The Tulsa State Fair returns Sept. 29, running through Oct. 9, bringing new and returning entertainment, with its theme "Picture This" encouraging fair-goers to "get social," says Sarah Thompson, with the Tulsa State Fair.

Giant picture frames will be set up around the fairgrounds to encourage visitors to take selfies and photos inside the frames, using the hashtag #findtheframes. The frames will be located in various areas, near the Golden Driller, livestock arenas, children's areas and entertainment.

"We want to highlight what people enjoy most about the fair and also encourage them to move into areas that they have not experienced before," she says.

Tickets to the fair cost $8-10 for an adult, $6 for children ages 5-12 and is free for children under 5 years old.

The fair's opening night is Ford Family Fun Night, where gate admission costs $1 with a coupon from a local Ford dealer. Oct. 4 is Alltech's Family Fest, with $5 gate admission.

"After fair admission is paid, fairgoers have a wide array of free activities and entertainment options available to them," says Thompson.

This includes a number of shows located on the fairgrounds, including the All Star Stunt Dogs Challenge, which has been a regular occurrence at the Tulsa State Fair for eight consecutive years; although, its total number of years at the fair is more than that, says Thompson, and it continues to draw large crowds of all ages. Performances will take place daily at noon, 4 and 7 p.m.

A new addition this year is Ma'Ceo Circus, to feature horse trick riding and aerial stunts.

The show will be located on Midway, east of the Exchange Center.

ENTERTAINMENT GALORE: The Tulsa State Fair, Sept. 29-Oct. 9, returns this year with its many agricultural events, including livestock shows and live animal births in the birthing center, which continue to be popular draws for fairgoers as well as the rides. and the most visually exciting ground show we've had at the fair so far," says Thompson.

Performances will take place daily at 3:30, 5:30 and 7:30 p.m., starting Sept. 30. Limited shows will take place on opening night. The Just For Kids building offers various free children's activities, such as the Make It and Take It Creative Zone, which offers a daily craft for children to make, block building and Lego construction areas, Tulsa's largest sandbox, and a miniature golf course, a new offering for this year.

"The Just For Kids building provides parents a place to come with their kids, where they can sit and rest while the kids can keep playing," she says.

but it's also something that parents will enjoy.'

On the Muscogee (Creek) Nation Stage, on Sept. 29, is a new addition this year: the Tulsa State Fair Fashion Show, thanks to a new partnership with Clary Sage College. The show will feature entries made by Clary Sage students.

"We are always looking for new contests and ways to stay modern and relevant, and this show fits in well with our other competitive exhibits," continues Thompson.

The Oklahoma State Picking and Fiddling Championships returns Oct. 1-2, starting at 11 a.m. on both days. High energy hypnotist De'Anna the Hypnochick also returns daily For Kids building is Little Ray's Oct. 3-9, with afternoon per-

"This will be a full circus show tic exhibit," she continues. "It's (Creek) Nation stage this year is geared toward younger children, acrobatic show Flippin', with performances beginning Oct. 3.

Old Dominion opens the fair on Sept. 29 on the Oklahoma Stage, as well as American Authors, Elle King, Ashanti and others on following evenings.

The PRCA Rodeo and Concert Series takes place Oct. 7-8. Dustin Lynch will perform following the rodeo on Oct. 7 and Wade Bowen on Oct. 8. Tickets cost $40 and $35, respectively.

Included in the ticket price is admission into the fair, rodeo and concert.

Agricultural exhibits include the always popular birthing center and the Surgical Suite Surgeries both located in the Super Duty Exhibit Hall, the 4-H and Future Farmers of America competitive exhibits in the Ford Truck Arena Exhibit Hall, and the livestock shows taking place every day of the fair.

WILLIAMS LODGE TAKING SHAPE AT TULSA'S GATHERING PLACE

EXPANSIVE VIEW: A front view looking north of A Gathering Place for Tulsa's Williams Lodge.

VISIBLE PROGRESS: A side view of Williams Lodge where the entrance will sit. On the right side of the photo is the fireplace.

By EMILY RAMSEY Managing Editor

The first structure that individuals will see when entering A Gathering Place For Tulsa will be Williams Lodge. Construction on the lodge is not quite halfway complete. However, enough progress has been made at this point to create a beginning picture of what is to come.

Recently, the lodge's steel beams were installed, which provides the outline for the top level of the lodge, says Jeff Stava, executive director and trustee of Tulsa's Gathering Place, LLC. The beams will provide the support for the building's glass panes.

The lodge will sit on the back of the property, near the former location of Blair Mansion.

"The lodge will serve as the entryway, or as a welcome center, to the park," Stava says.

A three-story fireplace will sit on the southern end of the lodge, which will overlook Peggy's Pond and face the Arkansas River, with a two-story covered porch that will feature floor-to-ceiling glass panes. On the lower level of the of the covered porch area will be an ice cream shop, candy shop, gift shop and an area for equipment rentals. An outdoor food terrace and food kiosk will be located on the northern side of the lodge. The terrace will sit among the large trees that have been maintained on the land. "These trees are the most beautiful and healthy that we have on the property. We want to protect them," says Stava. "Then, they will serve as a canopy over the food ter-

Tulsa City/County Host Veterans Resource Fair

COMMENTARY

By DEWEY F. BARTLETT JR. Mayor of Tulsa

You are all familiar with both the City of Tulsa and Tulsa County as government organizations. We pass laws, collect taxes, provide services, and other essential government functions. Just like other businesses our size, we have a duty to provide our employees with benefits and opportunities to further themselves both personally and professionally.

A significant amount of veterans are employed by both the City of Tulsa and Tulsa County. These served our country and sacrificed so much for our freedom. They continue serving our community today as law enforcement, fire fighters, street maintenance crews, engineers, and administrators. They bring the exceptional skills and leadership developed during their years of service to our community.

Last year, my administration formed a committee to address challenges facing our City of Tulsa employees who served in the Armed Forces. Our committee surveyed this special group, and the results showed many were not aware of the veteran service benefits available to them. To address this, the City of Tulsa and Tulsa dedicated employees selflessly County partnered to host our first- mation about veteran benefits.

IN SERVICE: Two veterans, Phil Scherman and Jim Harris, both DAV service officers, receive infor-

City and County employees last month.

Our goal was to provide our veterans with the opportunity to have a dialogue with the Veteran's Administration and learn more about the benefits they have earned while serving our nation. Many attendees at our Veterans Resource Fair were unaware they qualified for benefits. The highlight of the day came from a Tulsa County employee who had been waiting eight years to receive benefits and was able to meet with the VA that afternoon and work everything out. All in all, 111 City/County veterans and their spouses talked to the DAV about the benefits process and the VA for benefits relating to ever Veteran's Resource Fair for National Guard/Reservists. Dr. Phillip Berry, city physician, also presented excellent information on PTSD and has since been asked to hold other city/county classes on this important subject that may still affect many of our veterans.

