Large turnout at Holly Hill as local heroes remembered on Memorial Day

After more than 60 years, David J. Wishon's remains were returned to the United States. Just nine of Wishon's bones were found, as well as four teeth. His sister Joy, pictured above (left), was on hand at Holly Hill Memorial Gardens to see his name added to the monument.

- Article & photo by Patrick Taylor -
 Scores of people, including Congressman Dutch Ruppersberger, Delegates Robin Grammer, Ric Metzgar and Pat McDonough, as well as Councilwoman Cathy Bevins, gathered at the Lamky-Luther-Whitehead Veterans Memorial in Holly Hill Memorial Gardens in Middle River on Memorial Day to pay tribute to the brave men and women who paid the ultimate price in their service to our country.

And while the annual event is always something special, this year was even more so, with a dedication to Lamky-Luther-

Whitehead Veterans Memorial founder Al Clasing, as well as the unveiling of David J. Wishon Jr.'s name, which was added to the Korean War stone in the center of the monument.

Wishon went missing on a Korean battlefield in 1950 when he was just 18. In 1953 he was declared dead. After more than 60 years, Wishon's remains were identified using DNA from two of his sisters, and his remains were interred in Arlington National Cemetery with full military honors back on May 6.

On the evening before Memorial Day, it looked as though the annual event might be hampered by rain. But as the ceremony drew closer, the rain managed to hold off.

"Everybody was calling me up asking if it was going to get cancelled," said Tony DeRuggerio, president of the Lamky-Luther-Whitehead Veterans Memorial Committee. "Well I was praying but didn't think my prayers would be answered, so I asked another guy - Mr. Al Clasing. My prayers were answered. I think he's up there holding his big angel wings over us so we don't get burnt out by the sun. He probably already joined up in the

Peninsula Expressway drawbridge closed for emergency repairs

- By Devin Crum -

The Maryland State Highway Administration (SHA) closed to traffic the MD-157/Peninsula Expressway drawbridge over Bear Creek on Friday, May 27, announcing that corrosion led to concerns about safety.

An inspection of the underwater portions of the bridge, which connects Dundalk to Sparrows Point, revealed that "significant corrosion" of its steel beams had occurred since its last inspection in 2012, according to the SHA statement.

SHA began underwater inspections last week and identified areas of concern on the bridge supports, according to the statement. SHA then doubled the underwater inspection team to more quickly assess the extent of the deterioration on the nearly 100 steel piles supporting the draw spans where the corrosion was found.

"Our structural engineers are concerned about allowing traffic on the bridge based on the deteriorated condition of the steel piles. With the closure, they can begin immediate repairs and get it open again as soon as possible," said SHA Administrator Gregory Johnson, P.E., in the statement. "SHA appreciates travelers' patience during the closure."

The underwater portions of bridges are routinely inspected every four years as required by the Federal Highway Administration, while above-water portions must be inspected at least every two years, according to SHA spokesperson Charlie Gischlar. However, some of the older bridges in the state are inspected annually.

"We have a pretty aggressive bridge program here [in Maryland]," Gischlar said.

The MD-157 drawbridge was built in 1950. And Gischlar surmised that the simple exposure of its beams to water for so long was the source of the cor-

Army of St. George."

The day got started with a procession, complete with a flyover and a rendition of the National Anthem performed by Joe DiCara.

After all of the introductions, a bell was rung and a white carnation was placed on the monument for every name adorning the slabs in the middle. From there, wreaths were placed at the front of the monument.

After the presentation of the wreaths, each of the newly added names were announced. In total, there were ten new names added to the monument.

Those names added are William J Lingelbach, Guy E. Stone, Richard E. Tobash, Gleason C. Harris, Howard L. Keatts, Richard W. Gambrell Sr., Robert W. Gambrell, William C. Kreiner and Ryan M. Warrenfeltz Sr.

Following the calling of the names came the Gold Star Mother reading and the dedication to Clasing.

"This event is an important event every year that we have it," said Ruppertsberger. "We have our military taking care of our liberties every single day. Unfortunately when you have war, you lose lives, and that's why we're here today. Let's always remember, not just today but everyday, that we [have the best country], and we have that because of the sacrifices made by others."

Ruppertsberger called on those in attendance to rally around veterans and their families.

This year the main focus was on those who lost their lives in Vietnam, as the country marks the 50 year anniversary of the Vietnam War.

The monument has stood in Holly Hill since May 29, 1989. Since its inception, one of the goals of the monument has been to seek out the names men and women from the east side who have served and died for this country. To date, the monument has added more than 650 names.

"This is a solemn day," said DeRuggerio. "This is a very important memorial where we can pay our respect for those who gave the ultimate sacrifice, our fallen heroes. And when you go home, don't ever forget to say a prayer for our country and for the veterans who sacrifice and pay for our freedom."

County Council passes budget; east side council members mostly pleased

- By Devin Crum -

The Baltimore County Council last week approved the county's FY 2017 operating budget at $1.99 billion, making only minor cuts amounting to less than $200,000.

And with 61 percent of the budget being spent for education purposes like schools, colleges and libraries, the council members representing the east side found little to argue with.

"I'm generally pleased that the focus in this budget has been capital improvements that improve communities," said Fifth District Councilman David Marks.

He added that he was particularly pleased that schools have been a priority in both installing air conditioning and school construction to address overcrowding.

