Voter

Brunswick County, it is time we begin to educate our people on the new voter system. That is, if the courts don't overturn it, we will have to use it in order to vote in the next elections. I find that this new ballot will be confusing and misleading for a lot of people. We need to make sure the elderly, sick, and uneducated become aware of this system and all their rights, as far as getting help with their ballot when they vote. It is a shame and disgrace that, in a free country, we have people who would restrict people from voting. In a free society, we find ourselves losing some of our civil rights, such as those provided in the Racial Justice Act, on a daily basis.

We must come out of this storm, walking forward, with no backward moves. There

BLADENBORO

New questions in Lennon Lacy case

BY CASH MICHAELS
OF THE WILMINGTON JOURNAL

There are new questions being raised publicly in the August 2014 hanging death of Lennon Lacy, a 17-year-old Bladenboro teenager, as the Federal Bureau of Investigation continues its probe into the matter.

Did a white male that Lacy was in a fight with months earlier for allegedly stealing Lennon's phone follow through with his alleged threat to "kill and hang" Lacy?

That person reportedly was released from jail three weeks before Lacy's death.

Was Lacy targeted because he was in an interracial relationship with a 31-year-old white divorcee who had reportedly was also seeing other men?

Those questions were posed by the ESPN investigative series "Outside the Lines" (OTL) in a half-hour segment which aired nationally Sunday morning. While the FBI remains tight-lipped about what its investigation has determined so far, the new questions and revelations deepen the mystery surrounding the death of the promising young athlete in the small Bladen County town of less than 2000, where only 20 percent of the population is black.

Lennon Lacy was a linebacker for West Bladenboro High School's football team. The season home opening game was Friday, August 29 - the very day that Lacy's body was found hanging from a swingset in a predominately white trailer park.

A week later, the medical examiner's report cited "suicide" as the cause of death. SBI and Bladenboro police believed that Lennon hung himself because he was depressed over the recent death of a relative.

But Claudia Lacy vehemently disagreed, saying her son may have been naturally saddened, but not depressed to the point of suicide. Besides, he was excited about appearing in his school's home opening football game, and had been busily preparing for it.

He would not have killed himself given those circumstances, she maintained.

As has been reported before, when Lennon's body was found hanging from the swing set, the white sneakers with no laces on his feet were not his, evidenced by the fact that they were two sizes too small. The brand new Air Jordan sneakers he had on the day before were missing.

Also, Lennon Lacy stood five feet, nine inches tall, but the top bar of the swing set in the mobile home trailer park where he was found was seven feet off

City Freedom Walk, Plaza and Park honor Jervays

CONTRIBUTING WRITER

"To create goodwill between the races and work for the advancement of our community and nation,"-Excerpt from Tom Jervay's weekly 1940s editorial page

The Jervay's Cape Fear Journal editorial page standard format listed a variety of municipal needs that could promote better living for all people. The statements in, "Our Program", could be labeled as visionary.

-Improved paving of streets in those sections by Negroes.

-Obtain better lighting...especially on those streets around Williston School.

-Playgrounds in the north and south sides of the city.

-Naturally approachable beach front for members of our race.

-A large hospital to replace Community Hospital.

-Construction of a road to Seabreeze connecting with Carolina Beach.

-Improved library facilities.

Through the 1940s standard weekly listing was longer; and it continued to grow, the purpose was to advance basic human rights; city and county progress.

A 1305 North Fourth St. Thomas and Willie E. Jervay Freedom Walk, Plaza and Park were officially named and plagued Friday, March 20. Members of the City of Wilmington Commission on African-American History were flanked by administrative staff and elected officials to honor the works of the region's late power couple of journalism.

Signage now marks a broad walkway and meditation style green space adjacent to the City's 1898

Memorial Grounds. Commission Chairman, Atiba Johnson, City Councilman Earl Sheridan, and Mayor Bill Saffo emphasized sustained efforts to honor citizens that helped to shape cultural histories and Port City progress decades ago.

Jervay connections to late Twentieth Century events were emphasized by a pardoned Wilmington Ten survivor, the Rev. Dr. Ben Chavis His 1970s mentor and fellow community organizer; the Rev. Kojo Nantambu also attended and graciously thanked City officials and family members for the living memorial.

It was Tom Jervay's timely communication with the Associated press that propelled a series of local race related incidents and arrests into the national news spotlight. The publishers paid a high price for advocating a fair trial for that group of ten citizen activists.

Their newspaper, then named The Wilmington Journal, a historic business with upstairs residence, and extensive collection storage was partially destroyed by a bomb. The Jervays adjusted through adversity and continued publication based on a motto to report the news without fear of favor: His wife and partner, Willie was referred to as a strong devoted foot soldier by area residents.

Personal boldness complemented by charitable deeds and civic organizing were attributes that their daughter and business heir, Mary Alice Thatch spoke of prior to the unveiling of the standing plaque signage.

"Daddy loved Wilmington and was very grateful for his success and attributed that to the people of Wilmington," she said.

"So today I can truly say, "Thank you," and I know he and mama are in heaven smiling and very thankful for this honor."

Tom Jervay, Sr. passed away in 1993. His wife continued publishing The Wilmington Journal with the assistance of family. She died in 2012. Two children Tom Jr., and Katherine "Kitty" Jervay Tate are also deceased.

TATA BLASTS OBAMA, CALLS CRITIC A "HACK"

the ground. Authorities as of yet have not explained how he could have hung himself with two belts (that were not his, says his mother) without stepping up onto something to do it, something that was not there when he was discovered the morning of August 29th.

More troubling, local authorities did not want an autopsy to be performed, and no crime scene pictures were taken because the police photographer was off on another assignment.

As far as Claudia Lacy was concerned, state and local authorities were "too quick" to label her son's death a suicide, and as far as she's concerned, a thorough investigation into all aspects of the case had not been done.

One of those aspects involves Michelle Brimhall, the 32-year-old white mother who Lennon had been dating, to the because he was in Chicago promoting a new book. Last week Tata, a retired US Army brigadier general, appeared on Fox News to criticize Pres. Obama's nuclear negotiations with Iran. When a Democratic activist tweeted that Tata should have made the appearance, the NC DOT secretary tweeted back, calling him a "radical left pol hack." Tata used to appear frequently on Fox News to criticize Obama prior to coming to North Carolina to run chagrin of his family, and apparently other people in the small town.

As recently as Tuesday of this week, Brimhall had a giant picture of Lennon Lacy headlining her Facebook page, which lists her as being from Bement, Illinois, currently attending Bladen Community College, living in Bladenboro and having one daughter who apparently still lives in Bement.

"Outside the Lines" asked Brimhall if Lennon's death had anything to do with the fact that they were dating.

"I don't believe so," she replied. Brimhall acknowledged that Lennon's family "didn't approve", but they didn't try to stop the relationship.

Months earlier, Brimhall was forced to move from the white couple's house she had been staying at since she had moved to Bladenboro because they didn't approve of her dating the black teenager, the ESPN program alleged. She got her own apartment in the same

WAKE COMMISSIONERS WANT TO SURVEY CITIZENS BEFORE LAW CHANGES DISTRICT
[RALEIGH] The Republican majority in NC Senate passed a measure recently changing the voting districts of both the Wake County Commission Board and the Greensboro City Council. Democrats say the measure is purely political to ensure that Republicans dominate both boards in future elections. The members of the Wake Commission Board - which became all Democrats when four Republicans were swept out last November - now wants to study the county's voting districts before the state House ratifies the measure. The board is forming a citizens committee from across the county to gain feedback on how well all parts of the county are represented. The measure, if not passed by the House, would change the Wake Board from seven members to nine, diluting the number of members elected from in an around Raleigh.

SENATE BILL WOULD END RELIGIOUS EXEMPTIONS FOR CHILD VACCINATIONS
[RALEIGH] Under a new Senate bill introduced last week, parents in North Carolina could no longer claim a religious exemption from having their child vaccinated against diseases. The bill comes amid reports children throughout the nation coming down with various contagious infections like influenza. Critics say the state has no business overruling the religious objections of parents to vaccinations. Supporters say not making vaccinations mandatory puts all children at risk.