As Mayor, I'm extremely pleased the city and ccounty collaborated together to assist this valuable group of civil servants to receive the benefits they earned while serving our country. I also want to take this opportunity to thank Tulsa County and the City of Tulsa staff who worked hard to make this event a success. I'm so grateful this collaborative effort was beneficial for our veterans and their families and trust that next year's event can help many more.

Jenks Mayor Discusses City's Past, Future

Kelly Dunkerley Cites Former Leaders, Quality of Life

By EMILY RAMSEY Managing Editor

Editor's Note: Mayor of Jenks Kelly Dunkerley is one of Greater Tulsa Reporter's "10 People to Watch in 2016," as announced in its January 2016 issue. GTR was the first news group in greater Tulsa to introduce People to Watch, which launched in January 2009.

Throughout the year, GTR has published a series of articles featuring each of its "10 People to Watch," with next month's issue to feature local restaurateur and former Glenpool Mayor Momodou Ceesay.

When asked to discuss the city of Jenks and the progress it has seen and is currently experiencing, Mayor Kelly Dunkerley admits that he could talk for hours. However, before anything can be discussed, the first thing that should be done is to pay tribute to the decades of strong city leadership, he asserts.

Dunkerley, who moved to Jenks with his family in 2004, was elected mayor in April 2015. He has served on the city council since 2013. Prior to that, he served on the planning and zoning commission for two years and as Board Chairman for the Jenks Chamber of Commerce.

Dunkerley's wife is a veterinarian and faculty member at Tulsa Community College. Their daughter is a freshman at Jenks High School. Dunkerley works for for State Farm Insurance as its public affairs manager.

"We chose to move to Jenks because we felt it provided the highest quality of life and the schools are unmatched," says Dunkerley.

Regarding Jenks' past leadership, he continues, "The building blocks of where Jenks is going have been set by wise leaders decades earlier." As some examples, he references the construction of the 96th street bridge, the relocation of the sewage lagoon further south from its former location near where the Oklahoma Aquarium now resides, the construction of the Creek Turnpike, the opening of the Kimberly-Clark facility in 1990 and "an absolutely first class school system."

The city has also maintained its focus on river development for the past 15 years, he continues, with the opening of the Oklahoma Aquarium in 2002 and RiverWalk Crossing 10 years ago. With the opening of FlyingTee in June, businesses have joined RiverWalk Crossing in the past months with more businesses on their way, including Andolini's Pizzeria and Maryn's Taphouse and Raw Bar.

Add to that the opening of Margaritaville in August, and additional development is sure to follow on both the Jenks and Tulsa sides of the river, says Dunkerley. Most recently, residents approved the passage of the Vision package that includes construction of two low-water dams in the Arkansas River, one of those to be constructed south of the 96th street bridge, which spans between Tulsa and Jenks.

"It's a huge commitment on the part of our residents to keep saying yes to the river," he says.

Included in the Vision package is additional bike trails in Jenks that will connect with Tulsa's trail system, with Jenks and Tulsa leaders' eventual goal of seeing that trail system connect all the way to Turkey Mountain.

The city is also seeing new commercial projects throughout its city limits, including in the four areas where it created TIF (Tax Increment Financing) districts: south of the Creek Turnpike where Simon Premium Outlets is expected to open in early 2018; Village on Main, where Thrive apartments are currently under construction; at Main Street and Highway 75, where the nearly completed headquarters of Gateway Mortgage will sit plus a commercial center with shopping and a hotel; and a commercial development on the north side of 121st street, west of Highway 75.

"Our city needs sales tax, which is our only revenue stream to foster a high quality of life," savs Dunkerley. "The outlet mall has the potential to double our city budget in the future."

Not only that, but as the mall is built, Dunkerley expects to see increased interest in the nearly 200 acres of land around the mall and along the Arkansas River, opening the door for further river development.

"As hard as Jenks has worked to make our city attractive for quality development, it's often even more difficult to maintain a high level of excellence, and I'm proud we've been able to meet that challenge," he says.

Yet, in addition to the new construction projects, Jenks leaders to offer additional parking and remain loyal to the city's history, specifically its downtown area.

Using excess Vision 2025 funds. the city of Jenks is creating a downtown park on A Street between Second and Third streets, thanks to its partnership with Jenks Public Schools, which owns the town.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT: Mayor of Jenks Kelly Dunkerley stands on the Jenks pedestrian bridge, overlooking RiverWalk Crossing and FlyingTee, which opened in June. In addition to RiverWalk, which is currently experiencing an influx of new businesses, there is a long list of economic development and quality-of-life projects taking place throughout the city.

property. The green space will include a performance stage and public restrooms.

"We are committed to being a walkable city, with trails and through place-making," he says.

To further foster that idea, sidewalks are being added downtown that connect individuals to the park, and alleyways are being improved to provide more "pleasurable walking areas," Dunkerley says, specifically the east-west sidewalk adjacent to the Hive, a community arts incubator, and the east-west alley that lies north of Main Street between Second and Third streets.

The areas are being rehabilitated seating, turning them from alleys into sidewalks, an idea that city officials saw implemented during intercity visits.

The city is also expanding its main trail in the south part of the city in order to connect it to down-

As the city continues to see development, Dunkerley makes it clear that this was no accident but, rather, a plan of action that community leaders have methodically implemented.

With the success of the Jenks school district, we had to think outside of the box to bring economic development to the city," he says.

"First, we focused on building high quality neighborhoods, because our school system was drawing families to the city. As we've accomplished that goal, we then focused on core infrastructure improvements and establishing a business friendly environment with incentives such as TIF districts to attract high quality economic development.

"With the Arkansas River, Simon Premium Outlets and our downtown, we are making Jenks a point of destination," says Dunkerley.

That vision, it appears, is nearing fulfillment now more than ever before.

BROKEN ARROW EDUCATION BAHS Junior Benefits Vandever Students

By EMILY RAMSEY Managing Editor

In August, Broken Arrow High School junior Andrew Singletary used his Eagle Scout project to impact wheelchair-bound students at Vandever Elementary.

Singletary, who was diagnosed with autism at age three, began as a Cub Scout in first grade. Recently, he had been looking for a community project that would help him earn his Eagle Scout rank.

So, before school started, Singletary, with help from his Scout troop 977, constructed a wheelchair ramp in Vandever's garden, which sits in an open-air atrium in the center of the school.

According to special education teacher Tobey Bullington, all BAPS elementary students who are in wheelchairs attend Vandever.

