LETTER FROM THE EDITOR

Every Gesture of Love is from the Heart

Celebrating everyday love

IT'S HOLDING the door open for the person behind you. It's sending a sweet text when they cross your mind. It's stopping by to say "hi" when they've had a bad day. Showing up and showing love is like medicine for our souls. It lets us dance, sing, laugh, and cry together. It lets us know that someone is saving us a seat at every table. We know that – while we may be off-key – there is someone to sing backup from the passenger seat. And when we have those really bad days, we know there is a shoulder waiting like a therapeutic tissue. These moments, while they may feel small, carry a heavy weight. It keeps the world from falling apart when it feels so fragile. It keeps our head above the water in the deepest, darkest oceans.

This issue of Good News is about celebrating our love. We're not just talking about romantic love, either. We're talking about the real love that can only come from the heart. Our community is full of actions that show love in every minute of every day. It can be as simple as a "Luv U" text or as kind as holding a door open.

We're proud to share stories of love to make the community a better place. GN

head-on

The Lovvorn family believes God has a plan.

THE RIVALRY of the hometown teams charges the Friday night air. The center snaps the football, and the quarterback slides the ball into the running back's hands, consistently moving the chains downfield and into the end zone. For 16 carries, No. 19 picks up yardage and charges head-on into his opponent. Cascade High School senior Sawyer Lovvorn rushed for 273 yards and six touchdowns on 16 carries in a 68-0 win and received The Tennessean Small Class Boys Athlete of the Week award in September 2023.

His football opponents aren't the only thing Sawyer's hit head-on.

On another September day in 2018, a simple river outing turned tragic for Sawyer and his friends, Marquis Wilson and Isah Alexander. Their leisurely day on the Tennessee River quickly became a nightmare as their innertube, pulled by a jet ski, collided with a concrete bridge support.

"I just remember crying out to God, saying, 'Lord, thank you for the 12 years I've seen,' because we know our kids are a blessing from God," said Sawyer's dad, Mike.

The collision injured Marquis, and Sawyer sustained severe injuries, including a cerebral spinal fluid leak, leading to a race against time for medical intervention. Isah jumped before the impact, swam to shore, climbed the rocky embankment, and flagged down a car whose driver called 911. Marquis went home from the hospital seven days later. In intensive care, Sawyer's recuperation hinged on carefully managing the healing of fractures and controlling the continuous fluid leak. Finally, after 17 challenging days, Sawyer returned home, scoring a hard-won touchdown in his recovery journey.

It's a score the Lovvorn family attributes to the hand of God.

"The way the community rallied around those boys, the things that happened behind the scenes, and the stories that came from it — it was horrible, but you see God's hand in the whole thing. Isah wasn't hurt, but he is the hero in the story because he was 13 years old, and he went up there and flagged somebody down. With all that happened, he didn't freeze up. He just did what needed to be done," said Sawyer's mom, Chastity.

"That was one of the incredible things about the accident — just the amount of prayer from our community. We felt those prayers. We know that God hears our prayer," Mike said.

Sawyer's brother, Sanders, wasn't with the family the day of the accident.

"I love my brother very much, and I always have. The accident made me realize just how much I loved him and would have missed him if he hadn't made it. Our relationship is even stronger now; he's my best friend," Sanders said.

Sawyer missed the 2018 football season but played the next season and each after. Also a baseball player, Sawyer missed most of his sophomore year of baseball with a torn UCL, the Tommy John ligament, in the fifth game of the season. Last summer, a Vanderbilt Children's Hospital doctor diagnosed him with supraventricular tachycardia (SVT), which is when the heart beats fast and is induced by adrenaline. An ablation corrected the SVT, and Sawyer hit the football field running.

The Lovvorns, a sports-loving family, have boldly weathered each medical issue, buoyed by their faith and the community's support.

Sawyer said, "One of the biggest things the accident and some of the other injuries taught me is that nothing in life is guaranteed. You can't take anything for granted. Every day, you have to make the decisions you know you need to make and that you know God wants you to make, and do it to the best of your ability because you don't know how much longer you have."

Although his life is packed with sports, Sawyer maintains a 4.0 grade point average. It's another side of the competitive coin. But as important as those things are, they're not everything.