Our Voice

U.S. Criminal Justice system needs urgent reform

Benjamin
Chavis Jr.

I know from firsthand experience that the "criminal justice system" today in the United States is in serious and urgent need of reform, repair and restructuring. Millions of families have been devastated by the "over-criminalization" of people in America. Black American families in particular have suffered and continue to suffer disproportionately as a result of an unjust system of justice.

When I was unjustly incarcerated in the 1970s as member of the famed Wilmington Ten civil rights case, I personally witnessed how the massive warehousing of prison inmates in overcrowded prison cells led to unspeakable dehumanization and self-destruction. In fact, the inhumanity and senselessness of the prison system itself directly contributed to the increased in violence and prison recidivism.

Forty-five years ago, the myriad of problems concerning the nation's courts and prison systems was not seen as a national priority. Today, however, the dysfunction of the criminal justice system is not only a matter of national and global disgrace, it has also now become a multi-billion dollar counterproductive albatross around the neck of the nation.

According to a fact sheet by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), during the last four decades the prison population in the U.S. "quadrupled-from roughly 500,000 to 2.3 million people." There are nearly a million Black Americans in jails and prisons across the country.

The NAACP has identified the following other racial disparities in U.S. incarceration:

African Americans are incarcerated at nearly six times the rate of Whites;

Together, African American and Hispanics comprised 58 percent of all prisoners in 2008, even though African Americans and Hispanics make up approximately one quarter of the U.S. population;

According to a November 2007 report titled, "Unlocking America," if African American and Hispanics were incarcerated at the same rates of Whites, today's prison and jail populations would decline by approximately 50 percent;

One in six Black men had been incarcerated as of 2001. If current trends continue, one in three Black males born today can expect to spend time in prison during his lifetime

1 in 100 African American women are in prison

Nationwide, African-Americans represent 26 percent of juvenile arrests, 44 percent of youth who are detained, 46 percent of the youth who are judicially waived to criminal court, and 58 percent of the youth admitted to state prisons (Center on Juvenile and Criminal Justice).

The recent public outcries about allegations of police brutality, prosecutorial misconduct, and unfair targeting of judicial sanctions based on race and socioeconomic status are all symptoms of a much border and larger systemic problem.

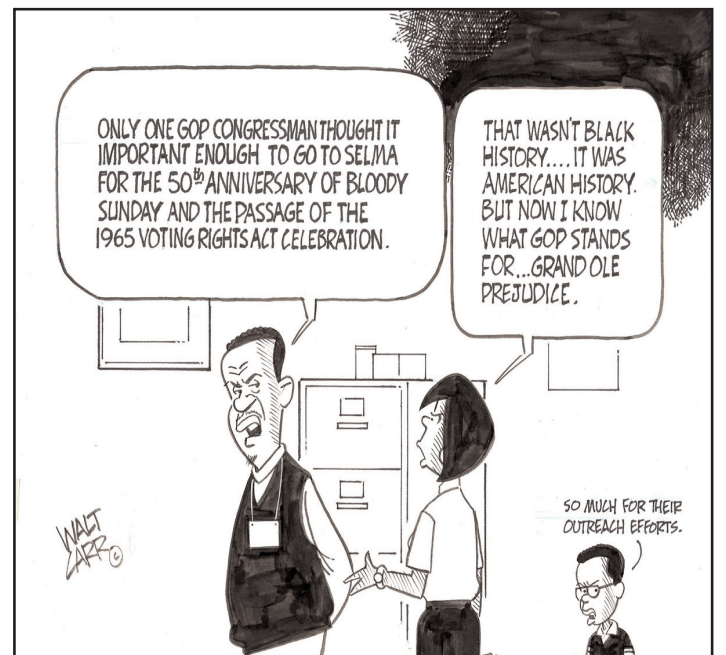

The problems of inequalities within the criminal justice system are structural and institutional. While the U.S. is only 5 percent of the world's population, 25 percent of the world's prisoners are being held in the U.S.

Yet, the calls for reform of the criminal justice system are not revolutionary or misplaced. Both conservatives and liberals seem to agree that some fundamental changes need to be put in place when it comes to the nation's courts, sentencing, jails and prisons. What is missing is a sense of urgency to get reform actions and policies established. Every day and every hour Black America is negatively impacted by the criminal justice system.

The Pew Charitable Trust has a study that documents the correlation between mass incarceration and the persistence of poverty in the U.S. There is no question that in the Black American community the lingering negative effects of imprisonment and poverty are closely related. Similarly a revealing Villanova University study on poverty and criminal justice found that "had mass incarceration not occurred, poverty would have decreased by more than 20 percent..... several million fewer people would have been in poverty in recent years."

We all should find ways and means to tackle the reformation of the criminal justice system as a top priority. It is urgent and it is long overdue. So many lives and so many families are at risk. If we do not assert the responsibility to demand change and reform of a system that continues to brutalize and harm our families and communities, then we will not be our sisters and brothers keepers as we should.

Chavis, Jr. is the President and CEO of the National Newspaper Publishers Association (NNPA) and can be reached for national advertisement sales and partnership proposals at: drbchavis@nnpa.org; and for lectures and other professional consultations at: <http://drbenjaminfchavisjr.wix.com/drbfj>.

Matters of Opinion

Why I didn't wear green on St. Patrick's Day

Bill
Fletcher

St. Patrick's Day has its rituals, but one that is not considered is any discussion of race.

Having grown up in the Northeast, I am used to the St. Patrick's Day parades, the celebration of Ireland, and, sometimes, the demand for a united Ireland. What is generally missing from discussions during this time period is anything having to do with race. Yet race is a central factor for both Ireland and, ironically, Irish Americans.

The manner in which we understand "race" today is directly related to the English conquest of Ireland in the 1500s. The English introduced a form of oppression of the indigenous people that ended up being very effective. They expropriated their lands, crushed their religion, totally eliminated their ruling class, and instituted a form of colonial rule through which the native Irish were defined in law and custom as inferior. The English defined themselves as a superior "race" compared with the indigenous Irish. And they proceeded to keep Ireland as a colony until the 1920s, and have kept the northern part of Ireland (the six counties) colonized to this day.

In order to guarantee their domination of Ireland, the English sent in settlers from England, Scotland and Wales, giving them the best land and privileging them over the native Irish. The settlers, whether rich or poor, in a pattern that became familiar in other parts of the world as colonialism spread, were always in a superior position to the native Irish. For all intents and purposes, the Irish had no rights that the settlers were bound to respect.

Fleeing English oppression and poverty, thousands of Irish set out for other parts of the world. When they first came to North America, while the British still occupied what is now the U.S.A. and into the mid-1800s, the Irish were treated as something other than what we would today call "White." The real White people were English, French, Germans, Nordics, but not the Irish.

The Irish periodically joined hands with Africans and Native Americans in fighting injustice, such as in the famous 1741 slave insurrection conspiracy in New York. Yet, by the middle of the 1800s, the Irish found themselves in the process of becoming "White" as the larger society needed more settlers in order to ensure the success of the process of the domination of North America.

Thus, the irony is that Irish fled an oppressive system that defined them as an inferior "race" - despite no difference in color from the oppressors - only to enter into a system where they were encouraged to abandon other victims of racial oppression - such as Africans, Native Americans, Mexicans, and Asians - in favor of becoming loyal "White people."

Here is the other irony: the indigenous Irish (Catholics) of Northern Ireland remain dominated by the British and their Loyalist allies. The Irish (Catholics) continue to perceive themselves to be victims of what they describe as "anti-Irish racism." Yet, this matter of racism, whether "anti-Irish" or anti-black, rarely enters into discussions among Irish Americans, whether on St. Patrick's Day or any of the other 364 days of the year.

"Empire" shows that Black dollars matter

According to a Nielsen consumer report, African Americans are voracious consumers of media, watching 37 percent more television than any other slice of American demography. While that's not new news, it is disturbing that we don't completely understand the connection between our TV consumption and the huge profits generated by our connection to television.