"Andrew wanted to do something to help the students with disabilities," says Bullington.

The garden will include two flowerbeds that can be accessed by the ramp, with one bed raised to allow for easy access for wheelchair-bound students, explains will feature flowers of different textures and scents to allow for sensory stimulation.

Singletary also built a bench in the garden.

"I want to help students so they can gain experience in the garden and learn to garden with their own hands," says Singletary.

Also assisting Singletary on the project were his family, Vandever teachers and Crossland Construction.

In addition to flowers, the garden also contains fruit and vegetable Bullington. One of the flowerbeds plants and is used as an outdoor classroom and as a teaching area for garden club members.

=B.A. SPORTS= Carder Key Anchors B.A. Tiger Defense

By MIKE MOGUIN Sports Writer

Part of the reason Broken Arrow made the Class 6AI state title game last year was due to the performance of Carder Key on defense.

Key, a 6-2, 215-pound senior linebacker, forced 72 tackles, including four sacks, helping the Tigers to a district championship. He is now considered as one of the top players in the area at his position.

"I think it's a lot of blood, sweat and tears to get to this point," says Key, who has been starting since his sophomore year. "You come in every day with a chip on your shoulder ready to work.

"I see things a lot easier now because I know where things are going to happen before they happen," Key says. "Every year, I'm getting bigger, stronger and faster. It's a lot of fun playing with new speed, new strength and being able to do a lot of different things.

The top highlight for Broken Arrow in the 2015 season was an upset of Jenks, whom it eventually lost to in the state championship. B.A. was a one-point victor (35-34) in a highscoring battle against the Trojans in their regular season matchup but lost to them by 21 points (35-14) in the title game. That has carried over through the offseason and the Tigers would like nothing more than to get back to that place in the final.

"You come that close and you get everything you ever wanted taken away from you," Key says. "It burns a little bit. Everybody has a chip on their shoulder and is ready to come out and prove something again this year. Everybody is counting us out, but I don't think any of us feel like we have any disadvantage or any reason why we shouldn't go back to the state championship game this year.'

Broken Arrow opened the season on the road down in Texas, playing Euless Trinity, back on Aug. 26, in what has become known as zero week. That meant less time for preparation.

"It's a great opportunity to go down to Texas and show them what Oklahoma football is all about," Key says less than two weeks before the game.

"This year, (preseason practices) is a lot different because everything is compacted. We got to squeeze everything we can out of every practice because we don't have the extra week," Key says. "We got it coming up quick. We got five practices of pads before we suit up against Euless. Everybody is trying to squeeze everything they can in every practice, trying to get the most they can."

Overall, seven starters are back for the Broken Arrow defense. Key is one of two starting linebackers who are back. Skyler Haynes (6-1, 200, senior) is the other. Both will be used in a 4-3 scheme.

CARDER KEY

Tucker Dunlap (5-11, 180, junior) and C. J. Myers (5-10, 156, senior) return to the secondary. Trenton Lieurance (6-0, 275, senior) is expected to help on the defensive line. New starters will occupy the rest of the lineup.

Cade Yeager (6-1, 195, senior, quarterback), Corben Chambers (5-7, 155, junior, running back), Noah Cortes (5-10, 195, senior) and Devin Clayton (6-2, 215, junior, tight end) are among those back on offense. Blake Batson (6-3, 235, senior) is expected to anchor the line.

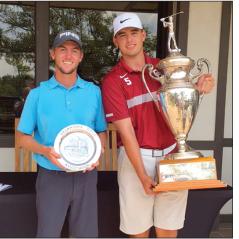

"We're young, we're going to learn, and we're going to keep getting better and better, and that's an advantage for us," Key says. 'Teams will peak early, but we're going to peak when we're supposed to late in the season, and it will help us out.

After the opener at Euless Trinity in Texas, B.A. will play at Union (Sept. 2), then will have its home opener against Owasso (Sept. 9). After an off-week, the Tigers remain at home to begin District 6AI-1 play against Yukon (Sept. 23), followed by a trip to Jenks (Sept. 30) to close out both the month and the first half of the regular season.

"It's about getting thrown into the fire," Key says. "You're either going to react or you're going to not. Coming from B.A., you're going to have to perform. You don't want to get embarrassed. So (the schedule) brings guys to come out and play with everything they can. We proved last year by beating Jenks in the regular season that we can definitely compete with them, and we're going to show Union that this year."

B.A. Golfer Finishes 2nd

Tate Williamson of Broken Arrow walked all six rounds in three hot days of the Oklahoma Golf Association State Amateur Championship, and it seemed to be taking its toll at the midway point of his championship match against Quade Cummins of Weatherford. A series of loose shots led to bogeys on holes nine and 10, putting him three down to the redshirt freshman at the University of Oklahoma, who was zipping around in a cart like most of the competitors in what began as a 64-man field at Oklahoma City Golf and Country Club. All it took, however, was a 35-foot birdie putt from just off the green at the par-3 11th, and the rising senior at Northeastern State University was reenergized. Two holes later, he pulled off a miraculous punch shot from under a tree from 150 yards to two feet for another birdie at the par-5 13th, then birdied two of the next three as well. Cummins capped Williamson's birdie on the 14th hole with one of his own, then, leading by one after Williamson birdied 16, stuffed his approach

Football Brings Oklahoma's Favorite Season

Big Three Teams Tout Great QB's

By TERRELL LESTER Editor at Large

Few words in any Oklahoman's conversational vocabulary can move the emotional needle more swiftly than "kickoff."

The mere utterance of the word conjures up vivid visions of bountiful tailgating, splendid autumn afternoons and high-definition televisions and jumbotrons.

It could be that "kickoff" is actually Oklahoma's fifth season. Some might make a case for "kickoff" being Oklahoma's first season.

Smack in between the summer solstice and the winter solstice resides the football solstice, a period when the sun shines brightest on every gridiron in Oklahoma.

The football solstice is just a flip of a calendar page away. If it's September, it must be time for kickoff.

Football has been a vital part of Oklahoma's history, going back more than a decade before statehood and just a few years after the Land Run.

As Oklahoma has matured and the state's most passionate pasprospered, football, too, has time, the state's foremost source developed and evolved, becoming of energy

With six wins in Montgomery's debut season, TU surpassed its total of victories (five) from the previous two years combined.

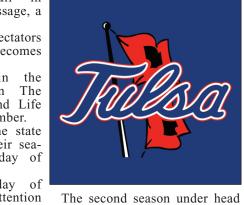

TU traces its football history to its origins as Henry Kendall College and its first game in 1895.

In the second week of the 2016 season, TU will experience football at its highest historical level. On Sept. 10, the Golden Hurricane will travel to Columbus, Ohio, and the home of Ohio State University. The game will be played in 94-year-old Ohio Stadium, with a seating capacity of 104,944.

