ARE YOU PREPARED FOR THE AFFORDABLE CARE ACT?

About the individual shared responsibility payment

The individual shared responsibility provision of the health care law requires you and each member of your family to have qualifying health care coverage also know as minimum essential coverage, qualify for an exemption or make an individual shared responsibility payment when filing you federal income tax return. Most people have minimum essential coverage and will simply need to check a box on their tax return. Others will qualify for a health coverage exemption. Information about minimum essential coverage and exemptions is available online IRS.org.

Amount of payment

In general, the payment amount is either a percentage of your household income or a flat dollar amount, whichever is greater. You will owe 1/12th of the annual payment for each month you or your dependents do not have qualifying coverage and are not exempt. The annual payment amount for 2014 is the greater of:

- 1 percent of your household income that is above the tax return filing threshold for your filing status, such as married filing or jointly or single or
- Your family's flat dollar amount, which is $95 per adult and $47.50 per child under 18, limited to a maximum of $285.

Message From James Vacca NYC Councilman 13th District

DIFFICULT TIMES

With the murders of Officers Serrano and Liu, and the shooting of two police officers in the Fordham Road area this past Tuesday, we are reminded again of the dangers NYC police officers face every day. As your Councilman, I will do all possible to make sure my voice in the City Council is heard supporting strong law enforcement and opposing measures that may jeopardize our police and public safety.

Prior to the recent shooting incidents, I urged my colleagues to assess the impact of some of the legislation they introduced. For example, one bill states that a police officer must get permission from a suspect, on audio or in writing, before they can do a search. Such permission must be asked in the language the suspect speaks and if the suspect gives permission, it can retract it at any time. 23 out of 51 Council Members are co-sponsors of this legislation!

Politicians should not micro-manage the NYPD. Those of us in government have to act responsibly and realize that our actions have consequences. Certainly, police misconduct must be addressed. However, tying the hands of police officers doing their jobs is not the responsible way to go.
