DNR releases 2016 fishing regulations for Mille Lacs Lake

www.newshopper.net

Regulations designed to anglers must not possess any protect the fish needed to rebuild Mille Lacs Lake's walleye population will require that walleye anglers use only artificial bait and immediately release all walleye when Minnesota's 2016 fishing season opens Saturday, May 14.

"A catch-and-release walleye season allows us to protect future spawners yet acknowledges the desire that fishing remain open," said Don Pereira, fisheries chief for the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources. "Not allowing harvest is a difficult decision but it provides our best option."

From May 14 to Thursday, Dec. 1, anglers targeting walleye must use artificial bait and immediately release all walleye caught. Anglers targeting northern pike and muskellunge may possess and use sucker minnows longer than 8 inches but all other other bait that is live, dead, frozen or processed.

Other changed regulations for the 2016 season on Mille Lacs include:

Walleye: Night closure beginning Monday, May 16, from 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. and continuing through Dec. 1. Muskellunge anglers may fish at night but all baits, live or artificial, in possession must be at least 8 inches long.

Northern pike: Five fish with only one longer than 40 inches. All northern 30-40 inches long must be immediately released.

Bass: Four fish with only one longer than 21 inches. All fish 17-21 inches long must be immediately released.

Last year on Mille Lacs, walleye anglers could use live bait and keep one walleye 19-21 inches long or longer than 28 inches. Walleye fishing closed in August when fishing pressure, the number of fish caught and temperatures combined to push the state over its 28,600 pound walleye limit. Fishing re-opened on Dec. 1, 2015, with a walleye limit of one 18-20 inches or one longer than 28 inches.

This year's safe walleye harvest level established by the DNR and Great Lakes Indian Fish & Wildlife Commission remains at 40,000 pounds, with 28,600 allocated to state anglers and 11,400 to tribal anglers. Allowing fishing beyond those limits puts the walleye population at risk and a federal court decision requires that walleye fishing be suspended.

"The possibility of closing Mille Lacs to walleye fishing is greater this year than it was last," Pereira said. "Even with our catch-and-release approach, the risk remains considerable."

Concern stems from the additional pressure that hooking mortality – an estimate of the number of fish that die after being caught and returned to the water - has on walleye harvest. Hooking mortality rates also increase as water temperatures warm. Both factors are at play in Mille Lacs this year.

The DNR expects more small- and intermediate-sized fish to be caught, including fish hatched in 2013 that biologists are counting on to rebuild Mille Lacs' walleye population. These immature fish, which are approaching a more catchable, but comparatively small size of 14 inches and longer, need to be protected, so they can spawn. Ice is opening on lakes earlier this year, increasing the likelihood that water temperatures will warm faster and sooner.

"A low level of allowed harvest doesn't necessarily mean slow walleye fishing," Pereira said. "As we saw last year, factors can combine to alter estimates and require adjustments. We believe that allowing no walleye harvest through catch-and-release is a reasonable yet cautious response based on in-depth analysis and citizen input from the Mille Lacs advisory committee."

As part of a more comprehensive study to better understand and estimate hooking mortality, the DNR will collect a variety of fishing information on Mille Lacs this summer. Temperature sensors will be placed in different parts of the lake at different depths to more accurately record temperatures where walleye congregate. Information on fishing methods and catches will be collected, too. Part of the information collection aspect of the research information meeting.

At the Ironton City council meeting on March 16, Fire Chief Jeff Thompson was asked about the request for increase in the pension for the volunteer firemen from $500 to $650 per year in 2012.

Thompson said, "No, I haven't got any answer on that."

Thompson spoke about a tentative fire protection contract with Tromald for $1,500 per year for up to six calls. Then $200 per call after that. He also indicated most of the calls from Tromald would be private vehicle related and would most likely be billed directly to the owner's auto insurance and not at the expense of the City of Tromald. Councilman Clark Hamdorf thanked Thompson for inviting him to go to a pipeline

Councilwoman Angie Kugel asked about the status for a controlled burning of some fields. Thompson indicated he would ask permission to burn from the DNR.

Bruce Swanson presented information about this year's Klunker Funk bike event on August 6. Swanson said that Surly Bike Company had a booth at last year's event. This year Surly would like to help promote the event and have a booth again this year. They were hoping to add a food vender for the event this year. Some details of the event were still in the works and would be announced later. Council approved the event request.

There was some discussion about submission of the example of the Black Duck rental ordinance for the City Attorney for review. There was some discussion about including all rental properties not just short-term vacation rental properties in the property inspection requirements. Currently no city inspections are required for rental properties and no decision was program will allow Mille Lacs' fishing launches to be exempt from the live bait

"Anglers fish close together on launches, making it extremely difficult to safely cast artificial lures rather than dropping baited lines into the water," Pereira said. "Since the DNR needs more data to refine its hooking mortality standards, asking launches to provide this data will allow a traditional, popular and enjoyable method of fishing on Mille Lacs to continue."