Considering Ohio State's recent success and solid, loyal fan base, it is likely the game could draw a sellout crowd, or close. Regardless, the largest crowd ever to see a Golden Hurricane team play football was 85,260 at the University of Oklahoma's Memorial Stadium in 2011.

As the regular season ends on Nov. 25, TU will have played six home games. Perhaps TU's most attractive American Athletic Conference game, with league favorite Houston, is on the road.

OU, OSU, TU Plan to Return to Bowls in 2016

Expectations of OU football seem to always run in the hyperbolic range.

The Sooners as a team, and the Sooners as a fan base, expect to be in the hunt every season for a national championship, or, at the least, a conference championship.

Last season, the 17th under head coach Bob Stoops, OU won the Big 12 Conference title en route to a spot in the national semifinals and an 11-2 record.

Baker With quarterback Mayfield and running back Samaje Perine headlining a nationally ranked offense, the Sooners have their sights set on being once again in the national championship picture.

But to reach that level, the Sooners must navigate through a schedule that includes the seasonopener at Houston, a home game with Ohio State and the annual Red River Rivalry with Texas in Dallas.

That represents one of the most anticipated schedules OU has approached since it first kicked off a football season in 1895. It was another five years, 1900, gridiron for the first time, and nine years, 1904, before OU first took on in-state rival Oklahoma A&M.

TULSA'S DANE EVANS

Since that time, OU's football fortunes have soared. In the two decades following World War II, the fervor connected with OU's success began to be viewed as outright devotional, if not pious. concludes with the annual arrival in Norman in 1999.

before OU and Texas met on the Bedlam game with Oklahoma State on Dec. 3.

GTR file pho

The Sooners have been installed as favorites to repeat as Big 12 Conference champs. Much will depend on a defense that graduated an experienced core. The aforementioned "expectations" involving the Sooners include appearing in another bowl under Stoops. He has not failed to OU's six-game home schedule play in the post-season since his

Oklahoma State Cowboys

Mike Gundy, alum and quarterback record-setter, is kicking off his 12th season as head coach. He has put the Cowboys in 10 straight post-season bowls.

Coming off a 10-3 season in which Mason Rudolph emerged as a game-changing quarterback, the Cowboys can get off to a rollicking start with three consecutive home games.

If they can put together a run from the outset, they might be able to withstand a closing schedule that finds the Cowboys on the road for four of their last six games.

Gundy has enjoyed quite a run at the helm of his alma mater, and now sits as the winningest coach in school history, a span that began in 1901.

To extend that success, Gundy is looking at Rudolph operating behind an offensive line that returns intact. Additionally, Rudolph has four receivers who averaged 11 catches per game last year.

There always is talk of outstanding running backs at OSU. The new talk this year focuses on an old name.

Barry Sanders Jr. has transferred in from Stanford, upon his graduation.

The son of OSU's lone Heisman Trophy winner, he will command much of the offensive spotlight as a complement to Rudolph's passing game.

The Cowboys kick off their season with Southeastern Louisiana on Sept. 3 and close things out on Dec. 3 at Oklahoma.

Bedlam can be expected to be one of the spotlight games on the OSU schedule.

A year ago, in Stillwater, the Cowboys dropped a 58-23 decision, but in the previous three meetings, the game was decided in the final seconds.

Jason Christie Prepares for Second Oilers Season

By GLENN HIBDON GTR Sports Writer

Tulsa coach Jason Christie is sweating it out as he prepares for his second season with the Oilers.

"It's hot, eh?" says Christie, a 47-year-old Canadian. "It's been hot this whole month. I spent the last four years with a dry heat in California, but coming here it's really humid. The humidity down here is worse than the six years I spent in Illinois.

"This is one of the hottest places I've been to."

After finishing one point out of the ECHL playoffs a year ago in Christie's maiden voyage, the Oilers open training camp on Oct. 3 in preparation for what could be a banner season. Christie came to town a year ago with little time to recruit. After building his team from the ground up over a long, hot summer, expectations now call for the veteran coach to match his glowing credentials.

Christie became the ECHL's all-time winningest coach last season and arrived in Tulsa with 40 victories in eight of 13 seasons as a head coach. He had made the playoffs in 11 of those 13 campaigns and has compiled a 557-334-110 career record. Such impressive marks lead to high hopes for Oilers fans.

This is the crazy time of year, and that makes it fun," Christie says of his recruiting efforts. "We have a good corps of guys coming back, and we're in kind of a building process.

"Last year we were right in the thick of things and were battling for second place, six points out of first, but we lost a lot of players at the end of the year. We lost nine toward the end, but that's why they are at this level. We're here to develop players and they all want to go up. You can't stop a kid from going up."

The Oilers appeared to be on the threshold of clinching a playoff spot when the Winnipeg Jets, their NHL affiliate, raided their roster and gutted much of the offense. Emerson Clark was leading the team in scoring when he was called up by the Chicago Wolves of the AHL and finished his season there. Clark is still with the Wolves heading into camp, but Christie wants him back if he doesn't stick there.

"It was a big blow losing him to the Wolves last year," says Christie. "It was an unusual situation (with the Winnipeg organization) because of their injury situation. They usually don't have that many, and it was weird. It was only the second time it's happened to me in my coaching career.'

Christie says he doesn't blame the system for draining his best offensive players. It's simply the nature of the beast.

"Every kid has a different avenue in their careers and some have to start in the ECHL,' he says. "Last season, I had four goalies on opening-day NHL rosters who played for me. That's how close it is. It's like baseball. Some kids have to go the extra mile to prove they can play. It's not fair to a kid to come down here and work his tail off and not get rewarded. It's like any business. Everybody wants to move up."

Sometimes they return. Dan DeSalvo finished last year as the Oilers' leading scorer and has already signed for the 2016-17 season. Dennis Brown, the team defensive MVP a year ago, has also inked along with rookie Ben Murphy. Other signees had not been announced as of mid-August.

DeSalvo collected 16 goals and 35 assists and made the All-ECHL Rookie Team before being called up by the Manitoba Moose on March 9. Brown amassed 35 points, 17th in the league among D-men, while Murphy joined the Oilers for the final 10 games of the season.

"Danny had a great year and Dennis had a breakout year for himself," Christie says. They are two folks we wanted to come back and build around. DeSalvo never wants to be outworked, and he's relentless and full of energy. He knows where he is on the ice, and his determination puts him over the top.

"Brown is a skilled player with a good head on his shoulders for the game. He sees the rink well, and he's a guy who absorbs things when you talk to him. He wants to get better every day. Murphy scored some big goals at the end of the year and can shoot the puck well. It was a good summer for him in getting quicker and quicker at the pro level.