"We've gone from having a dozen schools without air conditioning to having them all air conditioned by next year," Marks commented.

He was also happy that his district, which includes Perry Hall, Kingsville and parts of Nottingham and White Marsh, will receive its first new elementary school in nearly 25 years.

The East County Times previously reported that the school is to be built on county-owned land near the intersection of East Joppa and Chapel Roads in Perry Hall, across the street from the Soukup Arena.

A second school, to be built on Ridge Road in Fullerton, will technically be in District 6, represented by Cathy Bevins. But it will serve many students living in the Fifth District's southern Perry Hall neighborhoods.

Also included in the budget is a $250,000 grant for the construction of Angel Park, the all-inclusive children's playground next to the Perry Hall Library.

While there were minor cuts to the budget, Marks noted that there was an unsuccessful attempt by himself and the other two Republicans - Councilmen Todd Crandell (District 7) and Wade Kach (District 3) - on the seven-member Council to cut $2.5 million from an economic development fund that they felt was already adequately funded.

"But I will say, the Council took a hard look at every agency that came before it," Marks said referencing their budgets.

Regarding those agencies, Councilwoman Bevins said the Council does not like to take much away from them, but the largest part of what they did cut was the salary for a second security guard at the county's animal shelter, which they thought was unnecessary.

"It was pretty minor cuts because I, personally, think that the administration did a good job on [the budget]," she said, calling it a "bare bones" budget.

A big part of the pot for her Sixth District includes education spending as well, with the new Victory Villa Elementary School now funded to be built in Middle River. Additionally, Parkville High School and the Rosedale Center will get new roofs, and the CCBC Essex campus will receive funds for new turf and renovations for its Health and Technology building.

Bevins said the budget also includes funds for a lot of road resurfacing in her district.

"I get millions every year for that, and people care about it," she said, noting that people don't want to be driving on

"With water and metal over time, you get that corrosion," he said.

To remedy the situation, SHA will encase in concrete any new metal that would be exposed to water in order to protect it for longer.

"So hopefully we get a lot of years out of it," Gisclhar commented.

Because some parts of the bridge were still being inspected and bridge construction engineers were finalizing their plans as of Monday morning, SHA could not give an estimated cost for the project or a precise timeline for its completion. But "it's going to be weeks," Gisclhar noted, adding that work will progress into the summertime.

While work was slated to begin this week, he said, "Whenever you're doing repairs underwater like that, it's going to take extra time."

In the meantime, SHA has posted detour signs to allow motorists to bypass the bridge.

From MD-157, drivers can turn left onto MD-158/Bethlehem Boulevard, then turn left to access the outer loop of the Baltimore Beltway heading northbound. From the Beltway, take exit 40 to MD-151/Northpoint Boulevard and take the ramp to westbound MD-150/Eastern Avenue, then make an immediate exit onto southbound MD-151. Take the ramp to southbound MD-157/Merritt Boulevard and turn left onto MD-157 Peninsula Expressway.

Truck traffic will follow these same directions.

The bridge will remain closed to traffic until repairs are complete. It will be kept in the open position during this time, allowing marine traffic to pass through, unless there are forecasted winds expected to exceed 30 miles per hour.

"But if there are 30 mile-per-hour winds, I don't think you want to be on a boat anyway," Gisclhar laughed.

"We're going to go as fast as we can," he explained, "but we want to make sure we do a good job and make sure we have a product that lasts well, well into the future."

SHA has put up detour signs to show drivers how to get around the bridge while repairs are made over the next several weeks. And Google Maps shows that the 10-mile detour route will take approximately 16 minutes.

GM hosts students for trout release in White Marsh Run

- Article & photo by Devin Crum -

On Thursday, May 26, about 20 students from City Springs Elementary School in Baltimore visited the General Motors Baltimore Operations plant in White Marsh to gain some environmental knowledge and help repopulate a local waterway with native trout.

The BioEYES organization and the school district chose that school as part of their "Your Watershed, Your Backyard" program, a science outreach education program offering Baltimore-area students a comprehensive environmental curriculum.

The fish were supplied by Trout Unlimited, America's leading trout and salmon conservation organization and a coldwater fisheries conservation group. The group also supplies thousands of fish eggs for environmental and scientific education to 90-plus schools in Baltimore City and Baltimore, Howard and Montgomery Counties.

GM's White Marsh property borders White Marsh Run, which had been damaged years ago by industrial practices and decades of improper stormwater management. But GM has become a force of environmental awareness and conservation and works extensively to minimize its impact on the environment.

The company's senior environmental engineer, Mike Martinko, explained that the company has done stream cleanups in recent years and visited career fairs to talk about environmental opportunities, along with running a zero-landfill facility in White Marsh. They even have a certified wildlife preserve on the property of about 30,000 square feet.

Martinko said 10 years ago you could go out to White Marsh Run and find only one thing living - "what I call the roach of the stream," he said, noting that it is tolerant to basically all types of pollution.

But the stream was re-constructed by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in 2004, has been the center of numerous clean-up efforts and is now a much healthier stream, he said.

After confirming that the stream was historically host to trout, GM hosted the first trout release last year, along with water sampling and testing carried out by the students back in the classroom.

Martinko noted that after the release, the trout may move downstream from the release point and establish themselves in a wider pond area there. But he also said they sometimes find large bass in that area as well.

"So hopefully the bass aren't too hungry," he laughed, "but that's beyond our control."