▲ Sawyer and Chastity Lovvorn

▲ Sanders Lovvorn, Marquis Wilson, Isah Alexander, and Sawyer Lovvorn

"As much as I love playing football, baseball, or basketball, and as much as I love competing, I love making good grades. There are so many things I love to do. But at the end of the day, none of it really matters as much as having a relationship with my Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. I sometimes lose sight of that because it's hard when you're competing, and you love it so much," Sawyer said. "But it's so important to stay grounded in your faith and let that be the main goal, and then sports. It's just a blessing you get from God that you use to give glory back to Him. At the end of the day, have fun and play sports. Do your best at it, but as Colossians 3:23 says, 'Whatever you do, work heartily as to the Lord and not to men.' It's hard to make this the main focus, but I try to give glory back to God in everything, to know where it comes from, and try not to take the glory for myself because I know I don't deserve it."

SANDERS, CHASTITY, MIKE, AND SAWYER LOVVORN

Chastity said, “We just know God’s got a plan.”

Mike agrees. “The verse that comes to mind for us as a family is Romans 8:28. ‘And we know that all things work together for good to those that love God and are called according to His purpose.’ We know that everything we’ve been through hasn’t been good. But we look back on it now, and we see so many blessings — even how good things came from the bad times. That gives us even more faith in knowing that the creator of everything looks at us, and He sees and cares about us.”

The Lovvorn family faces life head-on, fortified by unwavering faith and a strong family bond. As they continue to lean on their belief that God has a plan, Sawyer’s unshakable spirit serves as a testament to the transformative power of faith and perseverance as he moves the chains further down the field of his journey into adulthood. He knows who’s making the calls! GN

No regrets

“Go for it all. There’s so much more for you to fulfill and accomplish.”

By Tina Neeley // Photography by Ashleigh Newnes

LINDSEY TRICE was stuck. Life as she knew it changed forever on Mother’s Day in 2018 when she returned home from church to find her father lifeless.

“I tried to resuscitate him. [I] tried to do all those things, but he was already cold. And so, as a daddy’s girl, as a girl that absolutely adored her father, my heart was broken — broken in more ways than one because I was unable to save my hero and broken because I was 29 years old at the time and just lost my father. It was rough,” said Trice.

A few years later, just as her grieving was entering a new stage, her beloved Grandmama was diagnosed with pancreatic cancer and was gone within a month. Trice was stunned.

“The hospice process and actually seeing her deteriorate in front of my eyes — those things took the breath out of me,” said Trice. “I understand from a spiritual aspect that death is a part of it, but it didn’t make it easier. And so, I felt like I was really just stuck.”

From a Facebook post by Trice

There comes a point on each of our journeys that we will experience some type of loss. It’s life, right!!!! But I can attest you will find you again. You will find the joy again. You will find your smile again. You will find your laugh again. You will find your passion again.

Trice wasn’t the only one stuck. Trice knew that her mother and her brother were grieving, too. Trying to be strong left her drained.

“We’ve been through this together. I was adamant about making it for my mother and my brother. I wanted them to be okay because I knew that what we lost was a big part, especially for my mother, who had been with that man for 40-plus years of her life. It was very hard to see her struggle. [It was] hard to watch.” Trice said.

Lindsey Trice

Trice struggled, too, but then something began to stir.

“It was like I was just going through the motions, just existing. I went through my dirty work and did grief therapy, all those things, but it was like a transition,” Trice said. “I think I finally got my breath back. I finally wanted to go on, continue to dream, and aspire to leave a lasting imprint. What can I do while I’m on this earth that’s gonna last a lifetime?”

From a Facebook post by Trice

When you lose someone you love, you lose a part of you. A part of you that you will never find again. Life will never be the same, but what I do know is there will come a time on your healing journey when you will find the things that make you happy again. Those things that you were once passionate about will give you joy again. You will smile again.

Trice had big hopes and dreams before the losses. As she began to sense grief loosening its grip on her plans, she saw things with new eyes.

Trice said, “Now, it’s bigger than me. If I can just continue the legacy of those who touched my heart dearly, like my father, whose life was cut short because of heart disease, or my grandmother with pancreatic cancer. It just came a point that was like, ‘You know what, I’m gonna live for them to smile down and say how pleased they were with the life that I continued even after their transition.’”

She continued, “Family is everything to me. My brother and I have truly been blessed with amazing parents who sacrificed a lot for us to be afforded the opportunities we have been blessed with. It’s my earnest desire to create a legacy, especially for my niece and nephews, who I absolutely adore.”

From a Facebook post by Trice

Let’s talk about finding your passion after loss. Yes, your journey will absolutely look different than mine. But I’m a testament that there will come a day — to be honest, an unexpected day when you will not only find yourself again but your passion to live life to the fullest again.

