HIS COTTON PAYS FOR HIS GRAPES

Tumbleweed Smith

I had the opportunity to see a very clean, manicured and well maintained patch of ground north of Seminole that was filled with grape vines. Each vine seemed to take on human characteristics and stood like a trained soldier waiting for orders. "I take care of my vineyard like it was my racehorse."

John Friesen. "It stays in top shape."

John is a successful cotton farmer and was considering planting a pecan orchard but decided that would require too much water, so in 2014 he started growing grapes as a hobby. It quickly got out of hand. "Yeah. We've got over thirty thousand vines that produce 13 different types of grapes. Most of them go to wineries, but we also sell some table grapes to area grocery stores." John didn't know anything about wines when he started his vineyard, saying he just liked to grow stuff.

John, at age 43, is one determined farmer. When his first grapes were ready to be harvested, he had a call from a winery wanting to buy some grapes. When the winery manager learned that John's grapes were young he said he wasn't interested, that he was looking for some mature grapes. John asked the man "how do you know my grapes won't work for you? You need to come see my vineyard. I'll be glad to give you the harvest if you like the grapes. We don't have any other customers." So the man came, saw that John was serious about growing grapes, bought the harvest and said he wanted to be Friesen Vineyard's exclusive and only customer. John declined the offer but still sells grapes to that winery because it bought his first harvest. John sells to 4 award-winning wineries now and there's a waiting list of people wanting to buy his grapes. "But we can't plant them and grow them fast enough."

The harvest starts in early September. "It beautiful," says John. "We get up at 2 or 3 in the morning and start picking the grapes wearing headlamps. There'll be 60 or 70 people out there with scissors. It's dark and dead quiet except for all the scissors chopping away at the clusters. We pick by hand. If you want to go for the high-end wines that's what they like. There's a small window to get the best grapes. Even a day or two can make a big difference. We try to do it right. We're willing to work with people, do what they expect, hang the grapes longer, just do all the stuff that make the grapes better."

John says he picks grapes in the morning because it's cool. The grapes are loaded into refrigerated trucks soon after picking and delivered to wineries in Johnson City, Fredericksburg and Austin.

I asked John what he likes to grow most, cotton or grapes. "I'd much rather grow grapes but somebody's got to pay for the grapes. Cotton pays for the grapes for the time being."

John's large house sits on a hill and has an extremely plush wine cellar. It is climate controlled and has close to a thousand bottles of wine in it.

BUSINESS SERVICES The business services industry is a very broad industry encompassing many different categories of business operations. All of them provide some sort of financial service to other companies. These services include advertising, marketing, consultation, logistics (including travel and facilities services), waste handling, auditing services, shipping, administration, and security services to name a few. Nearly every business in operation has need for at least one of the different kinds of services offered by the industry. Marketing companies are responsible for increasing the sales of a client company by helping the company gain new customers as well as keep current ones. Legal services are needed to deal with business transactions, as well as for litigation purposes. Logistics and shipping companies are responsible for connecting businesses to other businesses or consumers by collecting, storing, transporting, and delivering products. Staffing companies match people to most of jobs, temporary or permanent, with companies in need of qualified employees. Leasing companies fill a client's need for certain items without requiring full purchase. Security companies are responsible for keeping a company's assets secure. Consulting companies are in the business of offering their expertise that clients cannot fulfill themselves. These companies may offer professional, scientific, or technical consulting, management or strategy consulting, or human resources consulting.	Tara's Quilt Barn                  CABA DUNCAN Quilting                  New York, NY 10014                  903-438-1970 903-348-6170	EDWARDS USED CARS                  The very best in late model used cars, trucks and motorcycles!