After releasing about 130 trout minnows, the students took water samples to test for things like dissolved oxygen levels and the number of small organisms present, which can indicate pollution levels.

"All the ingredients are here with regard to cold water awareness and the impact downstream of upstream conservation," said Trout Unlimited representative Thomas Gamper, noting the effects that unhealthy streams can have on downstream rivers and the Chesapeake Bay.

Gamper explained to the students about stormwater runoff and the importance of controlling trash flow into streams, which carry it to the Bay, as well as the structure of the stream and that the newly released trout immediately face upstream to get oxygen and food from the current.

"They're quick to disperse to find shade, shelter and food," he said.

Martinko revealed that GM and its partners may look to add water samplings in the fall as well to add to the program.

"As long as there aren't any problems with it, we'll look to keep doing this," he said.

City Springs Elementary students gently release trout minnows into a section of White Marsh Run adjacent to GM's White Marsh property.

BUDGET

potholes constantly.

As reported previously in the Times, two of Bevins' biggest budget priorities included funding for dredging of the Bird River and conducting a feasibility study for connecting Gunpowder State Park, Marshy Point Nature Center and Eastern Regional Park, which are all in close proximity in the Middle River part of her district.

Bevins noted that her staff and county officials are "still looking" for the Bird River dredging funds, which would match with state funds of $1 million in each of the next two years.

"[County Executive] Kevin [Kamenetz] understands that there is $2 million coming from the state," Bevins affirmed. "I'm guessing that the money is there and they're prioritizing."

However, connecting the parks, she said, was "problematic."

"That wasn't something I was going to get this year," Bevins explained.

Although the administration and many in the community support it, the project is complicated by the position of a railroad between the nature center and ERP, which would result in a high price tag, Bevins said.

Connecting Gunpowder State Park with the nature center would also require excessive funds because it would ultimately require a bridge to be built between them because of all of the tidal water and marsh land in the area, according to Bevins.

"So it wasn't realistic for me to keep that as a top ask this year when the funding and engineering just aren't there," she said. But she assured that it is still a priority for her and she is not giving up on it.

Councilman Crandell commented that, "There's no Council member that gets everything they want."

Nevertheless, he is pleased with the accelerated school construction and renovation schedule, he said, which is something he has advocated for.

"When I took office, the Seventh District was last on the list in terms of air conditioning and new school construction," Crandell said. "With this budget and the forward-funding of the school projects, we're looking at an era [in this district] of unprecedented school construction and renovation over the next three fiscal years."

He said it is obvious that this budget is "education aggressive," since education is its chief emphasis.

"And it's hard to disagree when Baltimore County has some of the oldest schools in the state of Maryland," Crandell noted.

The lengthy list of education projects for District 7 includes air conditioning for Bear Creek, Grange, Charlesmont and Battle Grove Elementary Schools by 2017. Kenwood High and Stemmers Run Middle Schools are also on the list, but are not part of the forward funding announced by County Executive Kamenetz.

Additionally, the county will begin holding community meetings for the planned new Dundalk Elementary School this summer, and funding for its construction should be in place by July 1, 2017, Crandell said.

"The full funding for the construction project should be ready to go by this time next year," he said.

There are trade-offs, however, with so many county dollars being put toward schools in that some projects for things like new sidewalks, curbs and gutters in the district have been left unfunded - things Crandell called "major capital projects."

Two such projects are sidewalks for Turkey Point Road in Essex, from Back River Neck Road to Chesapeake High School, and sidewalks along North Point Road in Edgemere as part of the Edgemere streetscape. "When you have to approve a balanced budget, there are trade-offs between priorities that you have to make, and the priority of this budget is schools," Crandell explained.

The councilman was disappointed, though, that Program Open Space and land preservation were "not a priority" in this budget for his district.

"There are some opportunities that the county has been looking at on the Back River Neck Peninsula that were not part of this budget that I was hoping would be," he said.

Those opportunities included two properties totaling approximately 80 acres which had previously been identified by the county, but the county has decided not to move forward with purchasing them.

"I believe it's completely off the table," Crandell said, noting that the county is no longer interested in acquiring the parcels and has told the owners to move on and try to find another buyer.

But they remain a priority for him, he said, and he will continue to work toward their preservation.

How women can combat high cholesterol

High cholesterol can dramatically affect a person's long-term health. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, people with high total cholesterol have approximately twice the risk of developing heart disease as people whose cholesterol levels are ideal. And contrary to what many people may think, women are no less susceptible to high cholesterol than men.

Cholesterol can be a confusing topic. Though cholesterol has a bad reputation, that stature can be somewhat misleading. That's because there are two types of cholesterol, one of which actually reduces a person's risk for heart disease and stroke. High-density lipoprotein, often referred to as "HDL" or "good" cholesterol, absorbs low-density lipoprotein, or "bad" cholesterol, or "LDL," and carries it back to the liver, which then flushes it from the body. HDL accounts for a minority of the body's cholesterol. Unfortunately, the majority of cholesterol in the body is LDL, high levels of which can contribute to plaque buildup in the arteries, increasing a person's risk for heart disease and stroke.

A 2015 report from the American Heart Association indicated that more than 73 million American adults have high LDL cholesterol. The 2013 Canadian Health Measures Survey found that, between 2009 and 2011, the number of Canadians with unhealthy levels of LDL increased significantly with age, with 40 percent of men and women between the ages of 40 and 59 suffering from unhealthy LDL levels.