Even before she began to dream again and grasp her calling to honor their legacy, she saw God working, going ahead of her to make a way to heal and, through the process, encourage others.

“So I started putting feet to that, getting Lindsey back. God opened the door, even before my grandmother [passed], at Webb School, so I was able to pour into these kids as an assistant athletic director. I was at a place where my passion and purpose were. He was still using me even then, broken,” Trice said.

Her brokenness and vulnerability became her testimony and the pathway to healing.

From a Facebook post by Trice

“I sometimes find myself asking, ‘What would your daddy tell you from heaven? And more recently, what would Grandmama tell you? Live Lindsey!!! Go for it all. There’s so much left for you to fulfill and accomplish. Live with no regrets. Love until your last breath!!!!”

She discovered she could start right where she was.

“I felt like He was using my brokenness in my story to help mold these kids. It was bigger than athletics. It was me mentoring these kids from a place of brokenness,” she said. “I lived with the pain of feeling like I couldn’t help bring my daddy back to life, but if I can just help somebody else along the way. So, it gave me an opportunity. It gave me a purpose.”

From a Facebook post by Trice

Not sure who this is for, but 🥹

- Lindsey, 8/1/22, Facebook post

“When I made that post, I felt like there was a wind behind me. That wind was the witnesses that went before me. I knew people were cheering me on, like, ‘Lindsey, go on, and just see what the ends gonna be. This is bigger than you,’” Trice said. “You get a little winded, and sometimes it’s weird to have my daddy or grandma whisper, ‘You got this.’ They’re forever a part of my story. They’re the wind beneath my wings.” GN

Randy and Edwina Reynolds

Memories Multiplied

Reynolds family math is a treasured formula.

By Tina Neeley // Photography by Ashleigh Newnes

ONCE A week and on holidays, Randy and Edwina (“Wina”) Reynolds make room in their modest home. The goal: memories. The tables are set, and the family meal waits in the kitchen more patiently than Randy and Wina for their guests. Home is not rooms and walls but the unconditional love and unwavering support the family members find in each other. “Grammy! Grammy!” rings out, and family dinner night officially begins.

“It’s the best possible kind of chaos. They hit the door running, and their first words are, ‘What are we having for dinner? Can I get a snack? Where’s Peepaw?’” Wina said.

The best possible kind of chaos is made possible by Randy’s decision to attend a Shelbyville hairdresser beauty pageant in the late ‘70s, an annual event known for its beautiful contestants for many years. What better way for a single guy to spend a Saturday night?

Wina said, “His words were, ‘Where can you see more pretty girls than a pageant?’”

“When I walked out, he told one of his friends that he needed to get my number to ask me out.

I'm pretty sure it was the fake eyelashes that Donna Stearns, who owned Merle Norman, glued on me that attracted him."

"I didn't even know if she would go out with me. I was working at Uniroyal on third shift, 12 hours a day, six and seven days a week, so not much date time, but I made it work," Randy said.

She did and said, 'I do,' and two became four when their daughter, Jamie, and son, Kirk, were born. Despite their full-time jobs, the family bonded as their spare time filled up with sports and time at the lake. Like today, the calendar bulged with destinations, games, tournaments, camping, and time with Randy and Wina's parents. It's what they did, and it's what they do.

As Jamie and Kirk became parents, they began to understand the true meaning of family.

"When I think of the definition of family, I believe our family is a perfect example. Growing up, our parents and grandparents were always there for us," said Jamie.

"They didn't miss anything. They were very devoted to [everything] we wanted to do and did it with love and eagerness. That's what I value most about our family. We always have each other's backs in any stage of life, from growing up to becoming parents ourselves."

"The thing that stands out to me the most from my childhood and what I think back on when raising my kids," said Kirk, "is that my parents were always there in the middle of everything: fundraising, coaching, leading by example, and from the front. Whatever it took, they made it happen. I think it's equally as rare that each member of our family is also each other's best friend. That's something I'm most proud of."

Jamie said, "I have so many great childhood memories, but one of my most valued memories is when my dad and I got baptized together. You could always count on my mom to get us to church anytime the doors were opened, and I think that played a huge role in our lives and taught us true morals and values."

When the grandchildren came along, the love and the memories multiplied again.

"I just love watching them do anything and everything they love to do, whether it be sports, acting silly, dancing, laughing — whatever they love to do," said Wina. "I love collecting special treats for them, too."

