Residents react to the fire at Dick's Bakery

On Sunday, May 22, there was a devastating fire at Dick's Bakery, a Willow Glen business that drew customers from all over Silicon Valley.

"I was sorry to learn about the fire at Dick's Bakery this morning," said Susan, who hails from Gerald Way.

"Who doesn't love their burnt almond cake? Often imitated but never duplicated, she said."

On the morning news reporting the fire, the front of the business looked undamaged, but the worst of the fire damage was in the back of the building.

"I'm sorry to hear about this, Susan. I also LOVED their burnt almond cake," said Tracy.

"I too, am sorry to hear this," said Bob from Bird Avenue. "They are a great local business. I hope they recover soon."

Trznadels to celebrate 75th wedding anniversary

By William Bellou

A remarkable Willow Glen couple, Al and Jean Trznadel, are hitting a milestone most dream about and never achieve. They will soon be celebrating their 75th wedding anniversary.

Al met Jean Granowicz at Sanders Confectionary Company in Detroit, Michigan and were married on June 15, 1941.

Soon after the bombing of Pearl Harbor, Al joined the Navy in December 1941 and was stationed in South Pacific driving the landing crafts taking marines and sailors to land mainly in the Philippines.

When the war ended, Al went to college and later worked in the automotive industry.

The Trznadels moved to California in 1960. Al received a job offer from United Technology where he successfully designed the valve that controls the fuel on Saturn Rockets.

Al and Jean raised two daughters that attended St. Christopher's church and school in Willow Glen. The children attended Notre Dame High School. Three Grandchildren all

Rutvik Gandhasri finished sixth in Scripps National Spelling Bee

By Sandhya Iyer
Times staff writer

Rutvik Gandhasri of San Jose represented the Bay Area in the Scripps National Spelling Bee in Washington D.C. on May 22, and came in sixth in the nation, with the chance to return to the competition next year.

Rutvik, a seventh grader, won 2016 CBS Bay Area Spelling Bee after competing with 49 spellers in 14 rounds that took nearly 4 hours and received a gold medal and a dictionary. Rutvik won second place last year.

The winning word? Jarabe — it's a Mexican dance.

"I feel really awesome about representing the Bay Area at the Scripps National Spelling Bee, especially after placing second last year," said Rutvik. "It makes me feel a lot better."

KCBS radio anchor Stan Bunger gave the 9 to 14-year-olds easier words at first, but they got progressively harder.

Rutvik's favorite book series is the popular Fable Haven by Brandon Mull. He loves to work with Lego Robotics.

Rutvik Gandhasri was born with an innate talent to spell. At five years old, he entered his first spelling bee and garnered third place. Even though that competition was informal, and simply encouraged young children to develop speaking skills, it set a trend for Rutvik's success.

From second grade onwards, the young champion participated in spelling bees organized by the North South Foundation, consistently performing with excellence.

Being selected to the Scripps bee (the ultimate honor for any speller) has been a dream for Rutvik ever since he was seven years old.

His current success has inspired his younger brother, Rishik, a fourth grader at Silver Oak Elementary, to follow in his footsteps. At only 10 years old, Rishik came in 9th place at the CBS Bee this year.

Both brothers are voracious readers and enjoy browsing through both fiction and non-fiction stories. Their mother, Usha Gandhasri, says that reading a variety of books is what helps them develop their vocabulary the most. Every week, Rutvik spends one to two hours studying words, but the time devoted to review is cranked up to four hours before competition. To prepare for Scripps in particular, Rutvik focused more on the origins of obscure words. His favorite word, 'omphaloskepsis,' means meditating while looking at one's own bellybutton, and is derived from Greek roots.

And while Rutvik masters new spelling techniques, he continues to be involved at Chaboya and in the community. He frequently participates in Math Olympiad competitions and helps underprivileged children gain a grasp on Lego Robotics, another thing he's extremely passionate about.

