James Kaple Overcomes Drug Addiction, Becomes Mentor And Inspiration At WSCC

Stop by Wallace State's Machine Tool Technology Department, and it's easy to absorb the family atmosphere within the walls. James Kaple has been one of the shining lights of the family over the past two years and graduated Friday after overcoming a drug addiction that lasted nearly two decades.

"I am proof that's it's never too late to change how you are living. I grew up in a good, Christian family and knew right from wrong. When I was 18, I went out and started hanging around some of the wrong people. They weren't bad individuals; they just weren't the best influences. We got involved into smoking, drinking and smoking pot," said Kaple, now 42 years old. "I eventually got hooked on cocaine for a while and then I was addicted to meth for 12 years. I lived with my grandmother at the time, and it came to the point where I felt imprisoned. I didn't want to leave her house. I didn't want to go outside. I relied on drugs." Kaple's drug addiction hit a breaking point years later when he was kicked out of his grandmother's house.

"I hadn't talked with God in a long time and got to the point where I didn't even believe in him that much. I sat down and asked God to either take me out of this world or help me change the way I was living," Kaple said. At age 38, he was required to serve a 90-day jail sentence in Lawrence County for a drug-related crime. "I was in a better place mentally. I was doing better, but I was missing my family (in jail). I had plenty of time to think about what I wanted to do next," Kaple said.

Even when Kaple was battling a drug addiction, he had thoughts of enrolling in Wallace State's Machine Tool Technology program, especially because his uncle Randy Moon was the program's department head. Moon had always encouraged Kaple to find a fresh beginning. "I knew a lot of people who were machinists before I even came to Wallace State. For me, it was a matter of finding the motivation to do something good for myself. I just didn't want to put the effort into it," said Kaple, who lives in Hanceville. "I did know I didn't want to be working dead-end jobs the rest of my life."

Kaple enrolled in Wallace State's Machine Tool Technology in 2014 and celebrated his three-year anniversary of being drug free last November. Kaple's journey to graduation has definitely been an encouragement for other students potentially struggling with their own personal demons.

"Jamie is a very outstanding young man and has been a great role model and mentor to our younger students and to students who are experiencing problems in life. He's never shied away from sharing his story with our class, and I think it's helped our students," said Wallace State Machine Tool Technology instructor Gary McMinn. "There is a different dynamic here than there is with an academic program. We spend so much time together. A group of students starts here and they stick together for two years. They spend time in class together and eat lunch together throughout an entire week. It becomes a true family and they lean upon each other."

Kaple compiled a 3.7 GPA as a Wallace State student. He currently works at Irondale Custom Machine, where he's been since August, but says as he continues to work in Irondale, he still plans to stop by Wallace State any chance he can to check in on his Machine Tool Technology family. He may even have a student or two to mentor.

"My times at Wallace State have been some of the best in my life. I needed something like Wallace State in my life. It's been one of the best choices I ever made," said Kaple, who also credits members of New Union Baptist Church in Hanceville for helping create a new path in life.

 A special thanks to everyone for all the loving prayers on behalf of our loved one, Billy Moon, during this sorrowful ordeal and his passing. We greatly appreciate all the individuals and churches who sent food, calls of concern and prayers. Special thanks to Bro. Jerry Fleming, and to Brenda and Donnie Fox, The Joyful Hearts, Roger James and Living Faith Singers. We will never forget the loving kindness of Gentiva Hospice for the gentle care of our loved one as he passed through the valley on his way to his heavenly home.
 My love for you has always been true,
 From the very time, I said I do.
 But if we say goodbye down here,
 I will meet you again in Heaven Dear.
 For I will always love you.
 We love you all,
 Judy & Josh Moon

Older men starting alpha-blockers, commonly used for treating enlarged prostates, have a higher risk of ischemic stroke during the initiation phase, although this effect is not apparent in men already taking other blood pressure medication, found new research in CMAJ (Canadian Medical Association Journal). Alpha-blockers were developed to control hypertension but are now used mainly in older men with prostate hypertrophy because they seem to be inferior to other first-line blood pressure drugs in providing cardiovascular protection. They are strong vasodilators and can have adverse effects. Men starting alpha-blockers can experience a large drop in blood pressure with the first pill or in the following days, which increases the risk of stroke.

 Patients with mild heart failure stand to benefit from a new drug that can halt the progression of their disease and reduce their risk of cardiovascular-related death. But the drug- a tablet that combines the agents valsartan and sacubitril, sold under the trade name Entresto by drugmaker Novartis- may be too good to be true, according to Arthur M. Feldman, MD, PhD, Executive Dean of the Lewis Katz School of Medicine at Temple University (LKSOM), Chief Academic Officer of the Temple University Health System, and Laura H. Carnell Professor of Medicine at LKSOM. In an article published online December 7th in the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. Feldman and colleagues at Thomas Jefferson University and the University of Florida warn that valsartan/sacubitril could theoretically increase patients' risk of Alzheimer's disease and macular degeneration, a blinding condition affecting the retina of the eye. The article raises these concerns about the drug, which was approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration in July 2015.

Seventeen years this month...a lifetime ago sometimes it does seem, When you left our reality and our family fell into a bad dream. Time that has passed has healed no wounds simply forced us to change, Forced us to find a new comfort zone in a place so empty and strange. Taking for granted the value of a brother until you left that day, Not realizing your vital significance until I felt the emptiness that late May. Every moment in my life, as my big brother, you were there, Exploring, fighting tickle monster and summer days without care. Generally the voice of reason you often kept my ideas grounded in check, In the blink of an eye the loneliness left my mental state a wreck. Over the years we have carried you along in spirit, thought and reflection, I'm sure you hear your name in our daily prayer in words of affection. I thank you for all the memories and for the genuine brotherly love, I can't wait until our family is united again riding on the wings of a snow white dove!