Parenting is more stressful than grandparenting, as most grandparents know. But Randy and Wina made room in their stressful lives for their children, which is shared today with their grandchildren.

"You just don't seem to have as much time with your children when you're a father. That's the reason I coached Jamie in softball and Kirk in baseball and went to the lake on weekends when we weren't in a baseball or soccer tournament so that I could spend quality time with them," Randy said. "As their Peepaw, I have the most beautiful and athletic grandbabies you could wish for, with another one on the way. They will steal your heart. Grammy and I spoil them and send them home!"

What's the square root of Reynolds family math?

"When I think of my grandparents, I think of all the memories we made at their house, and I try to do the same for them," said Wina. "It was mainly around the table eating dinner or lunch, which is why it's so important for me because I come from a family of really good cooks. I guess our love language is food. I hope they always remember how much love I put into the food just for them. And I hope they remember this and pass it on to their children."

The thread of faith is woven throughout the family's story, a golden cord in a tapestry of love.

Wina said, "Both of my children and three of my grandchildren have been baptized. My hope is that they all know that “My hope is that they all know that God and Jesus love them, know where they came from, and know who they go to when they have troubles.”

God and Jesus love them, know where they came from, and know who they go to when they have troubles. We talk a lot about prayer around here, so I hope they keep the faith instilled in them for the rest of their lives.”

As they leave family dinner each week, one by one, they stop to hug and kiss Grammy goodbye. They take the love of family wherever they go, drawing on it when needed, like a sizeable bank account left by a dear relative, and depositing more into it with every breath.

Randy said, “We raised a beautiful family together that I wouldn’t trade for anything in the world. To all my babies, Peepaw loves you!” GN

Turtle Cheesecake

Submitted by Tammie Thorpe

1 1/2 c. chocolate wafer cookies, crushed
3 T. butter, melted
2 pkgs. cream cheese, 8 oz., softened
1/2 c. sugar
1 t. vanilla
2 eggs, room temperature
1/2 c. chocolate chips
1/2 c. pecans, chopped
1/2 c. caramel ice cream topping

In a medium mixing bowl, mix wafers and butter. Press into the bottom of a 9" pie pan. In a large mixing bowl, stir cream cheese until smooth. Stir in sugar and vanilla. Add eggs one at a time. Mix until batter is smooth. Pour mix into pie crust. Bake at 325° for 40 minutes or until slightly brown. Let cheesecake cool. While cake is baking, combine chocolate chips, pecans, and caramel topping in a medium bowl. When cake has baked, gently spread mixture over top of cake. Place in refrigerator until cool.

Death by Chocolate

Submitted by Lisa Scott

2 pkgs. chocolate mousse mix
1 lg. pkg. whipped topping
1 pan baked brownies
1/4 c. Kahlua®
8 Heath® bars, crushed
1 c. pecans, chopped

Prepare chocolate mousse as directed. Fold whipped topping into mousse and set aside. Crumble 1/2 of the brownies into a 9x13 baking dish. Sprinkle Kahlua® over brownies. Sprinkle 1/2 of the Heath® bars and the pecans over the brownies. Spread 1/2 chocolate mousse on top. Layer remaining brownies, Heath® bars, and mousse. Chill before serving.

The Ultimate Chocolate Chip Cookies

Submitted by Rose Hamner

1 1/2 c. shortening
2 1/2 c. brown sugar
4 T. milk
2 t. vanilla
2 eggs
3 1/2 c. AP flour
2 t. salt
1 1/2 t. baking soda
1 bag chocolate chips
2 c. pecan pieces

In a large mixing bowl, beat shortening and brown sugar. Add milk, vanilla, and eggs. In a medium mixing bowl, sift together flour, salt, and baking soda. Add to the creamed mixture. Stir in chocolate chips and pecan pieces. Drop by spoonfuls onto a greased cookie sheet. Bake at 350° for 8-10 minutes.

Tiny Temptations with MAJOR FLAVOR

From time to time, Nenitas Delicias pops up throughout town and proves that good things come in small packages.

Good News is coming to dinner!

We will feature a local food critic's thoughts as he dines in Bedford County. This month Colby Prince visited Nenitas Delicias.

