Change

A friend of mine used to say, 'There are two things you can always be sure of: death and taxes'. She and I are both from Connecticut, so we understand the tax reference all too well. But, as we come to the closing week of another school year for my children, I'm realizing there is one more thing we should've added to that certainty list: Change.

This past year a lot has transpired. Not only did my baby enter middle school, but my middle baby became a high school freshmen, and my oldest got a job, turned eighteen, got accepted to an amazing four year college. She will be graduating from a two year college program in addition to high school in three days.

Time is so unforgiving. It just won't slow down, and from what I hear from veteran parents (most of whom are empty nesters) it's only going to go faster from here. It's hard to believe it could. I'm sure it was just yesterday that my college bound beauty was a talkative little curly haired toddler (yes, believe it or not, she used to be super chatty, of course 'til she realized people were paying attention lol). She did everything early. Potty, walk, talk, read. The only thing she didn't do early was get a driver's license. At almost nineteen she just never had much interest. (That was quite ok with me, until I realized how often I had to taxi her...)

Another change that will be inevitable in just a few months: the dynamics of our family. We will no longer be a (present) party of four. With the oldest moving away to college, living in a dorm with her new roommate, we will be one less. One lively, humorous, sarcastic, loving, amazingly loyal, hard working person less. Our family will always be together, but not often geographically. That surely will be some change.

It makes me think two ways. One is that with this new change, comes more change. In relationships at home; the way we'll spend our time, the conversations we'll have at dinner and the ways we will now bond differently without big sissy. The other way it makes me think is WOW what an accomplishment: for her, for me, for us. For her school system. We did it! As a parent, there is something so rewarding when you see your child (or someone else's) succeed and set off to do what it is they want to do in life. No matter what that is. It's a pat on the back to families, to each teacher who helped her get this far and to each positive influential person she met along the way who helped her take shape and continue on a path of motivation for her future.

Being the person I am, I hadn't shed a tear yet! Not for her growing up from that little bubbly two year old, not for taking her first steps, doing things on her own, becoming a teen, entering high school, graduating or preparing for college...until one moment. As I watched her little sister put prom makeup on her a couple of weeks ago. It was then, that the sudden realization hit me! My green eyed beauty had just pulled off four years of high school, 'like a boss'. That was over and done with and she was headed to college! And she had grown into this amazing woman. All of her eighteen years just came flooding back. I darted out of the room, apologized for my uncharacteristic tears and blubbered for a few minutes in the bathroom. For the first time in my life, I wished that just this once, time would stand still, even if only for a second. But it didn't. I had to force myself to remember how special this time in her life was to her and how happy I've been for each and every big-girl step...even this one.

I couldn't possibly be sad at this stage in the game! And, I can't tell you how happy I am that I hadn't cried all the way here! I feel like I would have is one of the best summer camps to keep young minds busy while you're at work

Every summer, parents are challenged with how to stimulate the minds of their youngsters while providing a fun, safe summer. Endless hours in front of the TV screen just won't cut it!

Now in its 31st year, Lakeland's College for Kids is a fun, academic-based summer camp to keep your child learning. By coming to our campus, they'll learn that college is a time and place to explore. It's so much fun that they won't realize that they're learning!

College for Kids has been one of the most popular camps in the area for elementary-aged children.

Here are the top three reasons so many families choose to send their kids to college for our summer camps:

1. Drop off early – pick up late

A drop off time of 7:30 a.m. is great for parents who need to get to the office early. Pick up can be as late as 6 p.m., so you have time to leave work and make it through traffic.

2. Academic setting

All programs are expertly developed by credentialed staff to be age appropriate and fun!

3. Options

Don't need a full eight weeks? We offer four-week options as well as five days a week (M-F) or three days a week (MWF) to meet the needs of working parents. There are also one-week camps for those who just want to try a little something. (Note: drop off and pick up times vary for one-week camps.)

College for Kids features hands-on activities in science, art, music, recreation, math, creative writing, and good citizenship. Programs are designed to be fun, promote curiosity, and a desire to learn. Camp fees include supplies, hot and cold lunches, afternoon snack, and convenient before and aftercare.

New this year is the Lakeland Teen Academy. These programs are designed to engage middle- school-aged participants in programs that have a focus on potential career interests such as: architecture, manufacturing, entrepreneurship, graphic design, authoring, and more! Additional topics include photography, fitness, social justice and global leadership, future veterinarians, and working in nature. These one-week sessions are taught by area professionals and business owners.

Lakeland is partnering this year with the Great Lakes Science Center! These programs are for grades K-8 and focus on scientific exploration, critical thinking, in a hands-on environment. Topics include: Skywalker's Galaxy, Lego City Scape, Crazy Chemistry, and Minecraft Multiverse, Video Game Design, and more.

The Road to College is Paved with Gold

by Carole Richards

The total amount of American student loan debt is now $1.3 trillion spread out over 43.3 million borrowers. The average student loan debt for the class of 2015 was $35,000.