Ron
Busby, Sr.

To be fair, some TV programming can actually be beneficial. The recent coverage of the 50th anniversary of "Bloody Sunday" opened the eyes of generations of Americans who were unaware of the brutality of racial oppression in America. Much of television, however, is simply escapist entertainment for us, but a tremendous cash cow for programmers and advertisers.

Take for example "Empire" on Fox. The network is known for its history of racist banter and has exploited Black America while simultaneously benefiting from Black consumers. Statistics show that "Empire" is Fox's highest grossing show in three years, which translates into a huge pay-off for Fox.

How big? How about the $45.2 billion Comcast/Time Warner merger? How about the $48.5 billion AT&T acquisition of DirecTV or the estimated $1.3 trillion dollars spent annually by Black consumers? Not to mention the $20 billion lawsuit filed by the National Association of African American Owned Media and Entertainment Studios Networks, against Comcast, Time Warner, and other civil rights organizations as party to a plan to ensure that profits from Black viewership continue pouring into the same pockets?

We've watched with interest and commented on this situation earlier; but the situation has not improved. We will reserve judgment on the soundness of Entertainment Studios Network's CEO Byron Allen's pending legal action, but there are a few things of which we are absolutely certain:

No telecom giant has a plan for meaningful participation/inclusion of Black business in their day-to-day procurement activity;

No programming giant has a plan to include, develop or support the development of positive Black portrayals to any meaningful degree;

No cable/pay TV provider makes programming targeting Black consumers available at their basic service level, which requires their best customers to pay extra to view their favorite shows;

No advertiser using the TV/PayTV medium includes Black business in any significant way in the development, production, delivery/distribution of their products to this loyal consumer base.

Telecom companies and consumer product companies are gearing up for an assault on your wallets like nothing you've ever seen, and if you're riveted by the latest episode or game-of-the-week, you may not even notice your pocket being picked. Decisions about your money are being made right now. These decisions are being made by people who don't know you, and whose only interest is how long you're in front of your TV before you go buy the products they are selling.

We understand it's about business - big business. We also understand that it is Black consumers' money that makes the business so big. But if Black businesses don't flourish as a result of all this activity designed to move dollars out of Black pockets, we'll be back to "Good Times" in the projects instead of building Empires. All the more reason to invest money in the Black community. If you can devote time to watching your favorite television show, then you can also devote time to buying from your local Black businesses. Make #Blackdollar smatters not just a hashtag, but a way of life.

Galloway escapes slavery

David
Dowdy

In early 1857, young Abraham Galloway vowed to depart the world of his childhood. Galloway and his friend, Richard Eden, decided that liberty was worth dying for and that it was their duty to strike for freedom even if it cost them their lives.

Galloway and Eden identified a ship captain who was willing to conceal them in the hold of his vessel. The vessel was bound for Philadelphia. Once in Philadelphia, the two men found their way to the offices for the Vigilance Committee of Philadelphia, the city's oldest abolitionist society. There Galloway and Eden met William Still, one of the country's most prominent African American abolitionists. Still had a large group of local supporters on whom he would have called to care for, and conceal, the runaways. Under the provisions of the Fugitive Slave Act of 1850, bounty hunters had the right to siege Galloway and Eden and return them to slavery in Wilmington, N. C. To play it safe, Still provided Galloway and Eden with railroad tickets as soon as they recovered from their voyage. He also handed them a list of anti-slavery contacts along the route month. Another fugitive slave, John Henry Pettifoot, joined them. Still directed Galloway and the other fugitives to a friend of the Vigilance Committee named George Mink, in Kingston, Ontario, just across the Canadian border.

Inequity in education funding shortchanges America's future

That all citizens will be given an equal start through a sound education is one of the most basic, promised rights of our democracy. Our chronic refusal as a nation

to guarantee that right for all children, including poor children, is a national disgrace...It is a failure which threatens our future as a nation of citizens called to a common purpose, allied with one another in a common enterprise, tied to one another by a common bond." - Senator Paul Wellstone, Teachers College, Columbia University, March 2000

Sitting beside his first teacher, "Miss Katie" Deadrich, in front of the one-room Texas schoolhouse he once attended, President Lyndon B. Johnson signed the Elementary and Secondary Education Act into law on April 11, 1965. ESEA, commonly known as No Child Left Behind (NCLB), was a cornerstone in the president's "War on Poverty" initiative. Its intent was to close the education achievement gap between children from lower- and higher-income families. Fifty years later, with Congress currently considering a reauthorization of the law, the gap in educational opportunity, achievement and funding is growing.

For the first time in our nation's history, students of color are the majority of the U.S. student body. According to a recent survey by the Southern Education Foundation, a majority of all public school students are low-income. In another troubling milestone, the National Center for Education Statistics estimates that during the 2013-2014 school year, a majority - 51 percent - of public school students were deemed eligible for free- and reduced-price meals, a common indicator of poverty.

This is even more alarming when we consider a finding that our 2015 State of Black America® revealed and that we shared at the launch this week: On average, larger academic achievement gaps are in states with large urban areas home to large populations of people of color who live in highly segregated neighborhoods with high rates of concentrated high poverty.

During a press call with Secretary of Education Arne Duncan last week, we mapped out the landscape of education in America and warned against the dangerous course our nation would chart if we do not spend our education dollars where the need is the greatest. Right now in more than 20 states, school districts serving the highest percentage of low-income households spend fewer state and local dollars per student than in districts that have fewer students in poverty. The same short-changing trend is the norm in 20 states that have a high percentage of students of color, where school districts are spending fewer dollars in those schools than in schools with a lower percentage of students of color.

The National Urban League has been-and will remain-at the forefront of this issue, having advocated for equal economic and educational opportunity for 105 years with the clear understanding that neither is mutually exclusive. Last week, the National Urban League released our annual State of Black America® report, this year titled "Save Our Cities: Education, Jobs + Justice."

For the first time in the report's history, we included a state-by-state Education Equality Index™ and ranking. The index examines state-level racial and ethnic disparities in K-12 education, documenting the extent of Black and Hispanic achievement gaps, when compared to Whites, in all 50 states and the District of Columbia. The State Education Index also includes supporting data on some of the factors that contribute to narrowing or widening these gaps.

The National Urban League

adds its advocacy and voice to the chorus of education and civil rights groups, government officials and families demanding that Congress revisit and recommit to the original vision and mission of ESEA. When signing the bill, President Johnson declared that our nation would "bridge the gap between helplessness and hope for...educationally deprived children."

How can we begin to bridge the gap President Johnson spoke of 50 years ago, when all-too-often the greatest percentage of education dollars is allocated to already resource-rich schools? How can we begin to make the promise of equality in education a reality when we refuse to admit that equality in education does not always translate to equitable funding?

The 1954 groundbreaking Supreme Court decision in Brown v. Board of Education made it clear that "education must be made available to all on equal terms." But as long as Congress passes laws that continue to embolden state school districts to exacerbate inequities by providing less money to those with the greatest need, we do neither honor nor justice to the spirit of the law - or our nation's children and future.

Marc H. Morial, former mayor of New Orleans, is president and CEO of the National Urban League.

Caught between Barack and a hard place

The experiment that featured a Black man in the White house is on the downside now.

James Clingman

Folks in the Obama administration are busy looking for their next job and jumping ship faster than rats. But you can't blame them; that's the way it is in politics. You ride your horse as long as you can and then you find a new horse. That's just what folks in presidential administrations do. The question is: What horse will Black folks ride now?

With Barack, came new line-dances at the clubs, new phrases, and new "hope" that would finally move Black people to the front of the line for a "change." We were large and in charge, big-ballers and shot-callers, cool and stylish, but we soon found that we were not really running anything. Having bet the farm on our horse, we now look on in agony as he comes down the home stretch. We want to move the finish line a bit farther down the track because we don't yet have the victory, and it looks like we're not going to get it. All we can hope for now is just a little more euphoria before November 2016.

