DEL RIO'S BIKER PRIEST

Tumbleweed Smith

Tumbleweed Smith

Clay Hunt grew up tending flocks of sheep on the family ranch near Brackettville. Now he's tending another type of flock. He is a Catholic priest at St. Joseph Church in Del Rio. "Looking back I can see that the Lord was preparing me as I was doing my daily chores on the ranch," says Father Clay. "I didn't recognize it at the time, but as they say, hindsight is 20-20. If you could talk to some of my friends, they would tell you they were surprised to find out I was a priest."

He stays busy.

"On Sunday we have six masses because this parish is fairly large. We have about 3,500 families," he says. "We're one mile from the border of Old Mexico. This barrio, called Chihuahua, is predominantly Hispanic, so we have 75 percent of our liturgy in Spanish. We have 16 scheduled masses a week."

He is a popular figure around Del Rio. You can definitely call him a character. He rides a motorcycle and carries a gun. People call him different things. "Pistol Packing Padre is my favorite," he says. "I grew up hunting. I grew up with guns. I'm a patriot and love our country. I love the principles under which our country was founded and that was part of the wisdom of our forefathers, who said we have the right to bear arms."

He says he rides a steel horse.

"I've been riding motorcycles about 25 years. I went to school at Sul Ross State University in Alpine and used to ride up in the Davis Mountains and Big Bend National Park. So I've always had a great love for motorcycles. Here in the fall we do what's called The Blessing of the Bikes. We typically ride out west of here to the Pecos High Bridge and have a mass out there. We do the Blessing of the Bikes and enjoy our time there with some food, then we ride back together."

It's difficult to say just what type of outfit he's wearing. Once on St. Peter's Square in Rome a British reporter stopped him. "He recognized that I was a priest by my collar, but what threw him off was the rest of the way I looked. I was wearing a biker jacket. I had a big handlebar mustache and I had a beanie cap from Jerusalem. He got a kick out of that. Sometimes I have a full beard that is strikingly red. My grandmother was a red head. Sometimes I shave my head. It is unique to have like a cowboy priest or a biker priest. People like it, you know, they get a kick out of it. They like to see that their priests are just regular people." Father Clay says the journey to the priesthood is lengthy. He studied 10 years and served in Mexico and San Antonio before being assigned to Del Rio. He likes being close to home.

Just like you, I have a lot of other interests in my life besides work. However, work for me has many interesting sides, and these extend beyond the radio station and out into the community in every direction. In fact, the job at KSST, music, the local people and their history are so interwoven that I could never untangle it, should I want to! I'd like to show you just a glimpse of the last few days and the interesting visits/calls/requests I've been blessed with.

Lou Erck, former KSST announcer and his son Charley came by on a trip "back home" from Montana. Lou is 92 now. While he reminisced in the lobby about early KSST days, in walked Adam Teer. Adam is now manager of the Hopkins County Civic Center and was raised at Reilly Springs. Their immediate connection... the Reilly Springs Jamboree. Adam's grandfather and great-uncle started the show in the 1950's, and Lou back at the radio station "put them on the air" for those Saturday night broadcasts. Bob and Joe the Shelton Boys, Lou Erck and KSST's Peavine Pinion were all great friends. With the "radio museum" on-site, how neat that the studio can remain steeped in the history of the "good ole days".

Lou Erck in the "Radio Museum"

I met Western singer James Michael Hosea and his mother a few years ago at the coffee shop downtown Sulphur Springs. Other members of their family including his brother John drifted in during that lovely evening of music. Last week, John was again accompanying their mom (now age 97) on a Texas tour to visit relatives and he stopped in at the studio to see if I was "still working here". We had a nice chat and I got James Michael's great new CD, "Meadowlark" which showcases his singing and songwriting. Please get a copy, you'll be inspired. The West is still alive!

