"The Aisle Seat"

by Tim Fealy

Fall is my favorite time of year. It is the season for both football and Halloween. For the football fans out there, my recommendation is "SEC Football: Any Given Saturday," a limited docuseries available on Netflix. The SEC is the most competitive conference in college football and has the most players drafted to the NFL. The series follows the 2024 season for several of the teams in the conference. With interviews from coaches, players, family members, and analysts, we are given an inside look at both the pressures and preparation that go into a season. LSU Coach Brian Kelly comments on how crazy it is to have a job where your ability to pay your mortgage depends on a bunch of college kids. Throughout the season and episodes, there are surprising victories and crushing defeats. How a team comes back after a big loss or keeps going after a series of losses is incredibly inspiring. If you are a football fan, you will love this "insider's look" at the game. Even if you are not, you will still love the storytelling and drama that comes along with the season. On my scale as to what I would pay to watch this series, "SEC Football: Any Given Saturday" receives $8.

Yes, it's only September, but it's never too early to start the Halloween season. In "Ready or Not," available on Hulu, a new bride marries into a wealthy family. The family fortune, made from selling popular board games, is the result of a devil's pact which states that, on her wedding night, the new bride must play a game with the family as part of an initiation. The game is chosen at random and can range from checkers to "Old Maid." Unfortunately for the bride, she chooses "Hide & Seek." In this version, she hides as the rest of the family tries to find and kill her. If they cannot find and kill her by morning, the whole family might die. This dark comedy is full of twists and surprises. This movie grabs your attention and keeps it until the final scene. On my scale, "Ready or Not" receives $8.

Gardening Tips

Add Color with Mums and Pansies in Your September Garden

Instant impact! That's what you'll get when you add ready-to-bloom chrysanthemums and pansies to beds, borders, and containers. These easy-care plants relish cool weather and provide an injection of color in your September garden. Look for stocky plants that are still in bud so that you can enjoy them longer. Blooming plants are great if you need color for a same-day event, but they're further into their bloom cycle and won't last as long as budded specimens.

Garden Tip: Chrysanthemums are available in two basic types: florist and garden. Florist mums make wonderful gifts, but do not do well outside. For landscape use, look for garden mums.

Plant Spring-Flowering Bulbs

Enjoy a bounty of bloom in your garden next year by planting spring-flowering bulbs now. Tulips, daffodils, crocus, hyacinths, and other early-bird bloomers can be massed in beds by themselves or tucked in between established perennials and shrubs. Planting bulbs is easy: Just dig individual holes (8 inches deep for large bulbs like daffodils, 4 inches deep for smaller bulbs such as crocus), drop the bulb in, and cover with soil. Or, dig one large hole and toss in a dozen or more bulbs. Planted this way, they'll pop up in one impressive drift of color.

Garden Tip: Select a variety of bulbs that bloom at different times to ensure color from early spring through to early summer. Some species, such as snowdrops, bloom as early as February, while late bloomers such as alliums flower in early June.

Fit & Healthy Family Guide

Make a new fitness routine, September is the month to do it!

If you've found it difficult to stick to a fitness routine amidst the chaos of summer holidays, work and catching up on socialising, don't worry – September is here and it's scientifically proven to be the perfect time to reset your fitness routines, set new goals and reclaim your motivation.

Why September?

For most people, it's New Year's resolutions and January 1st that act as a marker for a whole new fitness focus, but September is more effective if you want to start a whole new fitness regime.

"The mornings and evenings are lighter, giving you time at the start and end of each day to exercise outdoors," she says. "It's likely to feel warmer in September than in January, and the weather is usually better, too.

"As an added bonus, without the public pressure of sticking to New Year's resolutions, you can quietly build up your resilience to exercise, which in turn means that you're much more likely to stick to your workouts as the weather turns chillier."

Back to routine

Now that the summer holidays are over, more people are returning to their usual work schedule and the kids are going back to school, it's a great time to take some time to think about what we want our lives to look like.

Plot your workouts into your schedule

Don't be vague about when you'll do your workouts as you're less likely to do them. Instead, plan a specific time into your calendar that will actually work for your timetable and also your body clock. So if you're a morning person, early workouts are probably key, while for evening people, lunchtime or teatime slots might work better.