Black folks are now between Barack and hard place. We don't know if we are pitching or catching. As that Richard Pryor movie asked, "Which way is up?" We invested nearly 100 percent of our political capital in our current president, thinking we would get a decent Return on Investment (ROI). Unless there is a drastic uptick in the next few months, our investment will be lost forever, because we know this experiment will not be done again for a long time.

Between Barack and a hard place means that Black people, collectively, are now without a comfortable place to turn, without someone we can look to for hope and change, and without what we considered to be a foothold in politics. Being between Barack and a hard place is causing anxiety, doubt, and even fear among some of our people.

Being between Barack and a hard place will make many of us revert to our political ways by staying on the Democrat's wagon because the Republicans ignore us and don't like us, anyway. We will rationalize our allegiance to the same party that takes us for granted, however. And some of us will opt out of the system altogether because we are so frustrated and angry at how the previous two terms went down.

It's very uncomfortable being between Barack and a hard place. To whom will we turn? Will Hillary help us? Will one of the Republican candidates help us? Maybe Dr. Ben (Carson) will win and come to our rescue. What are Black folks to do in 2016 as we now find ourselves wedged between Barack and a hard place with no wiggle room? Maybe we could "apologize" to Hillary for abandoning her in 2008. Maybe we could do a public mea culpa to the Republicans. After all, we need someone to turn to now, right?

Well, here are a few thoughts. Maybe we can now turn to ourselves. Maybe now we will fully understand the error of our ways and make appropriate change. Maybe we will finally work together as a solid bloc to leverage our precious votes against the 2016 candidates. Maybe we will understand that no matter who resides at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, Black folks still have to be vigilant about our political and economic position in this country. And maybe, as we struggle to remove ourselves from between Barack and a hard place, at least a small percentage of us will organize around economic and political empowerment.

The Barack experiment was cool. He sings like Al Green, dances like the steppers in Chicago, shoots three-pointers on the basketball court, plays golf with Alonzo Mourning, and even gets his preach on when speaking to Black audiences. In other words, Barack could make us feel real good, so much so that we kicked back, relaxed, and waited for him to fix our problems, to speak on our behalf, and to give us the same deference he gives to other groups. Now, we find ourselves between Barack and a hard place - no turning room, very little breathing room, and much uncertainty about our future in the political arena.

There will be a new sheriff in town in January 2017, and our guy will stand there with him or her to give congrats and well wishes right before he rides off into the sunset, back to Chicago, Hawaii, or wherever, to enjoy the fruit of his labor, and I do mean fruit. He and his family will be well taken care of, but most of our families will be in the same or worse condition, having been stuck between Barack and a hard place for eight years.

Three Black Republicans race to the bottom

Recently, I wrote that today's Republican Party is gripped by a severe problem - an acting-the-fool dynamic produced by their allegiance to crackpot-conservatism - that causes Republicans of high and low status to say or do things that range from the silly to the vicious. I concluded in part that because these things largely go unchallenged by the GOP leadership, they help underscore how much the bigoted radical right controls the party.

All of the individuals I discussed then are White. However, last week, a trio of Blacks who love the GOP - Ben Carson, Jason L. Riley, and Stephen A. Smith - stepped forward with their own crackpot notions. You might say they proved once again that some Blacks are as capable of engaging in a race to the bottom of common sense and/or respectability as some Whites.

Speaking at a symposium at Vanderbilt University, Smith, an ESPN personality, declared that his "dream" was that "for one election, just one, every Black person in American vote Republican ... Black folks in America," he continued, "are telling one party, 'We don't give a damn about you.' They're telling the other Party, 'You've got our vote. Therefore, you have labeled yourself 'disenfranchised' because one Party knows they've got you under their thumb. They other party knows they'll never get you and nobody comes to address your interest."

Thus, Smith put on display his stunning misunderstanding of the basic point of political electioneering: it's the political party that substantively appeals to the voters for support. Equal to that was his astonishing ignorance of the past half-century of American politics - a period when Blacks forged a remarkable record of playing pragmatic politics in the only party, the Democrats, that sought their support. Remarkably, Smith also either didn't notice or ignored the fact that in one recent election his wish had come true.

That was the 2014 bitterly contested race for the U.S. Senate in Mississippi between six-term Republican conservative Thad Cochran, and the Tea Party-backed extremist, Chris McDaniel. Cochran is a dyed-in-the-wool conservative but also a man of courtly manners who has never treated his Democratic Senate colleagues as "the enemy," as McDaniel promised to do. He was in significant danger of losing. Mississippi's Black voters - the most reliably Democratic in the country - rushed into the Republican primary to vote for Cochran in massive numbers, ensuring that he would defeat McDaniel and be returned to Washington.

That was a dramatic example of the principle that has always ruled traditional Black politics: pragmatism trumps political ideology.

That's something Jason L. Riley has made a career of pretending isn't true. Which is why he's held down a spot on the editorial board of the Wall Street Journal - the global financial community's main newspaper - for nearly two decades. Despite his tenure at one of the most powerful media companies in the world, Riley spends a lot of ink railing against "black elites" who, as he wrote in a March 17 column, are "always eager" to blame White racism for what he wants the world to see as Black peoples' internally generated flaws.

What he also wrote there, in declaring that we should ignore the racist ditty of the University of Oklahoma White fraternity chapter was this: "History shows that faster black progress was occurring at a time when whites were still lynching about it."

Yes. Those who have a sense of decency about them, not to mention a working intellect, ought to be shocked. Riley offers not a shred of evidence in his lengthy opinion piece to support that claim, of course. He knows it's just "red meat" for the WSJ's constituency - another falsehood they can grab to build their fortress against the truth.

Finally, Ben Carson continued to prove on the campaign trail that, as the headline in the prominent conservative

CURRY'S COMMENTS

I had a heart attack

Nothing was more startling than when a cardiologist looked me directly in the eyes and said matter-of-factly: "It looks like you had a heart attack." I was dumbfounded. When? Where? How much damage was done? Why didn't I know it?

It certainly didn't feel like I had suffered a heart attack.

I had just covered and participated in the 50th anniversary of "Bloody Sunday" in Selma, Ala. The ceremonies had special significance to me because as a senior at Druid High School in Tuscaloosa, I had participated in the last day of the march in Montgomery, where I saw James Baldwin and Harry Belafonte for the first time.

George Curry

Ann and I arrived a day early, had dinner with Susan Gandy, the youngest of my three sisters, who had driven over to Montgomery from Tuskegee with her husband, Iverson, Jr., and my niece, Rachel.

In addition to covering the president's speech Saturday, I had received a Freedom Flame Award that night and on Sunday morning was one of the speakers at the Martin and Coretta King Unity Breakfast. I walked across the Edmund Pettus Bridge on Sunday and completed my writing and editing for the NNPA News Service on Monday.

We stopped in Buford, Ga. Tuesday en route back to Washington, D.C. to visit Ann's son, Derek Ragland; his wife, April, and our grandkids, Austin, 5, and Autumn 1.

On Wednesday night, I felt a slight pain in my chest, but dismissed it as indigestion. It continued Thursday night. When the pain persisted Friday night, Ann insisted on taking me to the hospital and I acquiesced.

We ended up at Emory Johns Creek Hospital. To Ann's disbelief, I grabbed my iPad mini, a book, my charger, and a notebook as we headed out of the door. I know how long the wait can be in emergency rooms and did not want to be without reading material if I became trapped in the waiting lounge.

But once my symptoms were shared with the intake nurses, I was whizzed through the paperwork and placed in a room to wait for a doctor, to be administered an EKG and, of course, give blood.

"We're going to keep you overnight to see what's happening," the attending physician told me. From the way he said "keep me," I deduced that they were not keeping me around just to get to know me better. Something was amiss and I wasn't sure what it was. I was wheeled into a private room in the Intensive Care Unit, where I was closely monitored around the clock, had blood extracted - usually at ungodly hours - and hooked up to a series of instruments. A hospital is not place to get sleep; it's the only place in the world where they wake you up to give you a sleeping pill.