Nenitas Delicias

1014 Madison St.
Shelbyville, TN

Follow their Facebook by searching for Los Hermanos Mexican Grill #4

I'VE KEPT my eyes on Nenitas Delicias for quite a while now and was lucky enough to catch them for lunch one day. The star of my visit was undoubtedly the miniature pancakes adorned with brownie bits, drizzled with rich chocolate syrup, and crowned with velvety whipped cream. These bite-sized wonders redefine indulgence, merging the comforting familiarity of pancakes with the decadence of brownies. The mixture of textures, from the fluffy pancakes to the fudgy brownie bits, created a symphony in my mouth. I know they say to save dessert for last, but I had to be a rule-breaker for the mini pancakes.

The Pink Drink, a refreshing Strawberry Agua Fresca, accompanied this sweet symphony. Vibrant and quenching, this concoction perfectly complemented the richness of the pancakes. The taste was reminiscent of a strawberry milkshake but in the form of a drink. The natural sweetness of ripe strawberries blended seamlessly and created a beverage that embodied the essence of a summer day in every sip.

Having had enough sweets, I needed something more savory for the perfect balance. I ventured further into Nenitas Delicias' diverse menu and tried the chicken street tacos. A nod to authentic street food, these tacos showcased succulent and well-seasoned chicken nestled in warm tortillas. The combination of flavors from the tender chicken, fresh cheese topping, a squeeze of lime, and a big dip in spicy sauce made each taco a savory masterpiece.

Nenitas Delicias is a haven for those seeking a fresh, new experience. From the delightful miniature pancakes to the refreshing allure of strawberry agua fresca and the savory perfection of chicken street tacos, every dish is a testament to the artistry and passion that defines this gem of a food truck here in Shelbyville. Prepare to be enchanted by the extraordinary world of flavors that Nenitas Delicias unfolds with each meticulously crafted bite. GN

From the Heart

THE CONNECTION between humans — we call it love — is a profoundly beautiful thing. Our Creator built us to have different types of love. The Greek words for the three types are eros, agape, and philio.

Eros is the passionate and romantic love we often think of when picturing two people sharing an intimate bond. It's full of emotion, desire, and longing, and people find it every day.

Agape love is a love that is unconditional and selfless. It's love without expectation or demand, often seen among family members and friends who care deeply for one another.

Philio love is the love of friendship and community. It's about shared experiences and mutual understanding. We often see this type of love in close-knit groups of people who have a deep connection — just like Shelbyville.

No matter what type of love you experience, it's an essential part of the human experience. Love and connection bring us closer together, allowing us to share life's highs and lows with those we care about most. Good News is happy to share these one-of-a-kind stories from the heart. GN

Ed and Joan Gray

Chapters From a Life of Love

Ed and Joan Gray fill their life with family, education, and travel.

By Tina Neeley

FORTY YEARS ago, Ed and Joan Gray signed up for the journey of a lifetime. From navigating the early challenges of blending families to exploring the world of education and later venturing on global travels, the Grays have covered the immeasurable territory of their lives, turning every chapter into a captivating tale of shared experiences and boundless love. They prioritize making memories together and with their ever-growing family, following an itinerary of their passion for life.

With four adult children, 10 grandchildren, four of whom are married, and six great-grandchildren with the seventh on the way, to say the Grays have a large family is like saying the Grand Canyon is just a simple crack in the earth's crust. They happily shuttle their grands and great-grands every chance they get, and their home is the weekend family destination.

"Our family means so much to us," said Joan. "Our house is large, and we have a swimming pool and 15 acres, so it's where everybody comes on weekends. Much of the time, we'll have 20 to 30 children and adults, or sometimes, just the younger kids will be here swimming. We have almost all of our family celebrations here.

Education is also an important factor in Ed and Joan's lives. So much so that they made it their mutual lifetime careers, beginning as teachers and then as educational administrators. Joan was an English teacher for 35 years and then director of technology and secondary instructional supervisor for 10 years before retirement. Ed progressed from teacher to principal, to supervisor, to assistant superintendent, and finally to superintendent of Bedford County Schools. Both retired in 2011 with 45 years of experience each, and Joan went on to work part-time as executive director of the Tennessee Educational Technology Association until 2020.

Ed and Joan loved working with students and fellow teachers. Joan reflects, “When Ed was principal at Community, a K-12 school in the same building, he could walk down the halls and call almost every student by name. The little kindergarten students would come up to him, hug him, and grab his leg in the hall. He’s a very laid-back person — a good listener and a caring educator. Ed was Mike Bone’s assistant superintendent, and they were a great team that did so much for education in Bedford County together. Learning Way, Harris, and Community High School were built while they were there, and Central High School was renovated. When Mike retired, Ed carried on the traditions that together they had set forth. Ed and Mike were a powerful tag team as superintendents of Bedford County Schools.”