Women may think that the presence of the female sex hormone estrogen can positively impact their cholesterol levels. While estrogen tends to raise HDL levels, its presence alone does not mean women are out of the woods with regard to cardiovascular disease, including heart disease and stroke. In fact, the CDC notes that heart disease remains the leading cause of death among women.

- Eat right. Avoid foods that are high in fat, especially saturated fats and trans fats. The AHA notes that foods that contain saturated fats contribute to high levels of LDL. Fatty beef, lamb, pork, poultry with skin, lard and cream, butter, and cheese are just a few of the foods that contain saturated fats. Those foods all come from animal sources, but many baked goods and fried foods are also high in saturated fat and should be avoided.

- Exercise regularly. Routine physical activity can help women lower their LDL levels, especially when such exercise is combined with a healthy diet. The Office on Women's Health recommends women get two hours and 30 minutes of moderate-intensity aerobic activity each week, or one hour and 15 minutes of vigorous-intensity aerobic activity each week. Speak with your physician to learn which exercises are most appropriate for someone in your condition.

- Quit smoking. Smoking can accelerate the damage already being done by high cholesterol. While research does not indicate that smoking directly impacts LDL levels, the toxins produced and inhaled from cigarettes can modify existing LDL, making it more likely to cause inflammation.

Exploring holistic nursing

Nurses wear many hats. In addition to tending to patients and helping families of patients, nurses incorporate the latest technologies into patients' treatment. Some even work outside of hospitals and doctor's offices to train the next generation of nurses.

Nursing has also branched out to include holistic nursing, which employs alternative medicine to care for patients. Alternative medicine is sometimes combined with traditional western medicine, requiring holistic nurses, who are sometimes referred to as "complementary health nurses," understand both holistic and traditional nursing methods.

According to the Campaign for Nursing's Future, sponsored by Johnson & Johnson, holistic nursing is rooted in the idea that nurses cannot treat a patient's physical health without addressing the whole person. In addition to addressing their patients' physical problems, holistic nurses will also try to address their patients' mental, spiritual and emotional well-being.

According to the American Holistic Nurses Association, holistic nursing is not intended to negate the validity of conventional medical therapies, such as traditional nursing. Holistic nursing serves to complement, broaden and enrich the scope of nursing practices while aiming to help patients access their greatest healing potential. The AHNA notes that holistic nurses must be registered and/or licensed. Such nurses may be found working at hospitals, universities and private practices.

Men and women interested in pursuing a career in nursing can learn more about holistic nursing at www.ahna.org.

How to alleviate eustachian tube problems

Ear problems come and go, and some may be the result of seasonal allergies or the accumulation of wax or water inside the ear canal.

But some ear problems originate deeper within the anatomy of the ear, in an area called the eustachian tube. Dysfunction or clogging of the eustachian tube can create different symptoms and problems that will need to be addressed. Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, Texas, says the eustachian tube is a narrow tube that connects the middle ear to the back of the nose. Normally, this tube opens with every swallow or yawn to act as a pressure-equalizing valve for the middle ear. It also serves to drain the mucus produced by the lining of the middle ear. At times, the tube can get blocked, causing a negative pressure that draws the eardrum inward. When this occurs, dull or muffled hearing is sometimes evident, and individuals may feel pain and pressure.

Colds, sinus trouble, allergies, and other ailments can contribute to eustachian tube dysfunction. The pressure change within the ear as well as a buildup of mucus can lead to trouble and a visit to a doctor. In many cases, eustachian tubes will become clear again on their own. However, some doctors will prescribe a decongestant nasal spray to help the process along. If an ear infection is suspected, antibiotics may be prescribed. Various all-natural remedies, such as holding one's nose and blowing to try to clear the congestion, can be attempted as well.

How to prevent injury while exercising

Exercise is an essential component of a healthy lifestyle. The World Health Organization recommends that healthy adults between the ages of 18 and 64 perform at least 150 minutes of moderate-intensity aerobic activity each week or do at least 75 minutes of vigorous-intensity aerobic activity each week.

Though injuries can happen to even the most seasoned and knowledgeable athletes, there are certain measures adults can take to reduce their injury risk.

- Recognize your limitations. Once you have established a regular exercise routine and your body has grown accustomed to daily exercise, it can be tempting to overdo it or even unknowingly push your body to points that put you at a greater risk of injury. But recognizing your limitations is an essential part of avoiding injury. As you exercise more, you may notice certain areas of your body respond better to exercise than others. For example, if your wrists ache after strength training sessions, reduce the amount of weight you are lifting or look for strength-building exercises that don't require lifting weights.

- Warm up before each session. No matter how accustomed your body is to regular exercise, warming up before each workout is still necessary to avoid injury. Warming up before each workout elevates your heart rate and increases circulation, loosening the joints and increasing blood flow to the muscles you're about to exercise. Between five and 10 minutes of low-intensity cardiovascular exercise can help loosen up your body and prepare it for the more grueling workout to come.

- Switch your routines every so often. When exercise becomes a part of your daily routine, you may end up hitting a plateau. When that happens, your workouts may feel less effective. Switching up routines every so often can combat that problem while also reducing injury risk to overtaxed muscles forced to endure the same exercises day in and day out. Diversify your workout every so often by choosing new exercises and switching up the cardiovascular portion of your workout.