With the Oilers retaining his rights, goalie Kevin Carr is also expected back in camp, but Christie says Winnipeg is sending the team a goalie to inspect. Carr has been the mainstay between the pipes for Tulsa the last two seasons. In 97 games played, Carr has a 51-37-6 record with 2,483 saves in 5,631 minutes and a .912 save percentage.

Christie inherited Carr after he was announced as the Oilers' 11th head coach on July 23, 2015. He told a source that arriving so late in the recruiting process did hinder his preparation for the season. He says the team was a young one, but he didn't complain about the club's production on ice. This time, familiar faces should dot his roster.

"With the players we've got coming back this rear, it's exciting for me. I've gotten to know a little bit of their identity and that makes it easier with a year under our belt," Christie says. "Our goal is getting better every day, from our organization on down. We want to be the elite organization in the league. We don't want to get stale.

'Starting late last year doesn't matter to me. I've done it before and made the playoffs. There are no excuses in hockey."

If the Oilers do reach postseason play in 2016-17, they will take a different route than last year. The ECHL has realigned its divisions ,and Tulsa will play in the Central Division along with Kalamazoo, Toledo. Fort Wayne, Quad City, Indianapolis and Wichita. Gone are long-time nemeses Allen and Missouri.

'I think we've a good balance in the league. Geez, it wasn't like we couldn't beat them,' Christie says of Allen and Missouri. "We didn't have a problem with them, and we played them a ton.

We'll just keep recruiting and see what guys are on the short list of American League teams. We'll see what guys aren't going to make it. I thought we had a good season last year until the end. We are by all means not satisfied with just making the playoffs.

"We like winning hockey games and losing doesn't sit well. We don't take it lightly. For sure, we expect bigger and better things.

In any event, the heat is still on for Christie and his Oilers when the season opens on Oct. 15

John Oje Named CTCA Tulsa Executive Chef

By EMILY RAMSEY Managing Editor

In July, John Oje was named executive chef at Cancer Treatment Centers of America (CTCA) in Tulsa. Oje replaced Kenny Wagner, who left to reopen his family's restaurant Paddy's Irish Restaurant in south Tulsa.

Oje was born and raised in Hawaii, with a Hawaiian-Chinese mother and a German-Irish father, who worked as an executive pastry chef and baker. In addition to his father, Oje's mother taught him how to cook when he was eight years old.

"I grew up mainly with influ-ences of Japanese, Chinese, English and Hawaiian," Oje says.

Those various influences coupled with a large extended family and a mother who frequently cooked for family gatherings, Oje gained many years of cooking experience.

"In our culture, when individuals come to our house, they are fed and completely taken care of," he says.

Oje's parents moved to Tulsa in 1992; Oje followed four years later and went on to earn his culinary degree from Oklahoma State University Institute of Technology in Okmulgee. He interned and then worked for 12 years with Tulsa Chef Michael Fusco as head chef at Flavors Restaurant and as executive chef at Michael Fusco's Riverside Grill.

In 2001, Oje earned the silver medal at the "Best Young Chef" competition in Houston, Texas. He returned to the competition in 2002, earning the title as "Best Young Chef in the Southwest."

Oje joined CTCA in January 2014 as executive sous chef to Wagner.

While there were some adjustments to be made when Oje came to CTCA, including acclimating to shorter work days compared with the typical restaurant schedule, many of Oje's cooking standards translated easily to CTCA.

"At Riverside Grill, we were focused on using fresh, local ingredients and cooking in a clean and light way, not heavy," he says.

In addition to creating the daily meals for CTCA's cafe, Oje and his kitchen staff are responsible for providing catering meals for hospital meetings and events and providindividualized meals for ing patients with special diets.

Below is a family recipe that Oje remembers his mother making, called Lau Lau.

Lau Lau is a protein (chicken, pork or fish) wrapped in a layer of taro leaves and then wrapped in ti leaves, which have a high oil content that provides protection from high heat. In the recipe below, Oje recommends using swiss chard in replacement of taro leaves.

'After moving to Oklahoma from Hawaii, our family missed the traditional Hawaiian fare and ingredi-

Residential Project Planned AVB HELPS BOY SCOUTS For B.A.'s Rose District

Oaks Off Main To Feature 16 Homes

Primus In August, Properties held a ground breaking for The Oaks off Main, a new residential development in the Rose District, to be located at Cedar Avenue and Commercial Street within walking distance to the shops, businesses and restaurants in the Rose District.

The Oaks off Main is a brownstone-style residential development that will feature 16 homes in a park-like setting, says Bill Leet, owner of Primus Properties. The homes will range in size from 1400 to 2300 square feet and will include modern design features.

Several new homes have been built in the downtown area, but this is the first project with this many homes planned.

Solomon's Exhibit Spotlights the Selfie

By EMILY RAMSEY Managing Editor

Broken Arrow resident and photographer Jill Solomon's exhibit Narcissique Touriste, which was on display for a week in August at the Broken Arrow Historical Society, centered around Solomon's love for Paris and the unexpected discovery she made when she visited there in April.

"At first, I had a dilemma of how to bring my own creative voice to these monuments that have been photographed so many times," she says.

Then, upon her observations of fellow tourists, Solomon found that in the current age of technology and social media many visitors were more interested in photographing themselves than they short. I knew that if I was ever were in the art itself, causing Solomon to feel, at first, irritation. which was then followed by an epiphany.

'I realized that this is the story," she says.

So, she began taking photos of individuals as they took photos of themselves, resulting in her exhibit at the Historical Society.

'Most people didn't notice that I was taking their photo, but a few people figured it out and asked me to send them copies of their photos, and now I have friends in Russia and Paris," Solomon laughs.

Solomon's trip to Paris came about after years of Solomon's desire to visit the city of love and its centuries of history and art. As she grew older, "I realized, life is going to get to Paris, I needed to do it," she says. Both Solomon's home and photography studio are located in downtown Broken Arrow. She opened her studio in 2012 after years working as a designer.

However, it was the unexpected death of her father that caused her to realize her passion for photography. "I remember going through my house looking for any last pho-tos that had been taken of him," she says. "That made me realize how important it is to document your life not just for you but for your family.

"I consider that to be the last gift my father gave me: helping me to realize my passion for photography.'

Vision For Children Holds Third Annual Fundraiser

A little over eight years ago Dr. Tom pairs of glasses made and delivered at no on a fishing trip to Bimini, Bahamas, with a few of his buddies. What he expected to be some down time with friends and relaxing in a beautiful location was spoiled by an unexpected storm. Because of that storm, and nonprofit organization. Vanderpool's curiosity, many children in the Bahamas can see better today.

