Mother, Daughter Complete Nursing Degrees Together

If you are a mother - especially a single mother - you know there are many times that you make sacrifices for your children, sacrifices that sometimes go unnoticed or without acknowledgement because that's just part of being a parent. And you wouldn't do anything any differently even if you could because you want the best for your children.

Maleatra Granger is that type of mother, according to her daughter, Kimberlyn Granger, both of whom are recently graduated from Wallace State with Associate in Applied Science degrees in nursing. Their adventure began about three years ago when Kimberlyn told her mom she was going into nursing school. When her mom told her she'd thought about doing the same, Kimberlyn told her "Well then, we might as well go at the same time." And that's what they did.

With credits they'd earned previously, the pair was able to take every single nursing class together. Kimberlyn said sometimes people would ask her if it was odd or if she gets embarrassed about going to college with her mom, and the answer was always no, "because she's really my best friend outside of school anyway."

Both women had a built-in support system as they went through one of the hardest programs at Wallace State. Kimberlyn said her wiser mom helped her see things from a different perspective when Kimberlyn got stuck on a problem. Maleatra said Kimberlyn's organizational skills helped her prepare for tests and exams. "Because I worked, she'd make us study guides whenever we had tests coming up," Maleatra said. Kimberlyn would tell her to look over the PowerPoints and study guides when she had time at work to make sure she was prepared. "Sometimes she thinks she's my mom and tries to boss me," Maleatra said.

Through it all, the duo held each other up, encouraged each other and maybe even competed a little at first. But now they are celebrating their success, each more proud of the other for their accomplishments. "I think I'm more excited about her graduating that I am myself," Kimberlyn said. "I'm just proud she got the opportunity to do it."

The family has had to overcome struggles over the years, a house fire, health scares and lost jobs, just to name a few. Kimberlyn said her parents divorced when she was 9 years old, something that took her a while to understand was probably for the best. Kimberlyn is the second of Maleatra's three children, and Maleatra always put her children first, even if it meant putting her own schooling aside or even quitting a job one time to take care of her son when he was sick.

"I tried to make sure that they had the foundation that they needed," she said. "Being there for them was more a focus than what I felt like I needed to do for me."

With her children growing older and her youngest in high school, Maleatra decided to go back to school. "Which I gave her the idea, by the way," Kimberlyn said proudly. "I felt like at that point that I could take the time, because everybody was doing pretty much what they needed to do for their future," Maleatra said. "So it was a good time for me to get into what I needed to do, because they weren't always going to be there."

When Kimberlyn started in college, she told her mom she could go to college, too, offering to help out at home financially with proceeds from her own job at the time. By the time Kimberlyn brought up the subject of nursing school, Maleatra was working as a caregiver for a quadriplegic patient, so going into nursing was a natural fit.

Both women said it's been fun - aside from the stress - to come to school together. Logically, Kimberlyn said it made sense for both of them to come to the same college instead of driving to two different colleges for the same purpose. They chose Wallace State's nursing program after touring the "jaw-dropping" facilities at the college. They were also impressed by the helpfulness and hospitality of the staff during their visit. "All the teachers are like, hey, how are you doing, even though we didn't go here and they didn't know that, but they were nice and welcoming and we really liked that," Kimberlyn said. "And once you did talk to them, you got the feeling that they wanted you to succeed," Maleatra said. "You felt like it was as important to them, just like it's important to us."

As they started classes, most teachers didn't realize the pair was mother and daughter. Some thought they were sisters or just two people who shared the same name. Kimberlyn said it was pretty funny when people realized they were mother and daughter. Kimberlyn said she's not sure if she would have done as well or even completed the program had her mother not been by her side. "I felt if I was by myself I would have given up a long time ago," she said.

Her mother disagreed, sure her daughter would have gone on to finish even if she hadn't been by her side. "But going through it with her, I understood the complete stressors of being in nursing school," she said.

"Because just like there were times she may have felt like pulling her hair out, I felt like pulling my hair out, too."

Special Set Of People Attend Cancer Survivor's Graduation

Danielle Chestnut had a special set of folks rooting for her as she accepted her diploma from Wallace State on May 13. It was a group of nurses she has kept in touch with since she was 11 years old who, she says, influenced her career choice after she experienced first-hand their care as a child. The Holly Pond graduate, who survived cancer when she was 11 years old, says "What stood out to me from all of them was their love, passion and support and the encouragement that they gave me throughout the entire time."

Chestnut earned her Associate in Science degree as a student in the joint admission program with the University of Alabama at Birmingham, where she will transfer to earn a degree in nursing. From there she plans to study to be a nurse practitioner in oncology/pediatrics.