I was told around midnight that at 7 a.m. Saturday, a stent would be inserted into my heart to unblock a clogged artery. At the age of 50, I had a triple bypass. I had played quarterback at Druid High and Knoxville College and neither drank - not even wine - smoked nor used illicit drugs. Yet, an athletic past and clean living were not sufficient. I was the son of the South and I had grown up in a family where our grease was cooked in grease.

Now, 18 years later, I was told that of the three bypassed arteries, one was completely blocked, one was 97 percent blocked, and one was functioning fine. The surgery itself was not as dramatic as the bypass, which required the heart to be stopped temporarily. This time, the cardiologist made an incision in my groin, placed a stent over a balloon catheter and slid it into the heart muscle to improve blood flow. I was awake, but did not feel any pain.

From there, the ICU nurses took fantastic care of me. They could not have provided better care, even if that meant waking me constantly.

I had a follow-up visit and a stress test with Dr. Jigishu Dhabuwala at the North Atlanta Heart and Vascular Clinic before being released to the care of Dr. Boisey O. Barnes, my regular cardiologist in Washington. I spoke with Dr. Barnes during this period and before I returned home, he had already discussed getting me into a heart rehabilitation program and enrolling me in a Harvard study to prevent second heart attacks.

After writing about my bypass 18 years ago, Bill Pickard, a Detroit businessman, said I had probably saved his life because he took some immediate steps to improve his health after reading about my challenge in Emerge magazine.

At the urging of "Uncle Mike" Fauvelle of Setauket, N.Y., I am writing about my second close call with death, hoping that it, too, will prompt you to not only pay closer attention to your health, but be aware of the small signs of trouble and do something about it immediately if you sense something is awry.

web-zine, Hot Air, put it, "Ben Carson is not ready for prime time."

Trying to establish foreign-policy credentials, Carson was at times flummoxed by the properly sharp questions of commentator Hugh Hewitt, whose huge following among conservatives testifies to his longtime impeccably conservative credentials. Carson's errors were glaring and produced headlines elsewhere such as: "Presidential contender Ben Carson stumbled in an extremely uncomfortable interview," leading another conservative commentator, David Weigel, to remark, "The headlines came down like acid rain all week."

I suppose one could say, then, we should judge these conservatives not by the color of their skin, but by the loony content of their comments.

FUTURE HISTORY MAKERS

Talpha S. Everettte

There are history makers and there are those who attempt to stand out where ever they go, Talpha Everettte is making her mark in history today. This high school senior at Isaac Bear Early College High School is creating history now! She is the daughter of Benjamin Jr. and Rochelle Thigpen-Everette. As a member of Wilmington NAACP Youth Council she is an active participant in many of their activities.

Active is an appropriate descriptor for Talpha as she is an active member of Macedonia Missionary Baptist Church and a Praise Dancer for her church. She has created her own business called Out of the Box Customs. Her business custom designs materials for a variety of clients. This is her second year as Director of Shop the Runway a weekend of fashion events in the Wilmington community, an Event Manager with A Boxed Event and she is also a News Anchor on New Hanover County Schools-TV.

In 2014 Talpha was the recipient of the Harvard Prize Book award. Harvard Prize Books are awarded annually to high school juniors selected by the faculty of her school. The selection is based on academic excellence, significant contribution to school or community, and exceptional personal qualities. Talpha was the only student from New Hanover County to receive this award in 2014 and was one of eleven selected from the state of North Carolina. Talpha was also a 2014 Teen Summit 9 Panelist Speaker at WRAAP's Community Day 'Are You Listening?'

Most recently Talpha received UNC-Chapel Hill Global Gap Year Fellowship 2015. The Fellowship is a highly selected award given to seven high school graduates who have been admitted to UNC as part of the university's Early Action deadline. This opportunity will allow Talpha to complete a year of international service with all expenses paid prior to her studies at UNC. Talpha was also awarded the 2015 Miss Ivy Scholarship sponsored by Alpha Psi Omega Chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc at the recent Debutante Program.

In her own words: I attended a conference as a representative from my church; the discussion centered on the lack of motivation in today's youth. During that same time I noticed that teen killings were escalating in my city. This inspired me to take action to provide a positive impact in my community. I decided to create an inspirational conference awards show for the youth in New Hanover County and surrounding areas; called the ILM Awards. This award was created to target the talent that inhabits the youth of New Hanover County and surrounding areas. By targeting, awarding and recognizing the often overlooked talent and productivity of our community's youth, the ILM Awards plans to fulfill a broader goal of motivating the youth at the same time. I believe that every youth has the potential to make a difference in the world, whether it is through talent, education and other achievement. I wanted to light the torch that paves the way in one finding ones niche in order to make a positive impact.

I celebrate my culture by striving to uplift my culture in everything I do. For example, the way I wear my hair sometimes; I've been natural all my life and love to 'flaunt my fro.' I also highlight African American history, empowerment and success on all of my social media sites such as Facebook and Instagram with the purposes of enlightening my peers about the richness of the African Diaspora.

My biggest inspiration in my life is my mother. My mother has seen me through my ups and my downs. She has supported my unusual inventions, dreams and aspirations. My mom is my encourager and my best friend. She believes in me even when I don't believe in myself. One of the biggest lessons that she has taught me is to remain humble and lean on God, that alone can take me anywhere.

Coming from an abstract background, I think that I am able to inspire others to excel by using my own life story as a role model. I went to Williston Middle School, and then transitioned into Isaac Bear Early College; where I struggled for a while. Now, in my senior year, I have been accepted into Howard University, awarded the Lewis and Dowdy full ride scholarship as an honor student to North Carolina A & T University and have been accepted into UNC Chapel Hill where I am offered an opportunity to travel around the world for a year on a full scholarship completing service work and internships that involve improving global humanities the environment and much more. As a young eighteen year old African American female, being blessed with such great opportunities and coming from my background, I pray that my story will inspire others to excel. My mom says it is always important to have God and remain humble throughout the journey.

Public Input: Do you know someone who has done something remarkable in the Wilmington community? Their story should be told. Nominate a 'Future History Maker' by sharing their story: tibal1009@earthlink.net. Future History Makers should be 21 years old and under; has demonstrated success as a leader in school, church or community; exhibits qualities of good citizenship and character; active in the community by providing service and is a leader. Final selection of all Future History Maker stories will be determined by the Commission on African American History. Current members of the commission are: Willie Black, Audrey Clark, Sylvia Ezelonwu, Natalie Hinton-Stalling, Atiba Johnson and Todd McFadden.

Verniece Stanley

Gardening is an activity that starts in the spring. A garden is a plot of land used for the cultivation of flowers, vegetables, or fruits.

A variety of vegetables grows in Brunswick County each year, and they are very healthful for the family. Today we still share our blessings with the poor hungry people near and far away.

Gardening can be an enjoyable experience, particularly when a relative or volunteer wants to be a helper. While gardening, there are many good things to talk, about such as weather, politics, sports, and religious activities. There are several ponds near us that could be overflowing by this summer.

It's getting warmer and more people will be outside, enjoying gardening and other such activities. It will be good to find a comfortable place in the sunshine and look at more signs of spring and enjoy the beauty of nature. Aside from a way to help feed the family, gardening can be a very relaxing and therapeutic hobby. Many times people get together and talk about many topics, for example, leadership and peace. Many happy hours are spent in this activity, and it comes with so many benefits.

Spring is in the air, so let's get ready to participate in the enjoyable and beneficial activities in which we engage to pass the time away in this beautiful season of the year.

Spring is a season of the year. We are looking for more signs of spring. In our area we have seen robins having a rust red breast and gray and black upper plumage. A red bird or any of the various birds with red plumage such as the Cardinal or Scarlet tanager.

It takes a great amount of courage, wisdom and intelligence to deal with growing conflicts across the country such as police brutality. Enlightenment in dark situations will bring forth a peaceful opportunity you have been waiting for. There are times in a person's life you need some guidance by a person who cares and is honest enough to tell you. In giving their opinions on how to address the situation. One of the greatest most significant parts of good communication is that one is a good listener. Being a good listener means that a person is open to hear or listen to the other person's point of view. This in turn will allow you to be able to effectively respond to the other persons need or concerns. If the right decisions are being made about a situation, then there will be no discord.