On that rainy day when the fishing was terrible, Vanderpool decided to venture into the town looking for the local optometrist, but after visiting with the townspeople he learned that they did not have one. The island's medical system does not provide eye care for any of its citizens, and optometric care is only available on the islands of Freeport and Nassau. In order for the people of Bimini to receive care, they must travel on a boat or plane to one of the two other islands. Because of this, almost no child on the island had ever had an eye exam.

Since then, Vanderpool and his wife, Susan, have been inspired to help those children in Bimini and have returned to the island for the last eight years at least one month every year. These return trips have resulted in over 2,000 vision screenings, nearly 1,000 full eye exams, and over 500

In an effort to expand their mission, Vanderpool and VFC are holding the third annual fundraising benefit on September 15 at Spain Ranch in Jenks. The funds raised at this event will be used to continue care in the Bahamas and to expand their giving to the children of northeastern Oklahoma. "Our goal is to eventually have a network of doctors and individuals throughout Oklahoma who can refer to us when they find a child who cannot afford the glasses they desperately need" says Susan Vanderpool.

Tickets to the Vision for Children fundraiser are $50 per person. Included with the ticket price are an open wine bar and food crawl that will feature items from local restaurants and vendors. Attendees will also be able to participate in a silent auction, live auction, wine ring toss, and other fundraising games.

Habitat For Humanity Leads 24-Hour Home Build

By EMILY RAMSEY Managing Editor

In an effort to redevelop the Kendall Whittier neighborhood, Tulsa Habitat for Humanity and local community partners, including the Home Builders Association (HBA) Foundation Charitable and Silvercrest Homes, held "Open the Door in 24," a 24-hour complete home build event starting the morning of Aug. 18.

By 8 a.m. on Aug. 19, volunteers had transformed an empty lot in the Kendall Whittier neighborhood at 2522 E. 5th Pl. into a three-bedroom, two-bathroom, one-garage home that will serve as a model for future Habitat for Humanity homes. The home is also one of the first Insurance Institute for Business and Home Safety (IBHS) Fortified Homes in the state of Oklahoma. The IBHS Fortified Home program offers disaster protection and strengthens homes from hurricanes, high winds, hail and severe thunderstorms.

"With Tulsa Habitat for Humanity's new target group, we're excited to play a role in offering a new source of housing option," says Peter Grant, president of HBA Charitable Foundation. The foundation has partnered with Tulsa Habitat for Humanity for 15 years.

BEFORE AND AFTER: On the morning of Aug. 18, construction workers began work on building a new home at 2522 E. 5th Pl. in the Kendall Whittier neighborhood as part of "Open the Door in 24," a 24-hour complete home build event, a project by Tulsa Habitat for Humanity, the Home Builders Association (HBA) Charitable Foundation, Silvercrest Homes and additional community partners. The three-bedroom, two-bathroom, onegarage home was completed the following morning.

These partners include George Kaiser Family Foundation, which is focused on directing various needed resources to the area, such as economic development, health care and public safety; and Growing Together, a local nonprofit with the mission of improving the quality of life in Kendall Whittier.

Tulsa Habitat for Humanity's goal is mixed-income community. "By intermingling various incomes in a neighborhood, it brings a change in dynamics to the area, and it's a more just and effective way to redevelop," Walker says.

The completed home will serve as a model home for Tulsa Habitat for Humanity for 18 months until a Kendall Whittier Elementary teacher is identified to purchase the home.

"We have an intentional focus to reach out to Tulsa Public Schools and its schools in the Kendall Whittier area," says Walker.

As another partner, Tulsa Public Schools is helping to identify teachers who qualify for HUD assistance who are willing to live near the schools in which they teach.

"Research shows that when teachers live in the community where they work, their relationships with parents and students are better, which leads to better student academic outcomes and greater family success," he says.

A few months ago, Tulsa Habitat for Humanity placed its first TPS teacher in a home in the area.

Prairie Brewpub: Memorable Beer, Food on Display

LOCAL DINING

By BLAKE AUSTYN Contributing Writer

Prairie Brewpub, 223 N. Main St., opened in May in downtown Tulsa's Brady Arts District to high expectations and eager, large crowds. The popularity has yet to dissipate.

It took over two years from when Chase and Colin Healey, founders of Prairie Brewery, took steps with restaurateur Josh Royal to create a downtown brewpub. As the vision grew, additional partners were brought on: Ryan Stack, previous co-owner of MixCo; Paul Sorrentino; and Bill Grant.

Royal, Sorrentino and Grant also own R Bar, located in Brookside, and Roosevelt's, which opened in August on Cherry Street.

Though Prairie Brewery was recently bought by Krebs Brewing Co., that will have very little to no effect on the brewpub, says Stack.

The focus of the brewpub is, of course, beer and on highlighting Prairie beers. Mixed drinks are not available, except for a handful of offerings of seasonal, aged cocktails. There are also nearly 15 wines available and 20 whiskeys. The restaurant maintains 20 beers on tap, with 10-15 being Prairie beers. "Whatever space is left available on tap, we add in with beers that we are interested in, whether that's breweries that we the day.

have worked with in the past or beers from places we have visited or whatever is current right now. We are always trying to stay ahead of the game," Stack says. The restaurant also offers close to 20 bottled beers.

As for the food menu, "we wanted it to complement the beers reallv well," says Stack, describing the food as American pub style.

Included on the menu are a few dishes with meat supplied by Burn Co BBQ, which has a very loyal following of its own. Burn Co dishes are only available for dinner Tuesday-Saturday.

One of these dishes is the Mac and Chase, macaroni and cheese with four kinds of cheeses, bacon, roasted tomatoes, Burn Co rib tips and green onion.

The hype about this dish since the restaurant opened has, admittedly, caused me to want to walk the other way. Few dishes live up to the hype. Turns out, this one absolutely does. Add a beer to wash it down, and you're downright floating on the ceiling. Heavenly.

However, before I got to my Mac and Chase, my group tried the Fried Green Tomatoes, which came with sides of Lemon Aioli and Ancho Rancho sauces. The fried tomatoes are a good, basic breaded item to pair with beer. Their taste really shines, though, when the sauces are added.

Our other entree was the fried catfish, which was the special of CONTINUED POPULARITY: Prairie Brewpub, 223 N. Main St., opened in downtown Tulsa's Brady Arts District in May as a partnership with Prairie Brewery. It maintains 20 beers on tap, with 10-15 being Prairie beers. The menu features American pub style food with dishes meant to complement the beers. One such dish, the Mac and Chase, at left, has gained a large following and for good reason. It is made with four kinds of cheeses, bacon, roasted tomatoes, Burn Co rib tips and green onion.

"We recently started offering daily specials as a way to experiment with new items that we are thinking about adding to the menu," says Stack. "It's a way to try new ideas and find out what's working for customers.'