'We Made Our Voices Heard for Education in Santa Clara County'

By Supervisor Dave Cortese
Special to the Times

Her statement was simple and direct: "The quality of school food is not good. It tastes like rubber, and the majority of times it's microwaved. It's contradictory. Our First Lady is promoting healthy eating and fresh food."

Her question: "Why can't schools serve fresh food?"

That question from 12th-grader Victoria Nguyen of Oak Gove High School was just one of the concerns that students brought to legislators during our May 17, 2016, Bus Trip to Sacramento for Education, an annual event sponsored by my office and the Silicon Valley Education Foundation.

Our group this year – one of the largest in recent history at 208 – included about 100 students from Oak Grove, Independence and Santa Teresa High Schools and LeyVa Middle School. Along with the adult advocates for education, we filled four buses on the journey to Sacramento and a large auditorium in the State Public Health Department Building once we got there.

Speaking to us this year were Senators Jim Beall, Jerry Hill, Bob Wiecekowski and Trevor Taylor from the Office of Senator Bill Monning; Assemblymembers Mark Stone, Kansen Chu, Evan Low, Richard Gordon and Kaitlyn Schultenhenrich from Assemblymember Nora Campos' office; and State Controller Betty Yee.

The students were prepared and their arguments clear. Quality school lunches aren't important just because they taste better, but nutrition is important to growth and brain development, as well as replenishing our energy reserves so we can study and learn.

The answers from Assemblymember Mark Stone was supportive. "It's unacceptable to be living in one of the three largest agricultural areas and not have healthy food as part of the lunch program," he said. "But it's an initiative that kids could do in their schools. It's harder on the state level."

Another student asked about the rising cost of college tuition and why slots for California students are being given to foreign students. And why schools don't offer more career education or gender neutral bathrooms? Why haven't our textbooks been updated for 20 years?

Quipped Senator Jerry Hill, "Nothing has happened in the past 20 years you need to worry about."

But seriously, he said, the emphasis shouldn't be on textbooks anyway, but giving students more access to tablets and other electronic tools. "There should be a rechanneling with the electronic environment," he said.

The adults, of course, also got a chance to ask their questions and raise concerns. But our legislators wanted to give a strong message to students to start getting involved in government now. Their concerns are important and what the legislators do has a bigger impact on them than anyone else in the audience.

"It's so important that you're here," said Senator Evan Low, who pointed out that he is closer in age to the students in the group than many of his peers in the State Senate. "We work for you. You are our bosses. It's important that you hold us accountable. But we ask for your help. Make sure you vote."

Senator Low echoed the message I delivered to students early in the day: The elected officials speaking to you today need to respond to your concerns or eventually, someone else will be elected to their offices.

Silicon Valley luxury homes prices edge higher

Both luxury home sales and prices in Silicon Valley edged higher in April as the local housing market continued to perform well, according to a new report by Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage.

The figures are based on Multiple Listing Service data of all homes sold for more than $2 million last month in Santa Clara County.

A total of 154 luxury properties changed hands last month, up 2.7 percent from the 150 sales at that level last year. April's sales total were 37.5 percent higher from March of this year, although some of that sharp increase was due to normal seasonal gains as the spring home-buying season kicks into gear.

Meanwhile, the median sale price of a luxury property in April climbed 3.5 percent from the same month last year to reach $2,699,000. Last month's median sale price was also up from March 2016, when it stood at $2,611,500.

"Silicon Valley's housing market, including the luxury segment, remains one of the hottest markets in the Bay Area," said Mike James, president of Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage. "There's never been any question about demand from buyers, but now we're gradually seeing some more listings coming on the market to meet that demand and it's helping to keep sales strong."

CSR Cares donates $5,000 to nonprofit One Step Closer Therapeutic Riding

CSR Cares Foundation, a non-profit established by CSR Real Estate Services, donated $5,000 to One Step Closer Therapeutic Riding, Inc.

One Step Closer offers therapeutic riding and other equine assisted therapy to children with physical and emotional disabilities.