- Give your body time to rest and recover. Exercise feels good, both physically and mentally. Daily exercise can help adults lose weight, and shedding those extra pounds can improve mobility and help adults live more active and fulfilling lives. Exercise also causes the release of hormones known as endorphins, which trigger positive feelings in the body. Those positive feelings can be somewhat addictive, but it's important that adults give their bodies time to rest and recover between workouts. Lack of time to rest and recover makes bodies vulnerable to injury, so include time to recover in your weekly exercise regimen.

How to prevent muscle cramps

Rare is the athlete who has not had the misfortune of suffering a muscle cramp. Muscle cramps can range from the relatively minor nuisances that can be worked out in a matter of minutes to the more severe cramps that can sideline athletes for an indeterminate period of time.

According to the U.S. National Library of Medicine, muscle cramps are often the byproduct of an overused or injured muscle. When a muscle cramps, that muscle is involuntarily contracting, and that contraction can be very painful. Because athletes tend to repeat their motions when performing exercises, it's not uncommon for athletes to cramp up from time to time.

Certain medications may also cause muscle cramps. Men and women concerned about muscle cramps should read the potential side effects of their medications carefully or speak directly with their physicians before taking any medicines that may cause muscle cramps. The online medical resource WebMD notes that medications such as Lasix, a diuretic used to remove fluid from the body, and Crestor, a statin prescribed to adults with high cholesterol, can cause muscle cramps.

While dehydration and electrolyte depletion has long been linked to exercise-associated muscle cramps, researchers have been questioning, if not disputing, that link for many years. A 2008 study from South African researchers published in the British Journal of Sports Medicine did not support a link between exercise-associated muscle cramps and dehydration or electrolyte depletion.

Muscle cramps tend to be painful and can occur in the legs, hands, arms, or abdomen or along the rib cage. When cramps occur below the waist, such as in the calf muscle, it can be difficult to stand up.

Treating muscle cramps

Muscle cramps require immediate treatment so sufferers can alleviate the pain and/or discomfort cramps can cause. Massaging the cramped muscle or applying ice or heat can alleviate the cramp and its associated pain.

Calf or hamstring cramps may be alleviated by putting weight on the affected leg and bending the knee slightly. Such cramps may also be treated by sitting or lying down with the affected leg straight out and pulling the foot toward the head.

To treat quadriceps cramps (those that occur in the front of the thigh), hold onto to something steady and pull the foot of the affected leg back toward the buttock.

Preventing future cramps

One of the most effective ways to prevent future cramps is to listen to your body when it's sending you signals that it is fatigued. Overused muscles are vulnerable to cramps, so remember to include rest in your exercise regimen so muscles have time to recover. If your body feels overtaxed or fatigued before or during a workout, skip the workout or stop it immediately to reduce your risk of cramps or injury.

Deficiencies in certain vitamins can directly or indirectly lead to muscle cramps. Speak with your physician about how changes to your diet if you've experienced cramps.

Combat-style exercise programs prove to be highly effective

Exercise is an essential element of a healthy lifestyle. When combined with a healthy diet, exercise can help men and women maintain a healthy weight, delay the onset of certain diseases and improve overall health.

To ensure they get enough exercise, many people join a gym. But as popular as gyms are, many individuals have a narrow view of what constitutes a thorough "gym" workout. They may believe they'll spend their entire time like a hamster in a wheel on the treadmill or may be intimidated by the rows of machines before them. Fortunately, today's gyms are much more than weight benches and elliptical machines. Many boast an array of fitness classes, and a great many more offer martial arts and combat-style classes. Such offerings attract fitness enthusiasts who may be looking for a workout with an edge.

Mixed martial arts (MMA)

MMA is one of the fastest-growing sports in the world. MMA combines various styles of fighting in a no-holds-barred style of combat. Punching, kicking and classic martial arts moves are part of MMA. Wrestling may be thrown in for added fun as well. Fitness classes geared around MMA will incorporate many of the moves without the actual combat taking place. Therefore, expect to push muscles and flexibility to their peak.

Kickboxing

Kickboxing classes will pit you against a punching bag. You will learn proper punching stances and will work to improve balance and movement. People may believe only the legs and arms get a workout during kickboxing, but your core muscles do their part to help you keep your footing and put power behind your kicks and punches.

Krav Maga

Krav Maga class may entice self-defense tactic enthusiasts. Krav Maga employs techniques from martial arts disciplines but includes some self-defense moves as well. Classes will not only teach participants how to defend themselves from attacks, but will also work on agility and strength.

Boxing

Boxing will work many of the same muscle groups as kickboxing, but without the roundhouse kicks. Boxing can be a super stress-buster, and many people underestimate just how much they'll work up a sweat while in the ring or going one-on-one with a bag.

Talk to us today about the benefits of pre-planning final arrangements.

Knowing that our children and grandchildren won't be left with the financial and emotional burdens that come with planning funeral arrangements gives us peace of mind.

Pre-planning gave us the opportunity to make important decisions about our wishes together, and make a difficult time a little less stressful for each other and the people we love.

Still Is.

We're not a big impersonal corporation headquartered in a far distant city or even foreign country.

We're a family. And, like you, we make decisions that suit our community...not necessarily someone else's.

We think that makes a great difference in the care and service we offer the families who come to us.

Dundalk man charged with second degree rape

Baltimore County Police have charged a Dundalk man with impersonating a police officer and a sex offense. This is the fourth sexual offense incident that police have charged him in connection with.

