Multiple Offers What's that!!

So a new listing hits the market, you call your agent. Your so excited you know this is the house for you. You view it, you love it, your ready to write the offer. Your agent writes the offer and listing agent informs your agent there are multiple offers. UGH what happens now. So the listing agent tells your agent that you need to put your best offer forward and you have till noon on Friday. What this means is now how bad do you want the house, can you live without it, or if you lose are you okay with losing it. Now you have to decide how bad you want the house. You may only get one chance with your offer. Buyers think well if I put in an offer they can always counter it. Not true on a multiple offer situation, in the offers they get there may be one acceptable offer there and they accept that. Now your mad because they didn't counter you or give you a second chance. This is when your agent tells you to put your best offer forward because someone is going to lose. If you need more explanation please give me a call, its a complicated position to be in.

CAR TALK, WITH HOLLY SROKA

Sroka's Service Center

Whenever we have a customers wheels off, especially if they are aluminum, we clean the white/tan corrosive buildup off the wheel and the brake rotor or drum mating surface with a sander. When the wheel is reinstalled onto vehicle, cleaning allows the wheel to sit flat, and run "true" while spinning. Secondly, even if the lug nuts are torqued, if this corrosive buildup is not removed, over time it will disintegrate, leaving a gap and the lug nuts loose, and that's not good news.