Chestnut, who now lives in Fultondale, said she was diagnosed with non-Hodgkin's lymphoma after going to the hospital because she was having trouble breathing. What was presumed to be pneumonia was actually cancer when test results showed a softball-size tumor mostly in her chest, but also in her legs and in her lymph nodes. "The tumor was pushing into my airway and I only had one-quarter of an inch to breathe," she said.

For the next six months, Chestnut took chemotherapy treatments at least once a week. "It turned my life upside down," she said. She lost her hair, the treatments left her nauseated and it was a lot for a little girl to take, especially when she didn't really know what was going on at the time. The worst part, she said, was not being able to go to school and missing out on events. She was out of school for a year and a half, but home-schooled to keep up with her studies.

Chestnut, 21, said she's been in remission now for about eight or nine years. She lives independently and works part-time at Wallace State as an intern in the Advancement Office. Along with her school work and her job, Chestnut is an SLA math tutor, and a member of the Pi Theta Kappa honor society serving as its vice president of fellowship, is the secretary of the Sigma Kappa Delta English honor society, is treasurer of the Student Government Association, and is a member of the Mu Alpha Theta math honor society and the Wallace State Alumni Association. She's been awarded a UAB Phi Theta Kappa transfer scholarship and a joint admission scholarship to UAB.

Though Wallace State was a natural choice for a Cullman County native, Chestnut said she's glad she chose the school because she feels like family there, that the faculty and staff are outgoing and they care about each student individually. "They care where you're going and what you're going to do," Chestnut said. "They encourage and support you in your career choice and help you reach the next step you need to take."

Along with many outstanding faculty and staff, one person who's been an inspiration to her at Wallace State is Suzanne Harbin, Director of Advancement at Wallace State.

"She is someone who has encouraged, supported, and loved me from day one," Chestnut said. "I have found passion, leadership, and a family. She succeeds at everything she does and handles things very well. These characteristics alone not only make her into the person she is today, but also the person I hope to be in the future. Her outstanding qualities have molded me into a real leader. I myself have faced my own personal trials through life, but Mrs. Harbin has played a positive role that will influence me the rest of my life. She taught me to never give up on my dreams."

BLUE TAG SPECIALS:
 We have HUNDREDS of non-advertised items marked down throughout our entire store. More savings passed on to our customers. Just look for blue tags on the shelves.

NO LIMITS:
 Our competitors also have advertised specials. The difference is, in most cases, they have a limit on how many of an item you can buy at the sale price...we don't have any limits to family shoppers.

Using paroxetine (Brands: Paxil, Pexeva, and Brisdelle)- a medication prescribed to treat conditions including depression, obsessive- compulsive disorder, anxiety and posttraumatic stress disorder- during the first trimester of pregnancy may increase newborn's risk of congenital malformations and cardiac malformations. That's the conclusion of a recent analysis published in the British Journal of Clinical Pharmacology. Up to one-fifth of women of childbearing age experience depressive symptoms that often lead to mild to moderate depression, and prescriptions for antidepressants during pregnancy have increased in recent years. The most common drugs for treating depression in pregnant women are selective serotonin reuptake inhibitors, and up until 2005, one drug in that class- Paroxetine- was considered to be safe for use during pregnancy.

Proton pump inhibitors (PPIs), which are commonly used drugs to reduce acid in the stomach, appear to be associated with an increased risk of chronic kidney disease but more research is needed to determine whether PPI use causes kidney damage, according to an article published online by JAMA Internal Medicine. PPIs are one of the most commonly prescribed medications in the United States and an estimated 25 percent to 70 percent of these prescriptions may have no appropriate indication for use. Other observational studies have linked PPIs to serious adverse health outcomes.

Using statins before and after coronary artery bypass grafting (CABG) surgery can help reduce cardiac complications, such as atrial fibrillation, following surgery. Statin use also can reduce the risk of death during and after surgery, according to a review article published online in The Annals of Thoracic Surgery.

The beast cannot change recorded history of pagan worship, nor the millions of people murdered in the name of religion! Many churches teach Christians are not under law and have liberty to do most of what The Holy Father said not to do! (It is their word against The Holy Bible)! The Holy Truth (Jn 14:6) is not accepted (Mt 5:17-19, 7:21-23, 15:24) by most so called church Christians. The doctrines they worship of changed times and laws is to beguile mankind (Gen 3:1-5)! The Bible is Holy and should lead all churches as one, yet they do not agree (250 in Cullman alone)! The beast's lawless religion (Dan 7:25) seeks to destroy the Holy principal to love the law of righteousness (Jn 5:42-47, 14:15)! So Be It! Ron & Jeri