A woman contacted police after seeing a previous media release about Brian Keith Cooper and said that she had been victimized in October 2015.

The woman further told investigators that in the middle of October 2015, she placed an advertisement on the internet for sexual acts. She was contacted by a man and arranged to meet him on Fontana Lane in Rosedale. He picked her up at that location in a dark four door vehicle and drove behind the La Quinta motel in the unit-block of Philadelphia Court. At first she planned on taking the money and leaving before doing anything but after they discussed a price, the man pulled out a badge. The suspect then pulled off of the lot, drove around, and told her that he would not arrest her if she performed a sex act on him. They drove to residential community where the victim performed a sex act on the suspect. The suspect dropped her off on Fontana Lane.

The suspect has been identified as 30-year-old Brian Keith Cooper Jr of the 2000-block of Bear Ridge Road in Dundalk. Cooper has been charged with impersonating a police officer, first-degree sex offense, and second-degree assault. He is being held without bail at the Baltimore County Detention Center.

This incident remains under investigation by the Baltimore County Police Special Victims Unit.

Anyone with information on the suspect or any other similar crimes is asked to call police at 410-307-2020.

Crash in Dundalk leaves pedestrian deceased

A crash in Dundalk on May 24 has left a man deceased. The preliminary investigation into the crash has indicated that just after 3 p.m., a motor scooter had been traveling south-bound on North Point Road approaching German Hill Road. A 2007 Ford Taurus was traveling north-bound on North Point Road. The motor scooter crossed over into the north-bound lanes of North Point Road and was struck by the Ford Taurus.

The operator of the motor scooter, 49-year-old Robert Richard Suter of the 1900-block of Yorkway in Dundalk, was declared deceased at the scene.

The Ford Taurus remained at the scene.

Man injured in Perry Hall shooting

A 32-year-old man was seriously injured after being shot late Sunday evening in Perry Hall.

Police were called to the 5000-block of Forge Road at approximately 11:16 p.m. after the injured man sought help from an area resident.

The preliminary investigation indicates that the victim was sitting in his car on Forge Road when he was shot by an unidentified suspect who then fled the scene. The victim, whose identity has not yet been released, suffered multiple gunshot wounds to the upper and lower body. He was transported to an area hospital for treatment. The suspect in this crime remains outstanding.

Police believe this was a targeted crime and that there is no outstanding threat to the community. Anyone with information should contact the police.

Two receive life sentences for Parkville murder

Mark Eugene Garland, 28, and Peretz Anderson, 31, were sentenced on May 27 to fifty years in prison for the murder of Aaron Nedd in Baltimore County Circuit Court.

On Dec. 26, 2014, Aaron Philip Nedd, 28, was living with his wife and children in a motel room on Loch Bend Drive in Parkville. During that evening, Garland and Anderson knocked on the door of the room. One went into the bathroom of the motel room with Mr. Nedd. The victim's wife then heard a struggle in the bathroom. The second defendant then went into the bathroom and Mr. Nedd was shot several times. He died as a result of the gunshot wounds. Anderson and Garland fled with property belonging to the victim. They were caught shortly thereafter when they were located by the Baltimore County Police helicopter. Property of the victim was found in the car Anderson and Garland occupied. Gunshot residue was located on both defendants. Garland and Anderson were tried together and convicted by a jury of first degree murder, armed robbery and use of a firearm in the commission of a crime of violence. They were sentenced to life with all but 50 years suspended for the First Degree murder, and concurrent sentences of 10 years and five years for the other charges.

The charges stem from an investigation into missing and misappropriated funds from FOP Lodge 34 where Schapiro is a former President. FOP Lodge 34 represents Maryland Transportation Authority Police Officers and is located in Middle River.

BCPS student helps create award-winning ice cream

"Movie Night," an award-winning ice cream created by Jillian Hensley, a Grade 11 student in Baltimore County Public Schools, and two teammates, will be manufactured by Broom's Bloom Dairy and sold at its store.

Hensley attends Sparrows Point High School and is in the culinary arts program at Sollers Point Technical High School.

The ice cream - a sweet popcorn flavor with almond pieces and caramel covered pretzels - will be manufactured beginning at 5 p.m. on Monday, June 13, and will be sold at the Broom's Bloom Dairy store in the coming days and weeks - until quantities run out. Broom's Bloom is located at 1700 S. Fountain Green Rd. in Bel Air, MD.

Hensley created the ice cream flavor on a team with two Harford County students when she participated in this year's Ice Cream University. The university was hosted by TIC Gums at the Texture Innovation Center in White Marsh, MD. The program is based on Cornell University's Food Science 101 course, which is required for incoming freshman of the College of Food Science. TIC Gums sponsored each student's $500 program fee and provided home ice cream makers upon program completion.

Tim Andon, Ice Cream University program director and Cornell alumnus, led the five week course. "This is a great opportunity for college-bound students with an interest in science and marketing to learn about food science and gain hands-on experience in the food and beverage industry. Students apply food science principles to their unique ice cream formulations and innovative marketing campaigns," Andon said.

La Plata knocks out Eastern Tech softball and baseball teams

- by Patrick Taylor -

The only thing worse than getting knocked out of the postseason is seeing the victorious school reign supreme in multiple sports. Unfortunately for Eastern Tech, the La Plata Warriors had their number this season, knocking the Maverick softball and baseball teams out of postseason play.