The dish was made up of three nice-sized pieces of breaded catfish with sautéed brussel sprouts. The slightly charred flavor of the brussel sprouts was delightful and paired well with the catfish, which had a very mild, non-fishy flavor.

For dessert, we couldn't resist sharing the Pirate Bomb Bread Pudding, a chocolate and coconut bread pudding with a chile rum sauce. The coconut pieces were plentiful and complemented the chocolate well.

But the greatest moment for me was my first taste of the Mac and Chase. I look forward to repeating that experience many more times.

Although, as we start to enter fall with its cooler temps, I have a plan for one of my next visits to Prairie, which involves trying one of its burgers - "We can't keep enough of them in the kitchen," says Stack; "they're fantastic" – and eating that burger on Prairie's patio, which sits between Prairie and the adjacent building. "It's like we took an alleyway and created a green space," says Stack.

Prairie Brewpub is open Monday-Thursday 4 p.m.-11, Friday 4 p.m.-1 a.m., Saturday 11 a.m.-1 a.m., Sunday 10 a.m.-5 p.m.

Frida Kahlo: Through the Lens of Nickolas Muray continues through Sept. 11, at Gilcrease Museum, and is a must-see for art aficionados.

Some 50 photographic portraits of Kahlo, dating from 1937 to 1946, explore Muray's unique perspective as her friend, lover, and confidant.

Considered to be one of Mexico's greatest and most prolific artists, Frida Kahlo (1907-1954) began painting during the recovery phase after being severely injured in a bus accident at age 18

As a political activist, she later married fellow communist artist Diego Rivera, the famed muralist, who was 21 years her senior, in 1929

Kahlo is said to have painted the powerful image of herself at the same age, 33, that Christ was crucified.

Also notable is Muray's gelatin silver print of Kahlo's 1939 The Two Fridas oil painting, showing her two personalities – before and after her painful divorce that year. Muray has captured it all for posterity in print.

Photographer Nickolas Muray

The Hungarian Nickolas Muray (1892-1965), a successful New York fashion and commercial photographer, met Frida, his most inspiring model, during a 1931 Mexico vacation.

Having already pioneered highly saturated color photography for celebrities, socialites and artists, Muray found his most colorful subject in

As his most photographed subject, Kahlo became uniquely recognized in popular culture, via a variety of media. While there, one of Kahlo's small selfportraits was purchased by the Louvre.

A Woman of Ambivalence

Ironically, when Frida suffered the loss of Diego through divorce, she is said to have had no intention to marry "Nick."

Among large photographic prints of her personal letters to Nick is one dated May 31,1931, in which she included, with the original, a photo of herself holding hands with her spouse, Rivera. She signed the same note with the imprint of a kiss from her own lips, then sent it to her paramour. Muray and Kahlo remained friends and confidants until her death in 1954.

This traveling exhibition has been organized through the Nickolas Muray Archives and is circulated by GuestCurator Traveling Exhibitions located in Santa Fe, New Mexico. Title sponsor of the Gilcrease Museum 2016 exhibition season is the Sherman E. Smith Family Charitable Foundation. Generous support is also provided by: Mervin Bovaird Based on the lives of three legendary Latin American women: Mexican painter Frida Kahlo, Salvadoran peasant activist Rufina Amaya and Argentine poet Alfonsina Storni, the show features diverse popular and folk songs of Mexico, El Salvador and Argentina. Cost is $8 for museum members, $10 for not-yet members. For additional details and please updates, visit www.gilcrease.org.

Billy's On the Square a Downtown Tulsa Tradition

By TERRELL LESTER Editor at Large

Familiarity breeds content. Few things in downtown Tulsa are as familiar as Billy's On the Square.

Even fewer things breed the contentment of savoring Billy's signature Theta burger.

For 32 years, Billy Bayouth, along with his loyal and unwavering staff, has been downtown Tulsa's lunch-time port-of-call.

Billy's has been creating burgers on opposite sides of Bartlett Square since the days when Main Street was a pedestrian mall.

First in the Sinclair Building, now in the Mayo Building, Billy's on the Square has made fewer moves than City Hall.

Billy's has been more of a consistent presence at Fifth and Main streets than Bartlett Square itself.

While Bartlett Square has transitioned from landmark fountain to dry hole, from traffic impediment to LED light show, Billy's has remained a gastronomic force of nature.

Comfortable and inviting, Billy's offers the best seat in Tulsa for noontime people watching Billy's window to the world might be surpassed only by its kitchen offerings, always under the watchful eye and practiced hand of Bayouth himself.

Menu favorites include nonesuch onion rings, charburgers, chicken sandwiches and Caesar's salads. And then there is the fall staple of Billy's blue-ribbon chili.

Yet for all the dining-room experiences and the one-of-akind location, Billy's On the Square has earned its reputation as a downtown landmark for one undeniable reason: the effervescent Billy Bayouth.

He is part of a widely known, highly respected family invested in the retail and service industry of greater Tulsa.

Bayouths have for years been involved in businesses such as clothing and food, entertainment and insurance.

Billy Bayouth, now 65, became arguably the most prominent link on the family's food chain, though it might not have been in his original plan.

A graduate of Jenks High School, he earned a degree in marketing and management from Northeastern Oklahoma State University. Cooking Theta burgers was not on his career menu, despite his mother, Josephine, operating King Sol's diner in Jenks during his formative years.

"I didn't learn enough there to know anything," he said.

Fresh out of college in 1974, he was encouraged by a family member to take a management position with a popular pizza restaurant in Tulsa's London Square shopping center, My Pi. It was a fortuitous alignment.

restaurateur of note, following in the footsteps of his father, Mike. Nick Samara made his presence felt in the operations of Pepper's Grill and Cantina, Big Mike's hamburger emporium and Celebrity Restaurant.

Sol eventually opened Pee Wee's Burgers and, later, Sol's Grill while taking part in an upscale entertainment venue, Tulsa Bandstand.

Sol was no stranger to the entertainment scene. He served as assistant manager at the Copa Club within the Hilton Hotel in Tulsa when cousin Jon Bayouth was manager. Sol later emerged as maître d when Jon opened the iconic Ziegfield's nightclub.

Along the same time, Billy was applying all the experience he gained from Hamburger Haven, building and opening Pee Wee's Burger Express just before settling into downtown Tulsa in 1984. In the late '80s, he expanded with a second Billy's at 51st Street and Yale Avenue.

Nick Samara, he said, helped put down the foundation for Billy's On the Square.

"Nick taught me a lot. How to do onion rings. How to do Caesar's salad," Bayouth said.

"I could never have done Billy's without the experience from Hamburger Haven."