The School Readiness Program is an adaptive riding curriculum designed to help young children with special needs succeed in the classroom by developing attention span, eye-hand coordination, and appropriate behavior.

"When CSR Real Estate Services established CSR Cares, our goal was to donate funds to charities that aligned with our mission of affecting positive change for children in our community," said Terry Meyer, Vice President of CSR Cares. "One Step Closer is exactly the type of specialized program that we want to support, and more donations to local charities will be made throughout the year."

Times Local News

REVIEW:X-Men:
ApocalypseBy Steven A. Leonard
Times movie reviewer

The name of this film should have been called X-Women Apocalypse.

As soon as Jean Grey made her appearance I knew that the screenwriters were up to something special. I remember her from X-Men: The Last Stand. In that alternative Universe she was Jean Grey – The Dark Phoenix. She was the Queen of Darkness with unlimited power.

The emotional impact of that film was felt when she asked Wolverine, “Will you die for them?” Wolverine responded, “I will not die for them, but I will die for you!” It was Wolverine’s willingness to die for her that changed her soul from dark to light. In this film, her power was not unleashed for darkness but for the light. In this timeline she uses her unlimited power for the light.

Every human on this earth has been given gifts and power from above. We all have been granted free will. We may use our gifts and power for good or evil; for freedom or slavery, for light or darkness.

The mistake that mankind makes is that they believe that death, pain, sickness and weakness is a curse. They begin to use their gifts and power for darkness when they can’t protect their loved ones or when they suffer the loss and death of a loved one. No one can appreciate how precious life is without death, pain, sickness and weakness. Death is an illusion. Time is an illusion. These are the great teachers of our reality. The reality of our universe is dependent on our perception and our position in the time space continuum.

The Great Dark One rises again in this film. He calls himself Elohim, a name for God in the Old Testament. Since the dawn of civilization, he was worshipped as a god. Apocalypse, the first and most powerful mutant from Marvel’s X-Men universe, amassed the powers of many other mutants, becoming immortal and invincible. Upon awakening after thousands of years, he is disillusioned with the world as he finds it and recruits a team of powerful mutants, including a disheartened Magneto, to cleanse mankind and create a new world order, over which he will reign.

The irony of the film is that he gets rid of all nuclear weapons on the planet and we call him pure evil. Let me get this straight. He gets rid of all nuclear weapons on the planet and the rest of humanity thinks that it’s a really bad thing to do. I must have fallen asleep during my ethics class in college.

Jean’s unlimited power was kept under lock and key by Professor Charles Francis Xavier’s mind control before she became the Queen of Darkness in X-Men: The Last Stand.

The Dark One didn’t see her coming until it was too late. When Jean’s power was finally unleashed by Xavier and she walked in and faced the Dark One, it created an emotional impact on me. She let go of all her fears and embraced her gifts and calling. It made me proud and brought tears to my eyes that Jean was finally able to reach her full potential. It made me leap for joy that the Queen of Darkness was now able to become the Queen of Light.

The Dark One’s eyes were opened and in the end he finally understood who had the real power all along. It was a surprise when it turned out to be one of the X-Women. It was a delight for me when Raven was able to remind Magneto who his real family was and it was his real family that he should be fighting for.

A key part of the film was when Storm pointed to a portrait of Raven and proclaimed, “She is my hero. I want to be just like her.” In this film, Raven proclaimed that she was not a hero. Many mutants that heard her speech being televised live throughout the world in the previous film (X-Men: Days of Future Past) said that it was her speech that changed their lives forever.

The movie never loses sight of the emotional stakes. Fassbender, Lawrence and McAvoy class up the proceedings, and along with a cast of younger mutants and a surprise cameo, make it a lot of fun. Best superhero stuff I’ve seen this year, full of character-building and quick action beats.

For the seventh in the X-Men movie series, and fourth he has directed, guru of all things mutant Bryan Singer has created something for everyone. X-Men: Apocalypse is highly entertaining for fans of the X-Men brand; one of Marvel’s most reliable.