It is only when people do not make the right decisions regarding their differences will there be conflict. It's good for the elderly to talk about difficult situations they had to face in life. Ready for Hillary and it's time for a woman to be President of the United States.

James Bowen II - Mr. HBCU

SPECIAL TO THE WILMINGTON JOURNAL

The student face of North Carolina A&T State University James Bowen II recently won the title of Mr. HBCU. Bowen competed in the 11-year-old competition against eight other hopefuls from eight different historically black colleges or universities (HBCUs) in the country.

Arriving at the Black institution on a full academic scholarship as a freshman and wanting to "get out of my shell," Bowen says, his first opportunity to lead was campaigning for the Mr. Freshman position at NCA&T.

"In college, I really wanted to get out of my comfort zone and really go do things that I wouldn't normally do," Bowen told HBCU Buzz.

But James did not stop with one title, he took a bid for Mr. Junior and won, and of course, he also won Mr. A&T, a coveted position in HBCU culture.

"I always try to stay humble because there's going to be a time when I'm not going to win," he said.

According to Bowen, it is constitutionally required by the university that Mr. A&T also has to run for Mr. HBCU. But though it was technically obligated for him to run, he says he still wanted to represent A&T at the competition in the best light possible.

All contestants competed in four categories; Oratory, Talent, Ease of Manner (Formal Wear) and Q&A. Bowen won both the talent and oratory categories that eventually led him to take the win home to share with his fellow Aggies.

For James' talent, he chose to perform a poem about his father. The dramatic presentation included him singing and reciting a self-written spoken word piece. James' piece delved into the subject matter of his father passing when he was young and Bowen not getting the chance to fully know him.

When asked how it felt to share such a personal piece with others, Bowen says, "When I perform any piece it gives me an opportunity to show people a side of me that they may not have known."

After graduation Bowen says he plans to join the Teach for America organization for two years in Atlanta Georgia, and then attend another HBCU for Graduate school: "I'm Pro-HBCU," Bowen said.

"I thought about the people who influenced me when I was growing up, and a lot of them were teachers," he said. "A lot of kids in low income areas don't really see a lot of black male teachers who can encourage them and be mentors. This is an opportunity for me to do that."

"...I believe HBCUs are very important in today's society. At one point in time I wasn't able to attend Harvard or Yale, due to my skin color, we had to make our own because of this."

"...We as black people have to get back to a place where we value our institutions," said Bowen.

As Mr. HBCU Bowen says he works with being pro HBCU as a foundation to be an advocate for recruitment, and without hesitation James names his brother, Cedric Brown, first on his list of biggest influences in life. "When my father passed away my brother stepped in...he took out the time to develop me as a young man." "Even now I can call him and ask him for advice."

"Always be kind because you never know what someone else is going through, be respectful to anyone, and stay humble," said Bowen.

James is a native of Riegelwood, NC and a 2011 graduate of East Columbus High School, Lake Waccamaw, NC. He is the son of Mrs. Arlenda and the late Rev. Donald Bowen and the grandson of Mr. James Bowen of Riegelwood and Mrs. Rosa Howard of Wilmington, NC.

SENIOR CITIZENS' FELLOWSHIP

BY FANNIE ALLEN AND SHEILA ROSS
CONTRIBUTING WRITERS

On a warm and sunny day, we were all glad to be together one more time for fellowship and friendship. Our meeting was called to order by our president, Mrs. Eloise Purdie. She said, "How good it is to see so many smiling faces!" She asked the choir and Mr. George Hill to come. He said, "It is a great day, and we will rejoice and be glad in it!" Our opening song was "The Old Rugged Cross." A very warm and fervent prayer was prayed by Mrs. Marie Stitt. Our next song was "There Is a Fountain Filled with Blood." Minister Doris McQuillan came and said, "We are blessed and highly favored." She asked Mrs. Emma Saunders to come and introduce our speaker today, who was her daughter, Ms. Erica Saunders. She is the 'Triangle Regional Director for the N. C. Nurses' Association. She is a product of the New Hanover County Schools and a graduate of NCCU and WSSU. She was warmly welcomed. She said how grateful and blessed she was to be here and thanked God. Her message is entitled, "

SENIOR MOMENTS

Widening the doors of the church

My fellow seniors,

Ruth Johnson

named a building in her honor. All I could think of was what a colossal lost to the community! This lady had shared her heart with the university, but not with the church.

She had sat just in front of me for several years. We shook hands every Sunday, but I never heard her speak. And I know there are other such persons throughout the community. They have much to share, but no platform. They could shed light on such subjects as Alzheimer's, corruption, neighborhood improvement and so much more, but they would have to be invited to speak.

That's why I go on and on about widening the doors of the church. You probably go every Sunday, and I could ask what have you learned this

One of our members passed away about a year ago. At that time, we learned that she had been a college professor for many years. When she retired, the school had

TELL SOMEBODY

"God wants your heart"

Matthew 22:37- 38, "Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment."

Heart: Seat of emotions; Center of feelings

"God's Got My Back!" a familiar phrase, a figure of speech, a local colloquialism. For many, it's another way of saying, that God is good all the time, and He is making a way for me! They could also mean, that God is my keeper and my covering. God is my fortress and my strength, He is a very present help in the time of trouble. God's got my back and that means he will never leave me nor forsake me!

Oh yes, "God's Got My Back!" Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life... The angels of the Lord are encamped all around me. The Lord is my light and my salvation, therefore, whom shall I fear? The Lord is the strength of my life, of whom shall I be afraid? "God's got my back!"

Yes, God's got your back, and because He is a God of relationship,

Sylvia Hooper

God wants your heart! I the Lord search the heart, I try the reins, even to give every man according to the fruit of his doings."

The heart controls the affections, the emotions, the behaviors and the beliefs. Matthew 6:21 says, "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." The emotions of joy, sorrow, and merriment take place in the heart.

The heart is also the place where faith works or fails to work. Mark 11:23 , refers to the presence of doubt in the heart. Romans 10:10 , speaks of belief in the heart, and Hebrews 3:12 speaks of unbelief in the heart. I Samuel 16:7 says, "Man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart." God knows our heart, and that is the truth! He knows when we are sincere, and God knows when we are insincere. He knows when we are half hearted or double minded, and He knows when we are totally surrendered to His will and to His way. This is reflected in the statement made in Luke 6:46. "And why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?"

This point of knowing is also expressed in Matthew 15:8, "This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoreth me with their lips; but their heart is far from me."

God wants your heart! This is true for every Believer in Christ Jesus. II Corinthians 5:17 says, "Therefore if any man be in Christ he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new."

Yes, many of our brothers and sisters may say, God's got my back! But can you say with the same intensity and sincerity, that God's got my heart!!!

Heavenly Father , in the Name of JESUS, I give my heart to you. Have your way in my heart and let your will be done in my life." Amen , Tell Somebody!

"Mrs. Sylvia B. Hooper is a native Wilmingtonian, married to Pastor Johnson A. Hooper; First Lady of Faith Outreach COGIC, Jacksonville, N.C. She is a mother of three wonderful children and a proud grandmother! She is a Licensed Evangelist with COGIC, International. She is the President of P.W.E. Pastors Wives Empowerment Conference, an annual event held in honor of Pastors and ministers Wives. This support group's focus is to Encourage, Embrace and Empower Elect Ladies to be all they can be in Christ Jesus, while providing support to their husbands, who are Gospel preachers and pastors. Her heart's desire is to please the Lord, rescue the perishing, comfort the dying, and live a life that gives God glory!"

Fighting for a more inclusive pulpit

African American pulpits across our nation are standing steadfast in condemning the continuous brutality and injustice against Black lives, as it plays out on American streets and often on our nightly news. It is now time for our pulpits to also turn our eyes inward and conduct an exploratory investigation into the massive killing of character and explosive hatred that is continuously aimed at the human rights and dignity of Black gay men and women, all done in the name of our Lord and Savior, Jesus, and our loving God.