MARX OPTICAL

Mark Brock holds an infant found in a cardboard box at a dumpsite in Guatemala where he was helping out during a mission trip. The baby was healthy and in the company of its mother, who was searching through the dumpsite.

Brock Forging New Path With Nursing Degree

Mark Brock isn't your typical college graduate. At 50 years old, he's already graduated college once and worked for 25 years supporting the Department of Defense's Space Defense Missile Shield, or Star Wars, program and other security and intelligence programs. But now, Brock has earned an Associate in Applied Science degree in nursing from Wallace State Community College; completing a new path he started about five years ago.

Brock, of Arab, said one of his earliest childhood memories is hearing the parable of the Good Samaritan in church: "As soon as he saw the man, he went over to him and felt compassion for him. He put bandages on his sores and poured oil and wine on the sores to prevent them from getting worse." The parable's message, he said, is simple, "Go and do the same."

Brock took that message to heart and, as a counselor and teacher of youth at his church; he participated in many domestic and foreign mission trips to help others. But after each trip he would return home to his job and resume his normal life.

In 2011, however, he wasn't able to put the memories of his last trip aside so easily. In August of that year, he traveled to Jacmel, Haiti, to assist an orphanage and small church congregation still reeling from the 2010 earthquake that devastated the area. "On the last day of the trip, the pastor I was traveling with encountered a young girl who was obviously sick, with open sores and running a fever," Brock said. "We had some medicine, including antibiotics; however, I was unsure of the correct course of action having experienced adverse reactions to medications. We did the best we could, but for me it seemed lacking, a small drop into an ocean of need. I felt like I was issued a challenge."

When Brock returned from that trip, he got back into the routine of his every day life. "I would like to say I took immediate action, but I did not," he said. His "wake up call" came a year later when he became unemployed. "For me it was a put up or shut up moment and I had a choice to make. Choose to pass by on the other side or go in a different direction."

He chose a different direction, one that led him to Wallace State nursing program, where he was impressed by its "impressive NCLEX pass rates, a great reputation in the community, and a financially affordable cost of education."

Not having attended college in almost 30 years, Brock admits to facing some challenges in the enrollment process due to previous records that were now unavailable, but he said the faculty at Wallace State went "above and beyond" to help him with those records and in translating his work experience into curriculum requirements. He said the faculty at Wallace State, both academic and in nursing, proved very helpful and willing to go the extra mile to make sure he succeeded. He said he's impressed that even after two years some of his first instructors on campus call him by name and ask about his progress.

Brock continued his mission work while completing his studies at Wallace State. One of the missions he went on was to Jalapa, Guatemala, where the group he works with, Four Friends International, was building its first health clinic.

The clinic is about half a mile from the city trash dump, he said. When the trucks come to dump things, the poor people will go search through the dump for things to eat, use or sell. "So we were there one day and there was a lady that had just had a baby, that baby was about 20 days old, and while she was looking through the dump, she had put the baby in a cardboard box, so that was the baby's bed, this cardboard box," he said. She'd placed the baby in the shade of a tree and within her site as she searched through the dump.

Having just completed his OB/Peds rotation, Brock said he examined the child. "The baby seemed fine and was healthy," he said. They told the mother about the clinic so she could get help there when she needed it.

"It's somewhat surreal," he said of the situation that was in stark contrast to what he'd just experienced in an area hospital. "It's heartbreaking, especially when you've just done clinicals and you see the facilities we have here. But at the same time, that lady was doing everything she knew how to provide for that baby, and the baby was safe."

Brock said he plans to continue with his mission work as a nurse and as he continues toward his goal to become a nurse practitioner. "It isn't without some fear that I, as a 50-year-old man, will once again enter the workforce as a new graduate this year," he said. "However, I know that the faculty and curriculum at Wallace State have prepared me to achieve my potential and given me the basic ability to fulfill Jesus' command to 'Go and do the same.' Maybe I too can be a Good Samaritan."

WE HAVE MOVED

After 20 years in the Cullman Shopping Center, low traffic and construction made it necessary for us to move our events for them to survive. Our NEW LOCATION is next to the East Side of Wal-Mart's parking and in front of Carmike Cinemas (Marketplatz Center). Mr. Roy Drinkard graciously invited us to use this space.

We are very thankful for each of you who have faithfully supported us and we ask for your support in our new location so we can continue to offer scholarships, support the annual steer and heifer show, & several other things we help with when we have earnings exceeding our cost.

Plan every aspect of your life ... plan how you'll be remembered too.

Reasons for Pre-planning

- Make Logical Decisions
Pre-planning prior to an illness is less emotional; therefore resulting in more practical decisions.
- Make Your Wishes Known
Pre-plan as many details as you so desire.

- Economical
Prices are locked in with no price increases. This could save hundreds, even thousands of dollars.
- Peace of Mind
Knowing you are not leaving your final arrangements to grieving loved ones.

If the answer is Jesus, why then do most so called Christian people not hear Him! Every soul which will not hear that prophet will be destroyed from the people (Acts 3:23) and The Words He spoke was His Father's (Jn 14:24)! Christ is The Holy Truth (Jn 14:6), came in His Father's Name and ye receive Him not: if another comes in his own name him ye will receive (Jn 5:43)! Most so called church Christians claim to believe in Jesus Christ, yet will not hear The Biblical Written Words of Christ, i.e., (Mt 5:17-19, 7:21-29, 15:9, 25:1-13, Jn 4:22, Heb 13:8)! But hear man's theology (theories) and traditions and interpretations (Rom 1:18-32, 2Cor 11:13-15, 1Jn 2:3-4)! So Be It! Ron & Jeri
