The Bold Hackberry Emperor Butterfly

"Hackberry
Butterflies often land on people.
Photo by Tom Berg."

Although many species of butterflies in Indiana are shy of humans and fly away if we get too close, the Hackberry Emperor butterfly often acts just the opposite. These small butterflies routinely fly in circles around a person and then boldly land right on their skin! They may be daring, but they are not crazy. They are usually merely interested in 'licking' the sweat on people's skin to obtain the salts in the sweat.

Hackberry emperors, also known simply as hackberry butterflies, get their name from the tree that is the host plant for their caterpillars: the hackberry tree. These butterflies will only lay their eggs on hackberry leaves, similar to monarch butterflies that will only lay their eggs on milkweed plants.

Hackberry butterflies are generally brown or tan in color, with a row of white or blackish dots along the edge of their wings. Their hind wings have several small, but very distinctive eyespots that are black with a light blue center. These eyespots are also ringed with a yellowish color.

Adult hackberry butterflies eat a wide variety of foods. Surprisingly, they eat very little nectar from flowers. They prefer to feed on the juices from decaying fruit, from dead and decaying animals like squirrels, and even from animal dung. They routinely land on muddy ground near puddles and lakes to drink water, but also to extract minerals from the mud. As mentioned earlier, they love to land on humans to extract sodium from the sweat on our skin. So just remember, if one lands on your arm it is not going to bite you – it just wants a little of your sweat!

Here's what's Cookin'

By Phyllis Hays, #11 with Trixie

Carrot Cake

6 cups grated carrots
1 cup brown sugar
1 cup raisins
4 large eggs
1 ½ cups white sugar
1 cup vegetable oil
2 teaspoons vanilla extract

1 cup crushed pineapple,
drained
3 cups all-purpose flour
4 teaspoons ground cinnamon
1 ½ teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup chopped walnuts

Combine grated carrots and brown sugar in a medium bowl, then stir in raisins.
Preheat the oven to 350 degrees F (175 degrees C). Grease and flour two 10-inch round cake pans. Beat eggs in a large bowl until lighter in color.

Gradually beat in white sugar, oil, and vanilla. Stir in pineapple. Combine flour, cinnamon, baking soda, and salt in a separate bowl, then stir into egg mixture until absorbed.

Stir in carrot mixture and walnuts. Pour evenly into the prepared cake pans.

Bake in the preheated oven until a toothpick inserted into the center of the cake comes out clean, 45 to 50 minutes.

Cool for 10 minutes before removing cake from the pans; let cool completely.

Frost this delicious carrot cake with Cream Cheese Frosting.

Fit & Healthy Family Guide

It's a Spring Thing! Healthy Tips for the New Season

Get moving!

It probably feels more achievable to start an exercise regimen in the sunny springtime than in the cold, dark winter. Some say springtime is the real new year, and some people find their exercise resolutions easier to stick to in March, April and May. Runners will enjoy getting back outside for their jogs; but if you prefer other forms of exercise, try a bike ride on one of Rhode Island's bike paths or gather some friends for a game of tennis at your local court.

Spring cleaning

We're sure you've been anticipating a thorough house/garage cleaning after the long winter months concluded. While this may seem like a laborious chore, tidying up your living space will make your home and mind feel clearer. Just as organizing your home will make spaces feel larger and cleaner, this act will have a similar effect on your mental health. Clearing clutter and putting your things where they belong and out of your path will help you clear your mind and check items off your mental checklist.

Eat more greens

Have you been surviving on soups and comfort food this winter? Try swapping these out for lighter dishes that better reflect the new season, like salads or fish. The greenery that is starting to emerge around you may inspire you to add green foods into your diet more often. The farmers' markets will feel more inviting when the sun is shining, or if you have a green thumb, you can get back to your garden for your own fresh vegetables and herbs.

Foods to boost your immune system

The following are 10 different foods that are known immune boosters. Try any or all of them and start reaping the benefits these nutritional powerhouses offer your body.

