What to offer!

So you found your dream home. You are in love, it's perfect. You can see your family living there. Your ready to put in the "offer". Your parents tell you the market is a buyers market, put in a "low" offer.

Your friends tell you they know someone who got their house $40,000 less. All of a sudden everyone you know is a real estate professional. Well let's step back, right now the current inventory is at an all time low. What does that mean, it means there are not enough houses out there for buyers. So that changes the market and you are going to see a sellers market.

What happens then multiple offers on houses. The houses that are priced right, show delightfully and are well maintained will sell with more than one offer. This is not the time to be putting in a "low" offer. First, you insult the seller and chances of any negotiations is tough, and in the end you pay more for the house. When putting in your offer, put in a fair and reasonable contract because you may find you don't get a second chance at it. The most upsetting thing is when I tell a buyer there is more than one offer, put your best foot forward and they insist on a low offer. It's hard to explain to them that the other offer was accepted and that it's time to start looking again.

They keep asking why didn't I get a counter, there was no need the seller had a better offer from the get go and yours wasn't it. Listen to your agent who is the professional not all the people who think they know best.