Student loan delinquency is 11.6% but $239.5 billion are in deferment, forbearance (can't make your current payment but don't qualify for a deferment) or default. A Harvard study found that due to the cost of college, many students are dropping out without a degree and with huge amounts of debt.

The average yearly cost of tuition and fees at a private, non-profit, four-year universities this school year is $43,921 -- up sharply from $16,213 in 1975-76 (in current dollars). At public, four-year schools, tuition and fees cost about $19,748 per year. In the 1975-76 school year, tuition, room and board averaged $7,833 per year (College Board).

"If you look at the long-term trend, college tuition has been rising almost six percent per year above the rate of inflation," said Ray Franke, a professor of education at the University of Massachusetts, Boston. "That's brought immense pressure from the media and general public, asking whether college is still worth it."

So why is college so expensive? First, in order to compete for the best and brightest, colleges have increased student services by 17% since 2000. College sports programs are not always funded by the programs and the cost is passed on to the students whether they play a sport or not. This is particularly true in Division 1 schools.

Payrolls have expanded by 28% due to increasing enrollments but much of the staff is for student services. Yet, fewer full-time faculty are being hired and replaced with less expensive part-time staff.

Colleges argue that they now receive less government funding for their schools. Yet, we consumers must tighten our belts when we don't have enough money. Colleges haven't yet learned that economic lesson. And our government keeps encouraging students to enroll in college. Colleges know that student loans are available so they have an open checkbook to continue to raise tuition

While universities say they need to provide better student services, and pristine buildings. Wouldn't it be better to lower tuition and allow students to afford college? As enrollment decreases, colleges are left the the high cost of maintaining pricey new buildings

Good News – If your student is exceptionally bright there are some great deals at the most elite schools. The cost of Stanford University is $46,000 tuition plus $14,000 room and board. Any family with an income less than $125,000 receives free tuition. You still have to pay room and board.

missed it all if I wallowed in a repetitive circle of sorrow each time she hit a new phase. Because as I mentioned earlier, we can all be certain of a few things in life, and one of those is change. It's not ever going away and it's only going to go faster.

With two more birds still in the nest, I have time. Time to cherish. Time to spend. Time to teach, laugh, hug and step back to watch them grow. And with my big girl? It's not goodbye, it's just a new chapter. I know where she is, and she knows where I am. My first born is only a text, meme, phone call, or a few hour drive away.

Harvard College tuition and fees amounts to $66,900 including room and board, but 70% of Harvard students receive some form of financial aid. A Harvard education is more affordable than a state school for 90% of American families.

The road to college is paved with gold for the colleges, I'm not sure the students fare as well when they graduate in many cases.

I know that the veteran parents were right, it's going to be a quick ride from here. But I refuse to start looking backward, at the past, at my kids being little...and be sad. I will hold their hands still, sit them on my lap, I will continue to kiss them in public and wave to them across the field or auditorium celebrating their lives and their future. Invasion of the Cicadas

by John Pogacnik, Biologist

Lake County is due for an invasion this summer and the invaders are a large black and orange insect known as the periodical cicada. The last time they occurred en masse in Lake County was 1999 and 1982 before that. Periodical cicadas spend the first 16 years of their life underground and emerge the 17th year. They will emerge in huge numbers toward the end of May when the soil is 64 degrees.

Cicadas belong to the insect family known as true bugs, which are plant-sucking insects. There are two groups of cicadas, annual cicadas and periodical cicadas. There are 13 species of annual cicadas (most of which are green and black in color) in Ohio, but most are only found in the southern part of the state. Periodical cicadas are orange and black with red eyes and groups are called broods. In Ohio, there are four broods of 17-year cicadas. Brood V covers the eastern half of Ohio, southwest Pennsylvania and West Virginia. This is the only one affecting Lake County. Other broods affecting Ohio are brood VII in extreme eastern Ohio, brood X in western Ohio, and brood XIV in southern Ohio.

The periodical cicadas will emerge in late May. If you get out at night, you may see the nymphs crawling up the trunks of trees. They climb up into the tree where they'll shed their outer skin and emerge as adults. When adults emerge they are white, but then will darken into their black and orange coloration within a few hours. When their wings harden enough they will fly higher into the tree and by morning only the empty shell will remain. In a week or so the males will begin to call. They are often in such high numbers that their sound will drown out even the sounds of singing birds. They will mate, and the female will cut a slit into the branches of trees to lay her eggs. The egg laying will occasionally kill the ends of branches—called flagging—which is recognizable by the dead branch tips and occasional broken branches hanging. Later in the summer, the eggs will hatch and the young will climb down the tree where they will spend the next 16 years of their lives in the ground. The adults will typically be gone by the first week of July.

Cicadas do not bite and are harmless to humans and pets. In Lake County, periodical cicadas will be most common in the southern half of the county. Their numbers have declined due to habitat destruction, so they may not appear in all areas. If you miss them this year, you'll have to wait another 17 years.
