SAM IS MAKING ANOTHER MOVIE

Tumbleweed Smith

Tumbleweed Smith

Sam Pfister of Georgetown makes movies about real life. "Why make anything up?" he asks. "Truth is more interesting and fascinating than anything you could make up. Just tell real stories."

Until he started making movies eight years ago, Sam had no background in film. He is in oil and real estate. In 2016 he heard about friends of his in Fort Stockton driving down a small road with a chicken in the bed of their pickup. That lead to some outrageous events and Sam thought it would make a good story.

He stood at his drawing table in his office and wrote a movie script. He found a young woman in Georgetown who had done a documentary on a hospital and Sam hired her to direct the movie and create the music. The movie, titled BLANCHE came out a year later.

"The movie has been streamed more than a million times and won forty-two laurels. It won film festivals in London, Barcelona, Florence, Rome and in Sweden and Poland." Sam's second movie which came out during the panedmic was titled TEN IN TEXAS about ten Texas women smuggling vaccine into a Mexican border town. "That movie has won 24 laurels and is being streamed all over the country. It won film festivals in Sweden and Poland."

Sam's films are on Amazon Prime. "My movies are uplifting and have no sex, no cussing, no violence. They have happy endings. That's a far cry from what you get on tv or in movies made in Hollywood."

Sam has lost money on all his movies but keeps making them in the hopes that some professional movie makers will start making good movies with a G rating.

He was staying at the Settles Hotel in Big Spring when he heard someone playing the piano on the mezzanine. Sam went up there, introduced himself and asked the pianist to play Gershwin's EMBRACEABLE YOU. The pianist started playing the song and then drifted into RHAPSODY IN BLUE. Sam was impressed. The pianist was Sergio Solani who immigrated to the US from Caracas, Venezuela and performs with symphony orchestras all over the world. He was in Big Spring because he had bought three hundred acres of land north of the city sight unseen. It is now producing many barrels of oil a day. Sergio told Sam, "America offered me three things: security, freedom and opportunity."

Sam thought Sergio's story was fascinating and began thinking about so many immigrants he has met who are more pro-America than many people who were born here. "They realize what America is all about." Sam went back to his drawing table and wrote a movie about immigration titled TEXAS RHAPSODY. It is now being filmed at the Settles Hotel. The Big Spring Symphony Orchestra. With Sergio at the piano, will be featured in the movie. Sam has hired professionals to direct and film the story. Segio will compose the music.