Ed said, “Joan taught in three different school systems: Marshall County, Giles County, and Bedford County. She was selected as Teacher of the Year for the school system in all three counties.”

While serving as chairman of the State Teachers’ Study Council, Joan worked for a year with Lamar Alexander and his Career Ladder System in the mid-1980s and traveled the country that year, speaking to other states about the innovations in education in Tennessee.

Retirement made room for travel in the lives of both Ed and Joan. A map of the world on their wall pinpoints the destinations that have been the settings for this chapter of their lives. The stories and books Joan taught for so many years in her English classroom come to life as they visit places worldwide.

“I love books. I was a senior English teacher, so I had taught British literature, and one of the first places we went after retirement was England. We visited Canterbury, the setting for Chaucer’s works, and Exeter, where King Arthur was supposedly buried, and the Lake District, where Wordsworth lived at Grassmere and wrote so many of his poems and where Beatrice Potter wrote her children’s books, which included “The Tales of Peter Rabbit.” Traveling there was just wonderful because I had taught this literature for 35 years,” said Joan.

They’ve explored the world through different avenues.

“We love to travel, and we’ve traveled basically all over the world. We’ve taken cruises and tours, and we’ve gone on our own,” said Joan. “The only areas we have

“We have been fortunate to have had the opportunities we have had in our 80 years of life.”

- Ed Gray

not traveled are in the Far East — Japan, China, Vietnam, etc.”

Ed expresses that he and Joan are very blessed still to have each other and such a loving family. “We have been fortunate to have had the opportunities we have had in our 80 years of life.”

While they’ve covered a lot of ground, there’s still more to be experienced. Although Ed has had several health situations that have slowed them down some, they are still traveling and enjoying the places they visit. They recently returned from trips to the Bahamas and the Northwest region of the United States, and they frequently spend time on the Alabama coast.

Their lives are a travel memoir — a 40-year adventure fueled by their love for each other, their family, education, and exploration. The blank pages are yet to be filled with more experienced and treasured moments. With a destination of both home and the world, their hearts are united, stitched together with the love of family.

That’s the journey of a lifetime. GN

Mary Pitner

We are the Pitners

Continuing a legacy of love.

By Tina Neeley
Photography by Ashleigh Newnes

LIFE WITHOUT someone who's always been there is not just hard. "It's just weird. That's the only word I can say when people ask me about it. It's just the strangest thing," said Mary Pitner.

This 'thing' is her world without her husband, Allen Pitner, a presence in her life since second grade. They went to elementary, junior high, and high school together. They attended Sunday school together and were both at the University of Tennessee. However, Mary transferred back to Middle Tennessee State University.

"We've always been friends. We'd never dated, but we were always friends," she said.

Mary's decision to accept a position as a nanny to the children of then-Senator Al Gore and his wife, Tipper, prompted a move to Washington, D.C., and suddenly Allen was considering life without someone who'd always been there.

"Allen contacted me and said it was almost like I'd always been there, but then I wasn't going to be there. So we got together before I left and spent some time together, then went out to dinner and just talked," Mary said. "He proposed to me in Washington one week, and we got married the next November. We've been together since then until he went for a walk last Aug. 1."

Mary glimpsed the passing flare of orange from the UT shirt he always wore on their walks, signaling his return, but decided to finish a TV show on their back porch. When she went inside, she found him looking as he had countless times, asleep with his arm on the back of the couch. But unlike those countless times, he didn't stir when she

“I’m slowly learning that grief changes you, and I want to be sure it changes me in a positive way.”

- Mary Pitner

tried to wake him. And just like that, the one who’d always been there was gone.

Mary said, “Every single day, he did something nice for me. I knew he did those things for me, but until he was not here anymore, I truly did not realize everything he did for me. And I hope he knows how grateful I am for that. I think he does.”

First her friend, then her partner — they were the Pitners. They added their children, Mike and Martha, and the Pitners grew to four.

“It was always, ‘Let’s go to the Pitners,’ or ‘The Pitners are coming.’ If we had friends over, it was for Pitner parties. People would congregate with us. I miss that. I’ve not just lost my partner, but my friend,” she said.

It’s a loss felt by Allen’s family, friends, and the community he served all his life.