Berries - Fish Oil - Leafy Greens - Nuts & Seeds - Citrus Fruits - Poultry - Brightly Colored Vegetables - Yogurt & Cook with Olive Oil

Other ways to boost the immune system naturally

Exercise regularly
Don't smoke
Manage stress
Alcohol in moderation only
Manage your weight.
Get proper sleep
Practice good hygiene
Drink plenty of water

Fit & Healthy Family Guide

It's a Spring Thing! Healthy Tips for the New Season

Reconnect with others

Now that our winter hibernation is over, it's time to re-enter our social lives and make plans with friends and family. Many people prefer staying in during the winter, but the warmer weather may serve as a motivator to get out and be social. Call up a friend you haven't seen in a while or plan a picnic with your family to reconnect and spend quality time with loved ones.

Introduce healthy food choices into your meals. Try adding an array of colors to your plate and think of it as "eating the rainbow."

Rethink Your Drink. Water is always the healthiest choice when it comes to selecting your beverage. Remember to stay hydrated as those temperatures begin to increase.

Be Sun Safe. As it becomes more enjoyable to spend time outdoors, don't forget to protect your skin from the sun. Don't forget to lather that sunscreen on and find shade.

Brush Your Teeth. Oral health is important for overall health. Brush twice a day with fluoride toothpaste.

Happy Spring!

Earth Day, celebrated annually on April 22, is a global event to raise awareness about environmental issues and encourage action to protect our planet, promoting conservation and sustainability.

Easy Spring Landscaping Tips To Elevate Your NW Indiana Yard

Healthy soil is the foundation of a beautiful landscape! It sets the stage for a lush, green lawn. Yards with proper nutrient levels naturally resist weeds, disease, and adverse conditions for a more beautiful look. If you have never had a soil test for your lawn and garden, the first step on your spring landscaping list is to have your soil pH tested.

A Few Fine Details That Elevate Your Landscaping

Before adding spring plants and decorations haphazardly, analyze your yard's layout. Think about the details that elevate a yard to the next level and plan ahead to incorporate some professional landscaper tricks into your spring landscaping.

Symmetry and Balance

– Create mirror-image plantings on either side of a path to add symmetry to the look. Consider plant height, color, and texture to create balance.

Focal Points

– Give the eye something to be attracted to! Vibrant specimen trees, a yard statue or art piece, or even a multi-layered flowering bed adds visual interest.

Hardscaping

– Adding brick or stone edging, low walls, and flower boxes to define walkways and focal points is a great way to increase your home's curb appeal.

In a world where there is a cost for everything, the grace that comes from Jesus is free because HE PAID IT ALL. From the grace that saves us to the grace that empowers us to live out our faith, the fact that it is free is impossible to comprehend.

If you are looking for this unearned, undeserved, and unfailing gift from God, join us for worship at Hope Community Church for this life-changing series.

"The Aisle Seat"

by Tim Fealy

"Adolescence" is a 4-part limited series on Netflix. We follow the characters in real time, often in one continuous shot. We follow 2 police officers and their team as they raid a house, busting down the front door and finding their suspect, a 13-year-old boy named Jamie. We then follow Jamie & his family to the station where he is booked and processed for an alleged murder. The way it is filmed makes everything feel very real. We are with the parents as the details of the crime are revealed. We follow along as the detectives interview classmates and look for evidence. We are in the room as the psychologist talks to Jamie. And finally, we are with the family as they cope with life after the incident. Is Jamie innocent? And what exactly happened and why? This is a very intense, binge worthy drama that will leave you thinking about the characters long afterwards. An episode might be two characters talking for the entire episode. This may sound boring, but the conversation is so compelling. On my scale as to what I would pay to see this, "Adolescence" gets $9.

Also on Netflix is the more light-hearted option, "Running Point" with Kate Hudson. Isla's family owns the professional basketball team, the Los Angeles Waves. She has spent her life being overlooked and counted out until she gets the chance to be the company President. Of course, not everyone will accept her in this role, including her own brothers. The players and other company owners also not used to having a woman in charge. This is a wonderfully pleasant show that is just silly fun. Need something to help you unwind before heading to bed? This will do it. While enjoyable, "Running Point" never takes the extra step in developing characters that you either want to hang out with or that you will care what happens to them. This is a huge loss as Isla's character is someone you would really want to root for. Watching this also reminded me of how much I loved the characters and their development in another sports-themed show, "Ted Lasso." On my scale, "Running Point" gets $6.
