and the Blueprint Transportation task force led by Sanderson.

Wilson reported that he received word Tuesday that the Jones County Supervisors and the EDA have joined the 45 other associations, organizations, counties, and cities across the state that have signed on in support of Excelerate Mississippi. The recommendations calls for an additional $375 million a year be targeted for the most critical bridges and roads; $300 million focused for state roads and bridges, and $75 million or 20% for local needs. In addition the recommendations calls for the continuation of existing programs for ports, airports, and railroads to be valued as key resources in Mississippi’s overall transportation efforts.

Wilson urged people to go to the ExcelerateMS.com website and check out the Excelerate Mississippi Report and get a list of all the bridges and roads in your county that are deficient.

“We are one of a number of states that are looking at this, but, 23 states have already done it,” said Wilson. “We are not unique. There are a lot of other states with this problem. But, if we stand still we are going to fall behind. Let’s get an edge, and let’s jump on this. We’re falling backwards by standing still.”

Rotary Club President Gregg Bennett

It was no surprise that maintenance of existing roadways was the top answer when the question was posed to the attendees, if additional funds were allocated for transportation, what do you believe is your community’s most pressing transportation need.

Wilson said the MEC’s next big “dive into research” is how we can best improve our education system, and the way we fund it. They are involving Ole Miss and Jackson State to take on the subject, and they are just now launching the initiative.

In addressing education, three questions were asked about Charter Schools. The majority of the audience believed that Charter Schools should continue to be a part of Mississippi’s overall education reform strategy. The vote was split between Charter Schools being located in only the troubled districts or being located in any school district regardless of ratings. On the question whether students in Traditional Public Schools or Charter Schools should be allowed to cross school district lines, the opinions were again split between 50% saying yes and 42% saying no.

On the question how do you view the workforce in your area, a majority felt that we are only somewhat prepared. “We can’t have this,” exclaimed Wilson. “We’ve got to be feeling that we are doing the job. That’s why continued focus on workforce training is critically important, because we have to be very prepared. Remember this is the number one issue in economic development. The number two issue is transportation.”

In answering the question what is the greatest positive impact of having a healthy workforce, a majority said greater productivity, and Wilson said this is being scene across the state.

The session concluded with Doug Henley of Blue Cross Blue Shield, who sponsored the event, speaking on how to reduce employee cost and how you can make your workforce more productive by having a healthier workforce. He said this begins in the schools, with the children learning health and wellness, and basic life skill. Blue Cross is working with schools, universities, and corporations across the state to initiate healthy lifestyle programs.

Fellowship of Christian Athletes Breakfast of Champions set for March 25

By Mitchell Williams

As we head into the perennially windy month of March, we look forward to two big items on our FCA calendar. Yes, sir! A couple of "signature" items scheduled to appear in less than a month that will hopefully bring joy to all who need just a little "boost."

First, in a couple weeks we'll see kids a little bit of everywhere. And I mean everywhere! You are absolutely right. It's spring break time, huh? Yes. Schools will give kids a week off in the next few days. What are we excited about? A long break for our teachers.

They too need a recess. So glad they will get a little time. A note: if you haven't noticed, almost half of the students in school in Mississippi are either from homes which are fatherless, struggling financially or both. Our teachers may just need a little time . . . to breathe.

Secondly, on March 25 the local chapter of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes is hosting it's annual Good Friday Breakfast of Champions at the Payne Center on the Southern Miss campus at 7 a.m. Breakfast will be served at 6:30. Our guest will be two-time Butkus Award winner and 2015 College Hall of Famer Brian "The Boz" Bosworth. He was probably the most feared college football player of his time; Bosworth became a Christian as an adult. Not too long ago.

Well, keep checking pinebeltfca.org and southernmissfca.org for updates. Pray for us. This annual event is a huge part of our local budget and more importantly, to the community which includes over 150 schools and over 10,000 coaches and athletes. It's been a joy to serve with a bunch of young people on our staff who just love the Lord. They do.

Hope you might want to buy a ticket. We have a ton of coaches in the area who would love to be included. Or get a table for your friends or business and prepare to meet a ton of kids who just "loves his mama.' Don't we all? Well, if we don't get a chance to holler at you a lot this month, let us be the first to say "Happy Easter!" Hopefully, there may be plans to begin the weekend with FCA on Good Friday. If you can't, we understand. A good ole fashion prayer for FCA will do just fine. Just fine. See you at a game soon.