From his first job in civil engineering in Nashville to returning home to help in the family business, Economy Pen & Pencil Company, to his careers in community service as the chief executive officer of the Shelbyville-Bedford County Chamber of Commerce and membership director for the South Central Tennessee Tourism Association, Allen put others ahead of himself in all he did.

“I never saw him do anything self-serving, ever. He wanted to do all he could to make his community better. That’s just what he did and what we did as a couple, and that’s how we raised our children. Your skin color, religion, ethnicity — none of that mattered to Allen, and it didn’t matter to me. Both of our parents brought us up that way. If I die right now, I will be the most proud [of successfully teaching] our children they need to give back, help others, and be accepting of everyone.”

The Pitners will forever cherish Big Al’s memory, carrying him along on family vacations, through their holidays, celebrations, and Pitner parties. They will honor him by continuing to care for others in their communities, making the most of opportunities to give back on his birthday and holidays.

And of all things, Mary does not want to miss the good God brings into her life as she grieves.

“I’m slowly learning that grief changes you, and I want to be sure it changes me in a positive way. You always hear it’s different for everybody, and oh my goodness, it is different for everybody because everybody’s lost a different person in a different kind of relationship. However you grieve is right for you. Grief is such a big thing that we don’t like to talk about because it’s not pleasant,” she said. “But for me, Allen’s death, although it’s an awful, terrible thing, and he’s going to be missed, makes my family realize and appreciate him for everything he did for us. It makes my friends realize and appreciate everything that he did. And I hope our community will look back and see how he made Shelbyville a better place.”

Count your blessings as you recognize that life is not weird today because the person who’s always been there is still here. Make life better for another person. Tell them you’re with the Pitners. GN

Robert and Tabby Stem

From Reel to Reality

Robert and Tabby Stem know they have something special.

By Tina Neeley

Photography by Ashleigh Newnes

SOME BELIEVE it doesn't exist; others think it might but believe they'll never experience it. Some believe it exists only in Hallmark movies and chick-lit novels. You know how it goes.

Curled up on the couch with a crackling fire under your favorite fuzzy throw, the screen flickers, casting a glow on Ben & Jerry's chocolate therapy. You're hoping they'll get together as they navigate emotions that have caught them off-guard. They connect through their shared values and dreams, but just as things start falling into place, conflicts arise, leaving the future of their relationship hanging in uncertainty. The thrill of hope and the sweetness of a happy ending leave you with a satisfied smile and a warm feeling in your heart.

But this isn't a movie; it's Robert and Tabby Stem's story, and many call it what it is — true love. Like the Hallmark movies, theirs is a heartwarming story centered around romance and family. Unlike those movies, grief and loss are real, and a series of events fill their days that continuously prove how they complete one another.

Their story opens in Shelbyville with Robert and Tabby working in the Big Springs Shopping Center businesses in the late '90s. When time allowed and their paths crossed, they forged a friendship over shared interests, swapping life updates and stories along the way.

Tabby played the role of the hardworking protagonist, opening her own business in June 2000. The odds were stacked higher than the reams of paper in The Express supply room against the single mom of three and her business that offered copy and fax services to the general public. Soon, Robert and Tabby's life circumstances changed, and romance sparked, complementing their solid friendship. Marriage followed, and the change in the lives of Tabby and her three children was immediate and overwhelmingly positive.

"When we married in May of 2003, it was the happiest day of our lives. And I mean all of our lives. Brock and Robert connected instantly through their love of music. Lauren and Paisley were intrigued but cautious. Robert came into our family amid chaos and settled the storm. We were all so happy," said Tabby.

In cinematic timing, everything changed. “Brock wrote a poem about how Robert completed all of us in December 2003,” she said. “Little did we know that in January of 2004, we would lose our precious Brock forever in a snow skiing youth trip with a local church. On that day and every day since, Robert has literally carried us and held us up as a family.”

Being present for Tabby and the girls is as natural as breathing for Robert. He said, “It goes back to my childhood. I want to give them what I didn’t have, and that’s just unconditional love.”

Some feared the worst for the couple, pointing out that many marriages collapse around the loss of a child. Her business was equally vulnerable.

“Robert supported me through everything. It was sketchy as to whether I would make it through Brock’s death as a fairly new business owner, but with the support of family and a very thoughtful banker who gave me a few months to get back on my feet, we survived and even thrived,” Tabby said.

