River Jamboree - Nature's Fishermen

Hidden Valley Park

Sunday July 17, 2016 • 1 to 4 pm

Humans aren't the only fisherman along or in the Grand River. It is home to many fish and a variety of wildlife that survive by catching them. Cool off in the water as you explore different techniques of catching fish and other river creatures with nets.

Have you ever seen a fisherman standing on the bank of the Grand River? You might be surprised that they are not the only ones fishing on the river. Birds, insects, and other wildlife have to fish for their food. Come discover the amazing wildlife around Grand River at our activity stations and see what you can catch using different aquatic and insect nets. Visit with local conservation partners: Lake County Soil and Water, and more. This is a great summertime event for all ages.

Activities:

- Learning activity stations
- Live animals on display
- Self-guided hike on Grand River wildlife.
- Lake County Soil and Water
- Receive a FREE nature guide

The River Jamboree is scheduled for 1 to 4 pm on Sunday, July 17 at Hidden Lake Park in Madison Twp. The program is free for all ages. Register online at lakemetroparks.com or call 440-358-7275 or 800-669-9226.

Directions to Hidden Valley Park: Take I-90 to Rt. 528 south for 1.5 miles. Turn right (west) onto Klaseen Road. Hidden Valley Park is near the end of Klaseen Road on the left.

Get Your Fresh Local Produce and More at the Mentor Farmers Market

Mentor Farmers Market is returning to the spacious, tree-filled upper grounds of Garfield Park! From 2 - 6:30 p.m. on Fridays, now through September 30 (no market on July 1), come to the City of Mentor's Eleanor B. Garfield Park, located at 7967 Mentor Ave., where you can find a varying array of fruit and vegetables depending upon what are harvested. Items also include fresh baked goods, jams & jellies, syrups, honey, olive oil, other produce-related products and arts & crafts vendors. Knife sharpening services will be offered weekly. There will be free face painting during the market on July 8, August 5 and September 2.

Mentor Farmers Market is a partner with the Lake County General Health District's ACHIEVE Food & Nutrition Program. Participants receive $10 in vouchers for attending a class on nutrition. There are a series of three classes and they're held in Painesville, Mentor, and Madison. For information on ACHIEVE, contact the Lake County General Health District at (440) 350-2543 or www.lcghd.org.

STAY SAFE THIS SUMMER

by Ranger Brandy Hanusosky

Summer should be packed with great memories. Your family can enjoy the season by following a few easy safety tips.

PRACTICE SUN SAFETY

Avoid direct sun exposure as much as possible during peak UV radiation hours (10 a.m. to 3 p.m.) and apply sunscreen with an SPf of 30 or greater at least 30 minutes before going outside and then every few hours thereafter. Stay hydrated and watch for signs of heat exhaustion or heat stroke.

KEEP A FIRST AID KIT HANDY

First aid kits come in many shapes and sizes and should be accessible to everyone in the family, except for small children. Make sure it is stocked with everything your family may need. Include personal items like medications, emergency phone numbers and other items your healthcare provider may suggest. Check the kit regularly, make sure flashlight batteries work, check expiration dates and replace any used or out-of-date contents. You should have first aid kits at home, in your vehicles and one that can travel easily on outings and hikes.

BE SAFE AROUND WATER

Drowning is the second leading cause of accidental death for youth between the ages of five and 24. Kids need constant supervision around any source of water and should wear proper-fitting, Coast Guard-approved personal flotation device (PFD). It's also a good idea for kids older than four to learn to swim.

WHEEL SAFE

Make sure your child always wears a helmet and other protective

Giving kids advice

Kids don't always listen.

Well, I mean they do, sometimes.

But other times they just seem to think the grass is greener on the other side. I understand. I was a teenager once. I just had to know what it was like to skip school, date and stay up later than I should have.

Not that my parents told me not to date, but they most certainly didn't want me up too late (which I completely ignored, while I talked on the phone until 2am, then ran late to school everyday). And they most certainly did explain to me why cutting school would not be the best choice, but do you think that I listened?

Enter being sixteen with a 'knowitall' mentality and the license (literally) to make many of my own choices. I wound up learning some lessons. For starters: do not cut school. If you do, you just might get ratted out by your step-mother or get into a slight fender bender where the insurance company has to call your house. (Yes she called the school to report me and no it's not something I recommend parents doing...And no, the snitching and the accident weren't on the same day.)

There aren't many things kids are going to find appealing about parental advice. And with good reason. What kid wants to rely on pieces of advice thrown at them by some one who already dictates what they do day in and day out?