The recent press release issued by the National Baptist Fellowship of Concerned Pastors calling for Rev. Forrest E. Harris, President and CEO of the American Baptist College, to disinvite Bishop Yvette Flunder; Allan Aubrey Boesak, who holds the Desmond Tutu Chair of Peace, Global Justice and Reconciliation Studies at Christian Theological Seminary; and Pastor Delman Coates to preach at the 2015 Garnett-Nabrit Lecture Series is yet another example of the misguided leadership of some pulpits that must bear responsibility for some of the erosion that Black families face today.

Crucifixion is being requested for these prophetic, ambassadors of God because they are advocates of human rights for all persons and seek to tear down the walls of hatred, brutality and injustice for same-gender loving persons in our families, communities and world.

Pernessa C. Seele

The U.S. Department of Education released new statistics on student homelessness, reporting that nearly 1.3 million public school students in the United States experienced homelessness in the 2012-13 school year. This marked an 8 percent rise from the 2011-12 school year. Every day 13 homeless youth die on American streets. The rates of African American youth are disproportionately higher and steadily increasing every year in many cities.

It is well-documented that as many as 40 percent of homeless teens are LGBT. These youth sleep on streets; eat from trash cans and are often sexually and mentally abused because their parents decided to put them outside of the home because of their sexual orientation. According to suicide prevention resources, LGBT youth are four times more likely to attempt suicide as their straight peers. LGBT youth who come from highly rejecting families are 8.4 times as likely to have attempted suicide as LGBT peers who reported no or low levels of family rejection. Suicide attempts are nearly two times higher among Black and Hispanic youth than White youth. 1 out of 6 students nationwide (grades 9-12) seriously considered suicide in the past year.

For more than 30 years, the African American community has sat silent while the rates of HIV among Black gay men and Black women reaches the highest in the nation. CDC reports that 1 in 4 Black gay men will become HIV positive by the time they are 25; and 1 in 2 will have HIV by the time they are 35.

The sin of this is far too many pulpits give comfort and support to families and communities who de-value the lives of their children as they promote homelessness, suicide and death in the name of a loving God who rains fear and evil on His LGBT children. Across our nation, Black Lives Matter banners are being widely flown and worn by men and women of faith. According to biblical scriptures, all Black lives matter, including gay, bisexual, transgender and heterosexual lives.

The African American church is the most influential institution in the lives of Black Americans. This is noted by Pew Research that states African-Americans stand out as the most religiously committed racial or ethnic group in the nation. Eighty-Seven percent of African-Americans describe themselves as belonging to one religious group or another.

The Balm In Gilead stands solidly with President Forrest Harris and The American Baptist College for your commitment to educating a new generation of faith leaders and advocates who will stand boldly against the dark forces of ignorance and hatred. We pray that the prophetic work and courage to restore wholeness of all men and women; families and communities through the redeeming, unconditional love of Jesus Christ, championed by Bishop Yvette Flunder, Professor Allan Aubrey Boesak and Pastor Delman Coates will bear witness and initiate demonstration from all pulpits throughout our nation and world.

The Plan." She said that God has the perfect plan (Jeremiah 29:11). The plan God has for us will never fail.

She said that she has been interested in nursing for a long time, starting by caring for her grandmother. She said God had a plan throughout her medical training. She said God always puts angels in her path to help her with her accomplishments. She said, If God brings you to it, He will see you through it."

She is the first African American Director of Nurses. Because God is God, He knows the plan for us. He can take what He has given us and multiply it over and over again. God's plans come through. She said, "Remember! God has a plan for us, and He knows us. We were made in His image."

She thanked everyone for their support in the past and those who came to hear her today. She said it takes a village. She was given a standing ovation and a round of applause for her presentation today. There were many visitors here for her support. Mrs. Purdie recognized the visitors. Two visitors were Ms. Audrey Yoeman and Ms. Penny Windsor. Mrs. Purdie asked for comments about our birthday celebration last week.

Minister Doris McQuillan said that Mrs. Mary Haywood is in the hospital. The members that have been out for a while were welcomed. Also our newest members were welcomed again.

The meeting was turned over to Mrs. Gladys Taylor, our Vice president. She thanked everyone for their participation so far. She asked Mrs. Mildred Ellerby to read our ministers for the last meeting. The list was read and approved.

We had roll call. Mrs. Cherry Pearson informed us of another trip that has been planned. The "Callers" report was read, and the winner was Mrs. Frances Matthews, with ten. Mrs. Dorothy Pridgen and Mrs. Helen Black joined our fellowship. They were welcomed by Mrs. Annie Haskins. Mrs. Haskins gave her sick report as well. Mr. Claude Martin is in the hospital.

We had announcements. Dr. Mary Benjamin announced that she will retire from being the "Smiles" lady. Minister McGlenn gave a smile.

Our circle was formed. We sang "Bind Us Together." Prayer was by Minister McQuillan. There were fifty-seven present.

Parents: Children will have it harder than they did

In a recent NBC News State of Parenting Poll, 63 percent of parents felt their children would face more problems growing up than they did. For Black parents, the figure was 72 percent.

BY JAZELLE HUNT
NNPA WASHINGTON
CORRESPONDENT

(NNPA) - A majority of American parents believe their children will face a harsher coming-of-age than they did, according to a new survey - and no one feels this more acutely than Black parents.

In a recent NBC News State of Parenting Poll, 63 percent of parents felt their children would face more problems growing up than they did. For Black parents, the figure was 72 percent.

"That feeling is real...that children growing up today are growing up in a more complex society, with respect to issues like racism, institutional racism, structural racism, and the educational system, and growing inequality," says George Garrow, executive director of Concerned Black Men National, which seeks to enrich the lives of Black children and parents through mentorship and community-building.

"We as adults are being affected by these things, and if we're being affected then young people certainly are. Our kids are being raised in a time where...the kids are not going to have the opportunities that we had 25 years ago, 30 years ago."

Parents who had little faith in today's education system were likelier to foresee greater challenges for their children. These parents of little faith were in the minority, however. In the case of Black parents, 51 percent rated their child's education as "good," on a scale from "excellent" to "poor."

Most of the parents who rated their children's education experience as "fair" or "poor" also believed that their children would have a harder time growing up. Only 18 percent and 9 percent of Black parents gave "fair" and "poor" ratings, respectively, but Black parents made up the largest share of both ratings.

The outlook on growing up was bleak even among the satisfied parents, 57 percent of whom still felt their children would face more problems.

"I always thought...we'd be, now, in an era of better schools. But when you look at the terrain we're not there yet...particularly with Black kids and the schools they are going to," Garrow said. "While we may live in a society with greater options for some, those things haven't necessarily materialized for Black children, and Black families."

Interestingly, 51 percent of all parents felt that school would not prepare their children for the job market unless their child also went to college. Further, a sizeable 86 percent said their children would need more than a high school degree to achieve The American Dream.

Although many parents believed the journey to adulthood would be harder for their children, 53 percent also believed that their children would be the same or better off once they grew up. While Black parents were most likely to worry about their children's present experiences, they were also more likely to be optimistic about their child's future than White parents were-but not more optimistic than Hispanic parents. Additionally, younger, Democrat, and/or low-income parents were more optimistic than older, Republican, and/or higher-income parents; Black people tend to fall into the former categories. (Political independents are evenly split).

While the worry about modern childhood remains high, research suggests the sentiment is declining with each generation, as the standard of living gets better. In the 1998 results of this same survey, 78 percent of parents believed their children had more problems.

At the same time, outlook on the future of the next generation seems to have remained steady. Over the past few years the Pew Research Center has surveyed approximately 2,500 parents with similar questions. From 2008 to 2012, roughly half of parents believed their children would have it better off when they reached adulthood. Interestingly, roughly 60 percent of the same respondents believed that they had a better standard of living than their parents did at the same age.