The Maverick girls looked like they were destined for the state final, but La Plata had other plans, knocking out Tech in extra innings last week.

Things looked like they were going to be a bit rocky from the outset, with La Plata loading the bases in the top of the first inning off of Tech pitcher Jodie Bronushas. But Bronushas, who has had an absolutely stellar season for the Mavericks, managed to calm down and proceeded to record a pop out, ground-out and strikeout to end the inning.

La Plata got the scoring started in the second after a leadoff double got a runner in scoring position. From there a sacrifice bunt advanced the runner to third. The run would eventually score on an infield single.

From there La Plata was relatively quiet offensively. Bronushas did well to stay in control and keep Tech in the game despite a lethargic offensive output.

But in the top of the seventh, La Plata added another run to their tally. An error allowed a La Plata player to take two bases after a double, seemingly putting Tech away.

I say seemingly because a comeback felt highly improbable. Throughout the contest La Plata's pitching was fierce, with the Charles County team recording strikeout after strikeout.

La Plata pitcher Alyssa Bilodeau retired 16 of the first 20 batters she faced, allowing only two hits. The two other Tech players who reached base got there on a walk and hit-by-pitch. Bilodeau also struck out the side twice.

So when La Plata stretched their lead, things were not looking good.

But in the bottom of the seventh, Tech got two on in scoring position with Sarah Heagy at the plate. And with two outs, Heagy delivered, cracking a single past short and driving in the tying runs.

Suddenly, it looked as if the Mavericks were the team of destiny.

With one out in the top of the eighth and a runner on second, a bloop single from La Plata brought in what ended up being the winning run.

Tech had a chance to respond, but back-to-back sacrifice bunt attempts to try to advance the runner at second were gloved up at the plate by the catcher. The final out came on called strikes, and La Plata was heading to the state final.

Despite the loss, Eastern Tech had an absolutely tremendous season. With Bronushas's arm guiding the way, Tech finished the season with a 20 - 2 record, with their only other loss coming against C. Milton Wright.

As for the boys, their matchup against La Plata couldn't have gone any worse, with the Warriors putting up 16 runs and enforcing the run rule.

La Plata's bats were absolutely hot last week, with catcher Tyler Stockwell and shortstop Taylor Cook dominating Tech, with each putting up four hits.

Bret Pilkerton, however, was the star of the day, going 3-for-5 with five RBIs.

And on the offensive side, the Mavericks simply couldn't find a way to get anything going off of pitcher Jake Hanks, who picked up his fifth win of the season against Tech. Hanks struck out five in the five inning contest.

'X-MEN: APOCALYPSE': The end... or the beginning of this franchise?

- By Teddy Durgin -

When I was a little kid, one of my favorite TV shows was "Welcome Back Kotter." This was back in the time when every sitcom had its signature catch phrase that the writers absolutely had to work into each script each week. My absolute favorite - the one I would wait for week in and week out - was when John Travolta's Vinnie Barbarino would get overwhelmed by whatever sitcom hijinks were happening on "Kotter" that episode, and he'd grab both sides of his head and exclaim, "I'm so confused!"

For the first time in years, I felt like yelling out just that while watching "X-Men: Apocalypse." There've now been nine "X" films, and I think the entire events in at least four of them have been completely wiped out by all of the timeline re-setting that's been going on in the last couple of films featuring younger versions of such characters as Professor Xavier, Magneto, Mystique and so forth. And for whatever reason, these last three films have skipped ahead a decade each - "First Class" was set in 1962, "Days of Future Past" was mostly in 1973, and the new "Apocalypse" takes place in 1983. And, yet, actors like James McAvoy, Michael Fassbender, and Jennifer Lawrence barely age at all! It's really quite silly.

And in "Apocalypse," we also get younger, recast versions of such previously introduced characters as Jean Grey, Cyclops and Storm. It's kind of a brilliant move, I guess. Whenever actors like Famke Janssen or Halle Berry get too old for the target demographic or too expensive for the budget, ret-con the whole thing, move back the decades and recast them with young, cheap things known to audiences from shows like "Game of Thrones" and "American Horror Story."

So, did the events of the first two "X-Men" films happen? I know the whole last film was a $100 million+ erase of the universally loathed third film. But the other two flicks were pretty good. Are the Powers That Be gonna keep doing this? Will we get new "X-Mens" in the future that erase "Apocalypse" or "Days of Future Past?"

And these flicks have the annoying habit of taking previously compelling plot points and completely undoing them. If a certain key building gets destroyed, it can be rebuilt EXACTLY the way it was. If one character has his or her memory wiped in one film to great dramatic effect, he or she will get those memories back by the end of the next film. In the earlier flicks, Mystique is bad and a supporting player. In the new ones, she's played by Jennifer Lawrence as the female lead and is mostly a heroine. In some of the movies, Storm is good. In this one, she's bad... and with a thick accent! And how about -

I'm so confused!

Outside of all that, "X-Men: Apocalypse" has its moments. Evan Peters' Quicksilver once again rocks as basically the Legolas of these rebooted "X-Mens." Sophie Turner as Jean Grey is perhaps the first recast who's actually better than the original portrayer. She's absolutely luminous here. And, wow, Fox continues to pour big bucks into these flicks.

The plot? It's some silliness about the first mutant from 6,000 years ago - Oscar Isaac's title character - being resurrected, corrupting Magneto and three other mutants and setting forth to annihilate humanity. All of the younger X'ers have to learn to work together to eventually take him down.