James Michael's CD, Meadowlark

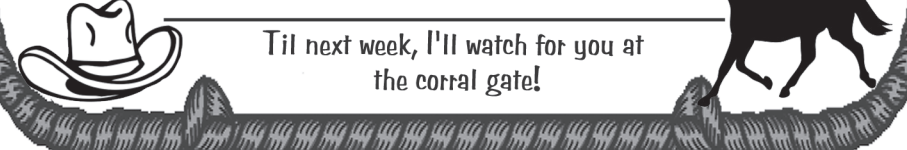

A day or two later I got a call from a young lady who works in a bank in Sulphur Springs, inquiring about her musician grandfather. Seems he sang and played on early KSST broadcasts from the downtown studio above the square. Unfortunately, I was not aware of any recordings in existence of those broadcasts from the late 40's and early 50's. Does anyone out there remember Billy Joe George and Christine and their music?

I answered the phone again, about a near-miraculous event that took place in Sulphur Springs decades ago. The caller was trying to re-establish contact with the woman in the story. As local lore has it, a man walking along a small street near the edge of town heard an infant crying, and saw some movement down in the ditch. He saw it was a baby, alone and in distress. He ran and alerted authorities who came and rescued the infant. After a time of hospitalization and care, the baby was adopted by a local family who raised her in Sulphur Springs. Today, through her job and church, this lovely woman carries on a mission of helping others less fortunate.

My friend and yours, Meredith Caddell is heading for new horizons. She is taking over the reins as Director of the Hopkins County Healthcare Foundation. I asked for a little work history, and got a lot! Before becoming Chamber of Commerce President and CEO 8 years ago, Meredith taught sign language for the deaf, worked as a planner for cities building handicap-friendly areas, was a goodwill Director and event planner for Up With People in 9 different countries and the US, traveled the country as a Cable TV trainer for HBO, then closer to home taught Medical Technology and Computer Sciences at Paris Jr. College from 2002-2008.. She married Jake Caddell in 1998, and they have two children, Addison and Ryder. Her mom is Cathey Pribble Williams, office manager at the Chamber office in Sulphur Springs. Meredith's heritage in event planning traces back to her grandfather's rodeo, the Mike Pribble Fourth of July Rodeo which she helped with during her childhood summers. She and family will remain in the area. Meredith's only changing hats!

THE IDLE AMERICAN
GRAND Parents; Fair Grandparents...

Commentary by Dr. Don Newbury

Dustin Jordan, prospective graduate of Hamilton, Tx. High School soon.

rural living a while back on property miles from town off a dirt road.

Few people pass their house going to town. They're coping on even terms with "old-timey" life-gathering eggs, planting gardens and driving tractors. And they glance out their windows regularly to see "if it's coming up a cloud."

Overall, this well-known public speaker and his wife deserve an "A+ life grade" heading into sunset years. (He served three decades in Grapevine schools, rising from classroom teacher to principal to district PR director.) They raised three children, and now are responsible for a grandson during his senior year of high school....

It would be untrue to suggest Dustin has magically become a "good farm boy." After all, he was thrust into the role last summer when his folks moved to the hill country.

Still ringing in his ears is his grandparents' generous offer to provide room and board so he could finish Hamilton High.

Oh, the warm memories he can share--this candidate for graduation in a few weeks-- including ones from a recent night when "it came up a cloud."...

To prepare for such times, the Jordans built a storm cellar--upgraded from the ones they scurried into as children when ill winds blew through. It is concrete lined, and has electricity, six comfortable chairs and board games.

Out of sight--and hopefully out of mind--is any evidence of social media, TV and such.

When Riney yelled warnings about a storm the other night, Karen happily followed him to the cellar. Dustin, however, opted to "stay put." After all, Chicago Fire--a favorite TV show--was on, and it is his habit to watch it while shoveling down a mountain of vanilla ice cream generously slathered with chocolate syrup. Riney and Karen often join him in the dessert repast, although with reduced portions....

They aren't apt to fret when Dustin's objections are rarely voiced. So they proceeded to the cellar without Dustin in tow.

As winds howled outside, they voiced prayers for him, so concerned for his safety they didn't even begin board games. Before long, their cellphone sounded. It was a text from Dustin saying how much he'd enjoyed both the TV show and dessert. He also sent a picture of four heaping scoops of ice cream, chocolate syrup sloshing against the side of the bowl. Touche.

Maybe this is a memory Dustin will share with his grandchildren when they ask him, "What's a storm cellar?"...