Put your kit out the day before

The day before, get your kit out ready for your next day's workout and leave it somewhere prominent so that it reminds you that you are committed to that decision to exercise. It's also a good idea to look at what's coming up in your CycleMap the night before. This means that you're mentally prepared, and it also helps you make a silent promise to yourself to complete it.

Buddy up

Join up with a friend for at least one of your workouts a week. By committing to exercise with a pal or partner, you add a slight social pressure and can hold each other accountable if one of you doesn't turn up. It's also more fun! Time flies when you're doing an ab workout with a friend. Find out more about why working out with a friend is scientifically proven to help you get fitter.

After Evil — Comes Peace

Many hope for a day when evil will end and the world will live in peace. Has evil been a curse to mankind, or has it served a higher purpose in God's plan for man's school of life lessons?

Those who have considered the topical Bible Study — The Permission of Evil and Its Relation to God's Plan — found the sound wisdom of God for his delayed Day of Peace announced by the angels at Jesus' birth.

We invite you to use the links below to this study. You can email / write to us for the details to get the book The Divine Plan of the Ages for this and 15 other topical studies.

Here's what's Cookin'

By Phyllis Hays, #11 with Trixie

Rotisserie Chicken Ravioli

(Family Features) Turn hectic weeknights into simple, enjoyable evenings at the dinner table with a secret weapon: rotisserie chicken. Versatile, delicious and likely to leave leftovers for later in the week, it's a perfect solution for Rotisserie Chicken Ravioli to keep your loved ones on schedule during the school year. Find more family dinner ideas from Cookin' Savvy at Culinary.net.

Servings: 4-6

1 package (25 ounces) cheese ravioli
1 rotisserie chicken or leftover chicken
1 head broccoli
1 tablespoon garlic powder
1 tablespoon onion powder
1-2 cups chicken broth
1 jar alfredo sauce

Cook ravioli according to package instructions and set aside.

Cut up rotisserie chicken, using as much as desired. Cut broccoli into bite-size pieces or smaller. In pan over medium heat, heat chicken through. Add garlic powder and onion powder. Deglaze pan with 1 cup chicken broth then add alfredo sauce and broccoli.

Pour in remaining broth if sauce is too thick. Stir in cooked ravioli and heat through 2-3 minutes.

Outdoor Observations

by Tom Berg

The Wary Gray Fox

Most foxes are secretive by nature. North America is home to both gray and red foxes, and both tend to be nocturnal and mostly hunt at night. But the gray fox seems to be even more elusive than its slightly larger cousin, the red fox. Gray foxes can be found throughout most of the United States and Mexico, although they are absent from the northwest USA. They are more common in southern Indiana than in other parts of the state, too.

As might be expected, gray foxes are mostly gray in color. Their back and face are a salt-and-pepper gray color, and their gray tail is black on top and red below with a dark black tip. Their legs, neck and ears are a warm reddish color, while their chest is white. Most gray foxes measure 12-16 inches tall at the shoulder and weigh 8-12 pounds. Some large males might weigh 15 pounds.

Gray foxes are sometimes called "tree foxes" due to their unusual ability to climb trees. In fact, they are the only North American canine species capable of climbing trees. Their front feet have retractable claws they use for climbing up tree trunks, and when climbing down they usually back down slowly like a cat.

Gray foxes do not seem to be adversely affected by coyote populations, unlike red foxes which can be displaced by coyotes. The gray foxes may be able to avoid the larger coyotes simply by climbing trees when confronted by them, thus avoiding predation. The photo of the gray fox shown here was taken by former Indiana resident Alan Garbers.

Biblical Citizenships

IN MODERN AMERICA

Starting October 12th

Throughout our history, American pastors & churches have played a vital role in establishing and preserving religious and civil liberty.

Living as a Biblical Citizen requires a knowledge of Biblical principles and how to apply them to the culture around us.

Join us at Hope Community Church for an 8 week series as we seek to restore Biblical values in our neighborhood, State, and Nation.

The air you breathe travels through your ductwork. Over time dust and debris accumulate, also inviting pet dander, mold, dust mites - even vermin! Your indoor air quality depends on the condition of your ductwork. Compromised air quality can trigger respiratory illness such as allergies and asthma.