The climax is tremendously drawn out and is not for anyone who has grown tired of computer-generated planetary destruction. But director Bryan Singer does a nice job keeping much of the action character-based. And, unlike the superior Disney-Marvel flicks, they do kill off a couple of fairly big characters here.

But who knows if they stay dead? Xavier, Cyclops, and Jean Grey have all died on screen before and are still appearing in new movies. Final take? "Apocalypse" is for completionists only. I was actually fine with them ending things at the last movie, but then I remembered Hollywood's mutated desire for cash.

"X-Men: Apocalypse" is rated PG-13 for sequences of violence, action and destruction, brief strong language and some suggestive material.

More wonders to be had with 'ALICE'

- By Teddy Durgin -

I always pride myself on 100 percent complete honesty in my reviews. Well, in all honesty, I really dreaded seeing "Alice Through the Looking Glass." I just had no interest in it whatsoever, and that's a bad place to be as a reviewer who tries to give every film a fair shake. I didn't care for Tim Burton's "Alice in Wonderland" take six years ago. Heck, I don't even really remember the flick all that much. I sort of vaguely recall Helena Bonham Carter walking around with a digitally swelled head screaming all of her lines. And I kind of remember bits and pieces of Johnny Depp doing his weird Johnny Depp thing as the Mad Hatter. But, man oh man, I didn't wanna go down this rabbit hole again.

Call it going in with the lowest expectations possible. Call it "Teddy taking his 11-year-old daughter and watching her giggle, gasp and thrill to a girl-empowered fable." Call it whatever you'd like, but I liked it!

First of all, the advertising for this film doesn't do it justice. Depp, of course, is front and center in the poster and most of the TV ads. But he's really more of a supporting character here. This is Mia Wasikowska's film. As the title character, Mia (oh, please, I'm not gonna keep typing out that last name) is in nearly every scene of this film, and she's matured wonderfully in the six years since the first flick.

Some Lewis Carroll purists were up in arms the first time around, because Burton and Co. took a traditionally 7-year-old Alice and grew her into a hottie teen (actually, Mia was 20 during the production of the first film... so the ogling was perfectly permissible). In "Through the Looking Glass," her Alice is still girlish. But she's now a ship's captain in the 1870s, having inherited "The Wonder" and her crew from her deceased father. Yeah, it's not believable in the least. But the film doesn't dwell on this oddity. It gets her back to "Underland" as quickly as possible.

Alice returns through a mirror-portal and finds that her old friend, the Mad Hatter, has gone truly mad and believes his long-deceased father, mother and siblings are still alive. She doesn't believe him at first. In fact, none of the returning fairy tale favorites - from Anne Hathaway's White Princess to Matt Lucas' Tweedledee and Tweedledum to Stephen Fry's Cheshire Cat - believe him. But Alice is eventually compelled to seek out Time (an outstanding Sacha Baron Cohen) itself to request that she be granted the ability to travel back to the past and find out what really happened to the Hatter's family. He, of course, turns her down. But she is able to steal his time-machine thingamajig and go back anyway. What she ends up doing in the past makes the present and the future far worse.

Therein lied the appeal of "Alice Through the Looking Glass" to me. I love a good time-travel story, especially one that adheres to the laws and mechanics of time, change and consequence. If you like flicks like "Back to the Future, Part II" and "The Butterfly Effect," I think you're going to get past the usual Depp lunacy (the Mad Hatter is really his weakest big-screen eccentric, in my opinion), the garish "Dear God make it stop" CGI spectacles and director James Bobin's attempts to mimic original director Burton.

And, yes, this is the last film in which the great Alan Rickman will receive a screen credit. He is once again the voice of Absolem, who has gone from a blue caterpillar to a blue butterfly between films. Sadly, he only has a few lines in the film's first act. And who knows if that was because of his untimely death back in January. But just hearing his distinctive cadence is proof positive that true movie magic still rests in the human element and not in a computer.

Baltimore Humane Society's PETS OF THE WEEK

Hey, America, I'm Jaxx! I'm full of energy and could pretty much go, go, go all day long. I totally love people which is good since I'm super friendly and social. I may be a big boy, but I have to admit I don't really understand that concept since I think it's totally fine to try to lie in your lap for belly rubs! I know some commands like "sit and down" and am working on "paw". I love toys of any kind, but my favorites are squeaky ones, stuffed animals, ropes and anything that we can play tug o' war. In my previous home I lived with a cat named Lilo who is also here searching for his forever home. I have been around children ages 3-11. I bet they can't even keep up with me. Stop in soon and see if you can!

I'm Dobby. If you're looking for a sweet older cat then I'm the one for you. I'm talkative, mellow, easy going, independent yet affectionate. I'm a staff favorite because I'm so sweet and love people. I also enjoy catnip, comfy beds and food. In my previous home I lived with a dog, another cat, and kids of various ages. I do have some medical issues -- A grade 4 heart murmur and heart disease (Hyperrophic Cardiomyopathy). If you have any questions regarding this please call or speak with one of our medical staff. I'm hoping that someone out there will be willing to give me some TLC and a new forever home regardless of my medical issues because they do not change my personality one bit... You will still be getting the sweetest, best friend ever. Hope to see you soon.

The adoption fee is $100 for Jaxx and free for Dobby who's been sponsored. For more information visit www.bmorehumane.org.