Even our adult children sometimes get an earful about what to do and what not to do! Why do we do that? Well, that is definitely a column for another day... For now, I'll tell you what kids hate about it.

Don't you remember being there? When your parents told you something, and before they finished their statement, you'd already hit them with the eye roll? Who knows better than you? Not your parents, that's for sure. And if they had,

it never sounded like fun.

Parenting is a delicate balance of guiding and giving freedom. We can hold on for a while, but at some point we have to let go and let them live their lives.

My oldest is headed for college. She isn't an uber busy kid; she doesn't like it, so she doesn't jam her schedule up with much. This past year she insisted on getting a job after years of me telling her not to do it. She was with me for a while on, it but she finally went her own way. My main belief has always been that kids will grow up to work some day, then never stop...so why begin so early? If I can provide for her, then why work as a teen if you don't have to? It all started with her wanting an iPhone (which I couldn't afford to get her). Okay, I could understand that. But I started working at thirteen years old. Not a horrible thing, but I think I might have changed things a little had I been given a choice.

She didn't care what I had to say. So, she spent all last summer searching, and she finally found a job in the fall. She did amazingly well! I was proud of her, we bonded over her dismay in her mistakes on the job as she learned her new responsibilities, and she pushed herself farther than ever to get up early in the morning! It seemed like it was going well, with her even receiving accolades from the boss!

Now, every summer she goes away for six weeks. And this year she will only return home to Ohio to prepare to leave again for college, so she had to put in her two weeks notice recently, and finish out her stint at her first job.

Can you say 'HAPPY'? That kid was so thrilled to say good riddance I didn't know what hit her! What? You mean all the times you had to wake up to go to work before 6 a.m. you WEREN'T HAPPY? All the times you worked an gear every time he or she bikes, skateboards, skates or rides a scooter. Helmets should sit on top of the head in a level position and should not rock forward, backward or side to side when snugly buckled. A child's bike should be the right size and should be in good working order. If your child is younger than ten, they should cycle/skate only on sidewalks, paths or other areas designated for such activity. Teach older children the rules of the road, including all traffic laws.

PLAYGROUND SAFETY

Children should not wear loose clothing or drawstrings when at a playground. Guardians should personally check equipment to be sure it is safe. Also check the area for bees/wasps. If you observe a problem, contact the facility responsible for maintaining the equipment right away. Supervise children at all times while they are at play.

KEEP FIDO SAFE IN THE "DOG DAYS" OF SUMMER

You may not realize how much the hot temperatures and sun can affect your dog. Please keep the following in mind to make sure your dog stays safe this summer: never leave your dog in the car; provide plenty of water at all times; apply sunscreen to the tips of the dog's ears, the skin around the lips and the tip of the nose when outside for prolonged periods; be cautious on humid days—even in the shade; make sure your dog doesn't overexert itself and keep it on a leash at all times.

APPLY SUNSCREEN AND STAY HYDRATED

8 Hr shift, only to get to bed after midnight and get up and do another 8 hours starting at 8 am, you WEREN'T HAPPY?

Well, seems she wasn't, not as much as she pretended to be. But isn't that what we do when we don't follow our parents' advice? Yes, yes it is. We (or now our own kids) do what we want, pay the price, then respond with a 'just below satisfactory' smile so we don't have to feel embarrassed, humiliated or worse...hear those infamous painful four words: "I Told You So".

So now, she is thoroughly enjoying her time; sleeping in 'til sometimes two in the afternoon, no longer missing out on family day trips and she's been making plans with her friends. Her life has never been so busy! The moral of the story? Sometimes it takes mistakes (i.e.; making decisions or doing life on their own to gain experiences (or pain) to make them realize that their parents were right.

Funny, she has way more money saved than she needs now, she never could justify buying that iPhone6, and I...got to...for the first time in my parenting history (and possibly future)...say...I told you so... (Which no, parents, I do not recommend saying- ever.)

Build Academic Skills While Having Fun

by Carole Richards

Often parents purchase workbooks to reinforce their child's learning experiences. While I applaud any effort by parents to help their child, maybe there is another way.

My three-year-old granddaughter still has endless skills to master. My wise daughter takes any opportunity to use playtime for a learning experience. This summer, try to think "outside the school box" to make learning fun.

MATH

Money skills: Most kids love to play with money. Use pennies, nickels, dimes or dollars for counting and money sense. Teach your child to count by ones, fives or tens using coins. Help your child count the money for a fun trip to purchase something of their choice.