She was thriving like many lead characters in the movies we love, pulled in too many directions. With Robert’s blessing, Tabby purchased a gym and became a fitness instructor, was active in local theatre productions both on stage and behind the curtain, and held positions on various boards, all fueled by her commitment to giving her best to her community and a desire to challenge herself.

She sold the gym but continued to lead fitness classes at the Shelbyville Recreation Center. Preparation for the one-hour class on top of work at The Express and her other outside activities filled most of her waking hours. Robert, her true prince charming, worked quietly beside her and held down the fort with family. He was happy for every minute he spent with her but longed for more.

Tabby said, “I’m so guilty of doing things just because I can or because someone asked me to. Maybe I always felt like I had to prove that I was better than what people thought of me. But I just kept on [saying yes], and all of a sudden, Robert said, ‘I remember when it was just us working and doing everything together. I want my wife back.’ And it hit me like, ‘What am I doing?’ So after that, I pulled back, and now we’re focusing solely on business and each other.”

Not everyone understands.

Robert said, “There have been customers who come in and ask, ‘How do you work together every day?’ For me, there’s no other place I’d rather be. I want to be by her side every day. Tabby is not just my wife; she’s my best friend. She’s everything. I just want to be with her all the time.”

“I don’t think I realized how much time I was taking away from him. He’s always been there, making me feel safe and secure. He wanted to see me do all the things I always wanted to do,” Tabby said. ‘He wants to see me happy. But maybe that wasn’t what was truly making me happy. I was searching, doing things I really loved, but it was just too much.”

It’s a love that’s still breathtaking.

“I think my favorite thing about him is his kindness and the way he loves me. That love is like nothing I’ve ever experienced before,” she said. “He looks like a tough guy, but he’s the most gentle, kind, loving man I have ever met in my whole life.”

And Robert’s favorite thing about Tabby? “She constantly wants to see other people happy, and I love that about her,” he said.

They know their story is unique.

“We don’t take this love for granted; we know this is special, and we’re lucky. A lot of people don’t have this,” said Tabby. GN

“I could live in my car with my wife — sleep in the car, eat in the car, day in and day out. As long as I have her by my side, that’s all that matters.”

How the Good News Magic Happens: From Submission to Print

How does a story get into Good News Magazine?

Nominate someone to be featured in Good News Magazine.

Since Good News launched, we have received hundreds of nominations for people to be covered. Ever wondered how a story finds its way into the pages of our magazine? Well, the answer is simple: it's all thanks to you! Not only are the stories about local people, but they come from other local people, too! Here's a glimpse into the journey of how stories come alive in Good News Magazine.

Step 1: The submission process: goodnewsmags.com

We believe that everyone has a story worth sharing, and we rely on our readers to help us discover these extraordinary individuals. Submissions are made through our website and include the following details:

- A nominee's name
- Contact information (phone and email)
- The reason for the submission, along with why they qualify as a "Good News" story. This may include their contributions to the community, impactful deeds, family life, occupation, and more.
- We're not looking for you to write the story or find a superstar. We believe everyone has a story, and we only need relevant information. Our writers will do the rest!

Step 2: Selection and theme assignment

We tell stories about local people and what they are doing to make a difference. We have told stories about charities, medical staff, volunteers, school staff, and your next-door neighbor. Again, everyone has a story. While we feature six remarkable individuals in each issue, keep in mind that our production schedule is planned months in advance. So, if someone isn't featured in the upcoming issue, there's still a chance they'll be highlighted in the future. We keep all submissions on file for potential use.

Step 3: Interviews and photo shoots

Once a story is selected, our talented writers and photographers swing into action. We continue to be inspired by the stories submitted to us, and we complete the interviews and photo shoots several months before the issue goes to print. Our writers may conduct interviews via phone or video chat, while others prefer in-person meetings with the individuals behind the stories.

What's next in Good News Magazine?

Currently, our dedicated team of magazine writers and editors is hard at work crafting stories under themes like "Charity Spotlight," "The Learning Curve," and "Shop Local." We are excited to announce the next theme needing story submissions is "Independence."

What we seek in Independence stories:

We are looking for local veterans in our community who are willing to share their stories. Do you know a veteran in your community who faced and overcame challenges? Or veterans who now use their experience to assist others? Or, you might know of charities led by veterans that positively impact the community. We're looking to highlight such veterans and their inspiring stories in our upcoming Independence issue.

Do you know someone who deserves to be in Good News Magazine?

Let us know with a submission at www.GoodNewsMags.com or scan the QR code. Share your stories with us, and let's continue spreading the Good News together.
