Sharing the fire: potters exhibit at the Jaques Art Center

By ANN SCHWARTZ
If you take in this exhibit at the Jaques Art Center, everything will be a shape. Rather than painting exhibits that feature two-dimensional works, the "Sharing the Fire" exhibit features the many forms created by potters.

There are many whimsical and creative ceramic items in the exhibit. Items are fired in the wood-firing process, which includes manning the kiln for 30 hours straight for a complete firing cycle. Therefore, these artists spend a lot of time on these week-ends building pots and relationships, keeping the fire burning.

Some artists were available on opening day to have their photos snapped and give an artist's statement.

Haddie Hadachek owns Black Pear Pottery between Brainerd and Garrison. "I try always to view the world with wonder and curiosity and to somehow manifest that curiosity of shapes, colors, lines, textures, clay, fire, rocks, water, air and so on into something will inspire wonder and imagination in other people," noted Hadachek.

Jake Iten says: "I am a maker, artist, outdoor enthusiast, problem solver, thinker and appreciator of meaningful relationships. To me, clay is one of the only things that can bring all of that together."

Grant Boulanger notes: "As a potter, I strive to optimize forms for the wood-fired kiln. My pots acquire character naturally, absorbing the complex flames without effort."

Michael Weiss has an extensive history of college training and hands-on work with pottery. He was schooled at Brainerd High School and was part of the Franky Gumbo potters at the Franklin Arts Center in Brainerd.

He heard about clay firing and met Haddie and has participated in wood firings for the last 10 years. He's inspired by Hadachek and Ken Omundson, another exhibitor. "The influence of Haddie and Ken has had a profound impact on the direction of my artistic ventures," said Weiss.

The Jaques Art Center, in downtown Aitkin on Hwy. 210, by Aitkin's water tower, is free to attend. It is open Tuesdays through Saturday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

"Last Call" at Music in the Park

"Last Call"

"Last Call" and "Version 5" will be the talented musicians for the conclusion of the Cuyuna Lakes Chamber's Music in the Park on Thursday, August 25 from 5:00 - 8:00 p.m. The free family fun event will feature music, food, games and more at Crosby's Memorial Park.

Sponsored by the Deerwood Bank, the event will include free Rockin' Root Beer

"Version 5"

Floats, and a rock themed photo booth to go along with the rock music theme for the evening.

"Last Call" is a young, fresh band from the Brainerd Lakes area. With soulful vocals inspired by the likes of Amy Winehouse and Aretha Franklin, driving guitar influenced by both jazz and classic rock, powerful percussion in the style of renowned alt-rock bands. Last Call works to fuse a wide spectrum of sounds into a cohesive style that can stand on its own.

"Version 5" is an electronic rock duo featuring brothers Andy and Spencer Olson. Version 5 brings an addictive blend of rock and electronic instrumentation that grabs the listener and hits them with catchy hooks that won't let go. This quickly caught the attention of multi-platinum record producer Jeff Blue (Macy Gray, Linkin Park), and in December of 2013 they recorded three singles, which are now available on major online retailers.

Leafy greens may lower Glaucoma risk

Though aging takes a toll on eye health and vision, nutritious foods may play a defending role.

Using data from the "Nurses' Health Study" and the "Health Professionals Follow-up Study," Harvard researchers examined dietary information and eye health history of over 100,000 men and women aged 40 years or older. Specifically, researchers looked at daily vegetable intake and then calculated the amount of nitrate in their diets (remember, nitrates from vegetables are not the same as nitrates from meat) and monitored for primary open-angle glaucoma (POAG), the most common form of glaucoma caused by a buildup of fluid pressure in the eye, potentially leading to irreversible damage and loss of vision.

Compared with those who ate the lowest amount of plant-derived dietary nitrates, those who ate the most had 21% less risk of any form of POAG. Green leafy vegetables seemed to have the biggest effect, especially kale, mustard greens, chard, romaine lettuce, and surprisingly, iceberg lettuce.

What's the connection? Dietary nitrates from leafy green vegetables may help regulate intraocular pressure and ocular blood flow, thereby keeping eyes healthy and glaucoma at bay. Previous studies have linked eating green vegetables with lower risk of glaucoma and cataracts. In addition to nitrates, leafy greens contain lutein, zeaxanthin and beta-carotene, all plant compounds that support overall eye health.

BONUS: A Chinese study found those with the highest versus lowest vitamin C intake had 19% lower risk of cataracts. Pineapple, strawberries, kiwifruit, guava, red bell peppers, broccoli, and Brussels sprouts are all excellent sources.

Deerwood man has gnome sweet gnomes yard

Garden gnomes number 10 in this charming little garden at a corner property in Deerwood. Ann Schwartz photos

By ANN SCHWARTZ
The deep tan on his back tells you he spends a lot of time outside.
Benn Hann of Deerwood occupies all his spare time in the summer gardening on his corner lot in Deerwood.

Your eye is caught and captured by the 10 inch-high garden gnomes he decorates his front yard with. Tomatoes plants are weeded within an inch of their lives, bursting with ripe, red fruit, with the little elves interwoven between them.

The back yard is the business end of the gardening project with a shed and large vegetable garden. The western side yard of the property is filled with flowering perennials: lilies, iris, lily of the valley and more -- always guaranteeing a burst of color.

Hann does all the digging work himself although the family helps with weeding and canning. They've put up 30 quarts of garlic dill pickles, three quarts of tomato sauce, 14 pints of strawberry-rhubarb jam and 24 pints of green beans. They aren't finished yet and they also give away produce to friends and neighbors and to residents of the high rise apartments in Deerwood located by the ball park.

Many Minnesotans try their hand at gardening and a few of us are Weekend Warriors with weedy patches. But Hann has elevated his gardening to an art and a science, both feeding his family over the winter and giving strollers through Deerwood a pleasant view of his gnomeland.

August veteran visit

On August 9, representatives from the American Legion visited veterans and Aitkin Auxiliary members at local care centers. The August card reminded many of them of life and work on the farm in days past. Above are (front) Korean Air Force Veteran John Tholen (back, left to right) Al Johnson, Barb Jones and Roberta Elvecrog at Aitkin Health Services. (Not pictured are Pauline Moore and Stan Jones.)