At a time when the nation is rallying against unchecked police violence on Black people (among a host of chronic social and political problems), Garrow points out that Black families have to dig deep to find optimism for the future. But, he also believes that positive adult involvement and community building are the keys to helping children navigate an increasingly complex society.

"We can no longer live under the idyllic notion that kids-as long as they don't get into trouble, as long as the 'behave themselves'-that they're going to grow up to be responsible citizens, be educated properly, and have opportunities in life. All of our kids are at risk," Garrow says.

"[The finding] is really tragic because it should not be this way. Each society should be able to build upon the successes of the previous generation. ...[W]e really need a reality check to determine what we need to do so we at least have a chance at offering our kids a better life."

Long
distant lover

I am a 50-year-old field service engineer who travels 75 percent of the year for work. I love my job and appreciate the opportunity that I am able to travel around the world. No, I'm not in the military, so I can pick and choose where I decide to reside long term. Basically, the problem is maintaining long distant relationships with my family, friends and holding down a love life. I try to stay in touch with my family and friends through cell phone calls and Facebook but sometimes it's just not enough. I miss them when I'm traveling and honestly, it's hard to maintain a healthy adult relationship with a woman without her eventually telling me I'm away too much. I'm single, active and I would consider myself to be handsome. How would you suggest I meet a woman who would understand my situation and consider being in this type of a relationship?

Lamont in Ohio
Lamont from Ohio, yes, I'm putting you on blast, cause this is the first time I've run across, a truly handsome (yes girls, I saw his picture), and gainfully employed engineer with benefits, who's discussing how difficult it is to maintain a long distance healthy adult relationship. The first thing that comes to my mind is, "Seek and ye shall find, my brotha ~ you came to the right place, LOL."

I'm here to agree with you sweetheart, there's no double about it, long distance relationships (LDR's) take an enormous amount of hard work, but then again, a regular in your face, every day relationship does, too. I say, navigate the negativity, as long as the two of you are serious about your commitment and devotion to each another, a LDR can be quite successful.

In my opinion, a LDR requires two mature adults who are completely confident in their own right. Each has got to be comfortable in their own skin and not looking to be completed or validated by the other. All lines of communication must remain open and honest always. You've gotta trust each other. That's super important! With today's technology options, you can keep in touch daily, practically face to face. I'm sure you've heard it said before, absence does make a loving heart grow fonder. Can you see it in your minds eye? Lawddy, can you imagine anticipating the next time you'll see each other? Wheew, kool it down, this columns rated: PG, LOL. I could go on and on with the positives, but no need, I'm sure you feel me.

Evidently you've been looking in all the wrong places or you'd be hooked up by now. Today's the day to steer yourself in a new direction. Start looking to find a woman who's pursuing her dreams, occupying her time, joyfully participating in her life. Since you're on the road most of the time, I'm sure this task won't be easy. Soooo, you know me, I just can't help myself, I'll see what I can do to help you out. Ladies: If you're interested in contacting Lamont, shoot me an email. I see springtime and love just around the corner.

This week in Atlanta, it was shade central Phaedra left her nest to visit new BFF Porsha, and things got quite heated in the kitchen. Not just from the shade-filled conversation but whatever Porsha was cooking on the stove. It was sausage, really, you know the kind you heat up. After getting over the cooking shock, I could not believe the conversation. It's no secret that Phaedra is irked at Cynthia and every chance she gets, she's dissing her. But, this series of insults was low even for Phaedra. I hate to say it, direct your anger at the real person, your husband. Porsha loves every minute since Cynthia is not her favorite person. I do think it makes sense for them to bond, Porsha dealt with major hubby drama last season. Now, it's Phaedra's turn.

Speaking of husband drama, Kandi is focused on keeping hers, but someone please tell her, she's got to listen. Every time she asks Todd to share his heart, he says the same thing and Kandi responds the same way. He says: You brush everything under the rug. She says: Nothing and rolls her eyes.

My new favorite housewife, Claudia, got some screen time and it was very entertaining. In case you haven't heard, she wants to try her hand at stand up comedy. But, the master comedian herself, Luenelle, had me rolling. She's busy dishing out advice to Claudia on bringing out the comedian in her and she finishes drink one, begins to drink the next one and forgets to remove the plastic from the straw. Claudia says: "Don't put that plastic in your mouth." Lunette responds with oh, "I thought it was a condom" (paraphrased). Yes, that really happened. My advice: Stand up is not for either on them.

Queen Nene herself decides to visit her new BFF Phaedra and boy oh boy did she make an entrance. Nene had her Don King wig with curls on and scared everyone, at least us viewers. Nene provides Phaedra an earful and would you believe we see sincerity. Also, we finally, we get to see the vulnerable side of Phaedra, it was beautiful. Too bad the wrong "friend" brought it out. I love Nene, but she has a pattern of liking you as long as you do what she tells you. Of course, Nene could not leave without shade being thrown on why Kandi is a bad friend.

Back to Queen Nene, the counseling session with Dr. Jeff, who happens to be my neighbor; starts off with Nene sharing what she thinks is wrong and everyone listens. Then the housewives respond one by one and you can see Nene beginning to implode. Nene is confused that she's not leading the session. Dr. Jeff reminds Nene that the session is for everyone and that means equal ground. Nene disagrees and insult #1 comes out toward Dr. Jeff.

First, Kenya speaks about her feelings about Nene. Bottom line, I thought we squashed the drama. Not so, says Nene, who reminds her: "We are not friends."

Claudia speaks - the first time we meet you diss me. Nene responds - (paraphrased): I have to get you before you get me. An argument starts and Dr. Jeff stops it.

Cynthia reminds Nene that she did not appreciate her calling her husband a B*tch. Of course, Nene tries to rationalize it. Cynthia calls her out on her behavior; and Nene responds with insults #6 & #7.

Twitterverse and some of the blogs are hating on Cynthia and her new tude, but I like it, she found her voice so deal with it!

Kandi tells Nene she's territorial - and let's her know she feels like the other ladies. Reminds her she throws friends away

Now, Nene, leaves, she can't handle the heat. Dr. Jeff runs after her. The ladies discuss why they are not surprised.

This week in Beverly Hills Brandi lands back in the drama drivers seat...

In Amsterdam, the ladies head back to Beverly Hills and Yolanda and Brandi meet at a spa. I love the 14 Karat gold facial Brandi received, it just seemed to make her face look a bit ruberish. Yolanda decided to try again and Brandi breaks down, already emotional from her father being ill. She's not trying to hear how she's disappointed someone, I have to give it to Yolanda for staying loyal. We all need a friend like that.

The sisters settle in and within the first hour, the argument begins and the real feelings come out. Kyle shares the "intervention" plan with her and Kim is shocked. It's emotional and uncomfortable. I was happy to see them hug it out after the argument.

I have to say that I'm so excited to see the New York Housewives return soon with my favorite, Bethany Frankel. Did you hear? In the Real Housewives of New Jersey world, Joe may be cheating on Teresa, I will keep my ears to the ground.

New Hanover County is currently taking legal and collection enforcement action on delinquent taxes for 2014 and prior years.

If you wish to avoid the actions listed below contact the Tax Office at (910) 798-7300 and arrange to pay your bill.

Collection Enforcement Actions

Bank attachment- Your financial institution is served legal notice to attach deposit accounts for the amount of past due taxes, interest and collection fees. Your financial institution may charge a service fee for attachment processing.

Wage garnishment- Your employer is served legal notice of delinquent taxes and instructed to garnish 10% of gross pay until the taxes, interest and fees are paid in full. Your employer may charge a garnishment processing fee.

Property Seizure-Collector may take possession of property such as car, truck, motorcycle, boat and/or other personal property to be sold at public auction. Additional fees incurred for gaining possession, storage and sale of property will be assessed.

Notification of Debt Set-off - The Collector may secure payment by filing a claim with the State of North Carolina to obtain your income tax refund or lottery winnings. Filing this claim can significantly delay the processing of your refund or claim of winnings. A collection assistance fee of $15.00 will be added to the bill when we submit for collection.

Collection Cost - Any and all costs incurred by the Collector will be added to the tax bill.