I send my granddaughter two one-dollar bills every holiday. She saves them and shops for what she wants. The last time she selected a less expensive backpack because she realized she could get three things instead of two.

Time skills: If your child is always asking how long until ___?___. Using the timer on your phone; Set it for "five minutes until". Once the five minutes time period is mastered, increase to ten minutes, then fifteen. My children could wait two hours when they were quite young. They had conceptualized "how long".

Math facts: Lay fact cards out on the floor and your child picks up cards that are answered correctly. Or, your child could stand "x" feet away from you. Each time he or she answers correctly; take one step forward. Wrong answers, move back one. Make wrong answers ok by saying "whoops", or "hurray, mistakes are ok".

I had a math fact club after school for struggling fourth graders. They played the "x" feet away game because it was fun, their classmates wanted to stay and play, too.

Fractions: Conceptualize fractions with measuring cups. Bake a favorite recipe. You hold the "one-cup", your child has the smaller sizes to count parts to the whole.

The "Pizza Pie Game" is a great way to understand fractions, let them make their own pizza. Cut it in fourths, thirds, or fifths.

READING

Read to your child. Parents often think the child must now do all the reading in 1st grade. If reading is difficult, the child may begin to hate reading. Select books that are above their reading level. Why not read a chapter book? My favorite children's author is Beverly Cleary, whose Ramona character is always in trouble for one of her creative adventures. She is so funny, your child may not let you stop reading.

Let your child pace in front of you if he can't sit still. Ask simple questions, "Where is the character in the story?" "When do you think the story took place?" "How did the character feel?" Select just one question a reading so it doesn't feel like school. Make your question and its answer a discussion.

OTHER IDEAS:

- Create funny stories, child creates the ending.
- Rhyming, Language and Vocabulary. Make up games in each.
- Music like John Denver's teach similes and metaphors.
- Choral reading can include sound effects.

I can't begin to share the endless possibilities that make learning fun and productive. Think of real-life experiences to improve specific skills while having fun. Throw away those workbooks, your kids have seen plenty of them. Find new and fun learning experiences. Happy learning!

The pros and cons of repeating a grade

The majority of students move up a grade each fall. However, some students may not be ready to move on to the next grade come the end of the school year.

Educators and parents often have to make the challenging decision of whether to have a student repeat a year — called grade retention — or to engage in social promotion. There are pros and cons to both sides of this debate, and oftentimes the decision comes down to parental preference, test scores and the recommendations of teachers and administrators regarding the best decision for each individual student.

Grade retention can be an emotionally charged issue, but having students repeat a grade is sometimes necessary. The following examination of the advantages and disadvantages of grade retention may help families make informed decisions and help them do what's best for the child.

PROS

1. If a student has missed a lot of school due to illness or a family situation, it may be in his or her best interest to repeat the grade and catch up on the lessons he or she missed.

2. Developmentally immature children might find that repeating a grade reduces their stress, which can increase as students attempt, yet fail, to keep up with the development of their peers.

3. Children who are nearly a year younger than their peers may benefit from attending school with children who are their same age.

CONS

1. In certain instances, students who repeat a grade may be as many as two years older than their classmates. While academic readiness should weigh heavily as parents decide whether or not to have their child repeat a grade, parents should also consider the potential impact on their youngster's self-esteem if he or she is asked to repeat a grade and attend school with much younger classmates.

2. Students may feel embarrassed by grade retention, especially if other students tease or pity them.

3. Kids who do not agree with their parents on the issue may protest by engaging in behaviors that make it difficult for them to benefit from repeating a grade.

Grade retention and social promotion are serious topics for parents and educators to consider.

CHILDHOOD INSOMNIA

Insomnia, or trouble falling asleep or staying asleep, is largely thought of as an adult problem. But children can suffer from insomnia as well, and that can prove disruptive for the entire family. Children who do not receive an adequate amount of sleep can feel tired and irritable, and may have difficulty concentrating in school. Many factors can contribute to the onset of childhood insomnia. Kids, just like adults, can suffer from stress, which then manifests itself as worry or an overactive mind at night, says the Cleveland Clinic. Depression, anxiety, pain, or other medical problems also may be the catalyst for insomnia. While common insomnia medications used in adults are not approved for children, there are steps parents can take. A solid bedtime routine, including consistent bedtimes and wake times, can help combat child insomnia. Try to identify stressors and remedy them as well. In some instances, a pediatrician or therapist may be needed to help a child work through sleep-related issues.