Launch operators receiving a permit can use live bait provided they agree to participate in efforts to collect data from fishing trips, launch customers and cooperate with the hooking mortality study. Their permits would be suspended if walleye fishing on Mille Lacs has to be closed.

Bass regulations compro-

Anglers can keep four bass in any combination of largemouth and smallmouth, down from last year's limit of six fish. The new regulations add a requirement that all fish 17-21 inches be immediately released, and the length restriction for the largest fish an angler may keep increased from 18 to 21 inches.

The early harvest offered on Mille Lacs also was eliminated, requiring that - like the rest of the state - all bass caught during the first two weeks of the season be immediately released.

Mille Lacs' exemption to the statewide fall closure of the smallmouth bass season remains, meaning that anglers may keep smallmouth bass they catch on Mille Lacs through Feb. 28, 2017.

DNR changed the regulation to balance bass angling groups' call for stricter regulations to protect Mille Lacs Lake's world-class smallmouth fishery with the desire and need to provide anglers opportunities to harvest fish.

"Bass regulations are a compromise," Pereira said. "Last year's regulations were biologically sound but it was important that DNR also factor in the emerging social aspects in this year's regulations."

The ability to exempt large bass tournaments from the size regulation and bag limits remains.

Northern pike regulations

Mille Lacs anglers can keep five northern pike, only one of which can be longer than 40 inches. All fish 30-40 inches must be immediately released.

The five-fish limit was initially enacted last December. The protected slot limit replaces the provision that allowed anglers to keep only one fish longer than 30 inches.

The earn-a-trophy provision that required anglers to harvest two smaller pike before one larger one was eliminated for the 2016 open water season.

North Carolina moves to protect women and kids' privacy rights

North Carolina lawmakers want to protect the privacy of women and children. They will hold a special session to consider undoing a troubling city ordinance. It could also stop other cities and counties from enacting similar rules. In February, the Charlotte City Council passed a so-called sexual orientation/gender identity measure that allows men access to women's bathrooms, changing rooms and locker rooms. John Rustin, president of the North Carolina Family Policy Council sent a letter to Gov. Pat McCrory, urging him to stop these dangerous ordinances.

"These changes mean that men can enter women's restrooms, shower rooms, bathhouses and similar facilities in any 'public accommodation' in the City of Charlotte," he said. "This would place the privacy, safety and dignity of women, children, the elderly and others at great risk of physical, emotional and/or mental harms inherent with unexpectedly encountering an individual of the opposite sex in a facility that is deemed to be private."

Similar ordinances have been used in other states to drag Christian business owners to court.

Rustin explained that they have forced "small business owners such as florists, bakers, photographers, bed and breakfast owners and others who have sincerely held religious beliefs about marriage and human sexuality to either conform to a government dictated viewpoint or face legal charges, fines and other penalties. The Charlotte ordinance directly violates the constitutionally protected right to religious liberty, which our Founders considered to be our first and most cherished right."

Lueck bill advances in House

Rep. Dale Lueck, R-Aitkin recently introduced legislation to resolve an issue created by the disestablishment of the Central Minnesota Community Corrections joint powers organization.

Both Crow Wing and Morrison Counties decided to withdraw from the three county organization in order to establish their own county based Community Corrections Act (CCA) program effective June 30, 2016.

Current law does not allow a county with a population of fewer than 30,000 citizens to establish their own county based CCA program. Aitkin County with a population of just over 16,000 is left to find another joint powers organization to join and go through an unnecessary and disruptive reorganize of the very effective group of probation officers currently delivering corrections services in Aitkin County.

Lueck's bill (H.F. 2870) would remove that 30,000 population limit. That will allow Aitkin County probation officers to continue to operate as they have under the Community Corrections Act in same manner as their colleagues Morrison and Crow Wing Counties will do after June 30.

In a recent letter to CommissionerTom Roy, Minnesota Department of Corrections, Lueck wrote; "As a former Aitkin County Commissioner, I have complete confidence that Aitkin County will operate an excellent corrections organization as a stand-alone CCA county."

During committee testimony during a House committee meeting Thursday, Aitkin

County Probation Director Elizabeth DeRuyck provided detailed testimony on why it makes sense to allow Aitkin County to seamlessly transition from a joint powers CCA organization to a county based CCA organization. Both DeRuyck and Lueck pointed out this matter needed to be resolved in a timely manner as the Central Minnesota Community Corrections organization will cease to exist after June 30.

The House Public Safety and Crime Prevention Policy and Finance Committee moved the bill forward for consideration and a vote by the full House. The Senate's companion to Lueck's bill also passed out of the Senate Judiciary Committee this week moving it forward toward a vote by the full Senate.