Bayouth entered the downtown market during the infamous downturn of oil fortunes of the early '80s.

Even after signing a lease for ground-level space within the Sinclair Building, southeast corner of Bartlett Square, Bayouth was forced to endure a series of roadblocks.

Due to a mixup in contracts, the space was not available. The space went to a computer store. He reluctantly agreed to a second-story space, but then had to wait some six months before stairway access could be completed.

When Billy's On the Square eventually opened in the Sinclair Building, the last remaining operator-controlled elevator in downtown was still in service from the lobby to the second floor.

With his location in the heart of the Mayfest throngs, Bayouth flourished in the spring and Billy's became a festival staple to this day.

In 2001, while unable to agree on a new Sinclair lease, Bayouth landed the vacant ground-floor space in the Mayo Building diag-Samara was emerging as a onally across Bartlett Square, on the northwest corner.

Bayouth completed the move in less than a week.

Within seven years, the BOK Center opened within walking distance from Billy's and a new light was illuminating the downtown landscape.

Bayouth was among the first to secure a vendor's permit for food sales within the facility. The result: a de facto Billy's On the BOK.

As in other Bayouth ventures, the stars were in perfect alignment. Billy's On the Square operates from 10:30 a.m. until 2:30 p.m. weekdays. Most BOK events are scheduled at night.

Bayouth can work both sites. Some of his staff also does double duty. He has a roster of experienced helpers to complete the staff needed at the BOK.

Bayouth points with pride to his number of long-term employees.

He and his wife, Anita, have worked side by side at Billy's since 1984. So, too, have Stephanie Stewart, Anita's sister, and Donald Compton and Mark Rector. Maurice Barnett joined the roster in 1985.

Most have ties with Bayouth dating back to My Pi.

Bartlett Square, Bayouth said, "has always been one of the best locations in town."

Yet the key, he said, to the success of Billy's has been "experienced, good help."

In addition to the aforementioned six, Bayouth counts nine-year veteran Ollie Carbin as part of the Billy's team with 200 years of Theta burger experience. All in one little square of downtown Tulsa.

Bayouth has no trouble placing the estimate of sales of Billy's burgers at "3 million plus."

And he sees no slowdown.

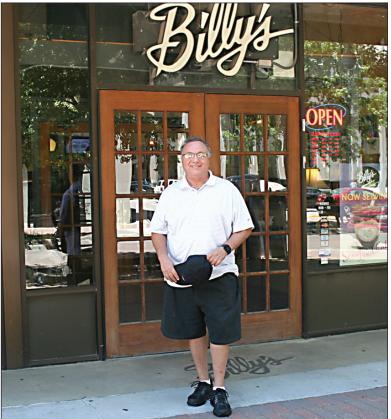

Instead, he sees an uptick.

Talking of increased downtown traffic, due to a rise in condo and apartment residents, Bayouth is giving considerable thought to expanding the hours of Billy's. "It's coming," he said.

"There is a possibility of sometime late summer that we might start experimenting with some night business," he said.

Just as downtown Tulsa recovered and prospered after the oil bust of the '80s, Billy's On the Square will be adjusting to the new and improved residential environment. Billy's On the Square once was called a shining star in the gloomy days of downtown Tulsa. That star remains just as bright

During his five years with My Pi, Bayouth went from restaurant novice to restaurant impresario. He met his wife-to-be there. He forged working relationships with individuals that would last for decades to come.

Additionally, his time at My Pi 🔅 🔅 🐧 🔅 🗳 🧳 🌾 🌾 🌾 🌾 🌾 👘 🖉 provided the impetus for Bayouth and his brother, Sol, to join longtime family friend Nick Samara 8 in opening Hamburger Haven near 71st Street and Lewis Avenue in 1979.

"Nick had the experience, and Sol and I helped manage Hamburger Haven," Bayouth said.

From that wellhead sprang the hamburger legacies of brothers Billy and Sol Bayouth.

First State Investment Advisors Celebrates 45 Years of Success

By K.J. WEBB Contributing Writer

Tulsa-based First State Investment Advisors has been providing Tulsa families with portfolio management and investment expertise since 1971. The firm's approach to investing and its focus on personalized client service has established First State Investment Advisors as a trusted and consistently successful investment firm with a loyal client roster.

Since its inception, First State has partnered with key Tulsa families to provide them a new approach to investing: the Gold Chip Standard. Through these continued relationships, community involvement and charitable work, the firm's client base continued to expand over the years.

First State's founder, President and Chairman of the Board Sid Shupack says, "Our early clients developed a strong loyalty to us and continued to recommend us to families and friends, which allowed First State to grow and flourish through the years." As of March 2016, the firm managed nearly $42 million for individuals, pension plans and retirement accounts.

When asked to explain the Gold Chip Standard, Shupack says, "Our approach is to invest in the highest quality large cap companies, as determined by a list of factors we have defined as the standard of a Gold Chip company. We create value for our investors by becoming the expert on a selected list of these companies and buying in at opportune times based upon our fundamental analysis of the business."

Moreover, the firm's approach to investment management is different as compared to most other advisors. Where most investment firms rely on the recommendations and valuations provided by external sources, First State performs all of its own research, analysis and valuations.

In May 2016, the firm added another investment analyst to its staff, Matthew Redmond. As the company's new investment analyst and assistant portfolio manager, Redmond is responsible for developing the company's investment models and research. Since joining First State, Redmond has reduced the time required to complete First State's proprietary stock analysis from 30 days to one to three days, allowing more time to be spent researching companies to make better informed investment decisions.

Redmond graduated summa cum laude from Oral Roberts University with a BS in Finance and as an Honors Fellow, the highest distinction of the university's honors program. He had the top score of his university's graduating class on the ETS Major Field Test in Business, scoring in the 99th percentile of the national index. Prior to his position at First State, Redmond worked as a Financial Analyst for Helmerich & Payne. Redmond is currently earning his CFA Charter, one of the most prestigious designations a finance professional can have. After passing the first two of three exams in December 2015 and June 2016, he is currently a CFA Level III candidate.

Shupack explains the added value of the CFA designation, "The CFA credential is one of the most highly-esteemed designations in the investment world. It specializes in preparing candidates to become portfolio managers with advanced investment analysis skills. The high standards, grueling study, and work experience required ensures that the small percentage of candidates that make it through the program are well-equipped to analyze investments and make informed decisions. Holding the credential communicates a level of expertise and integrity that is widely respected, and it assures clients that every decision will be made with the highest degree of rigor. "

In addition to providing its own expert in-house analysis, Shupack explains another key factor that differentiates First State from other investment advisor firms: 'We believe a fundamental differentiator is our client approach. We take the time to develop close personal relationships with each of our clients. As a business, we act exclusively as a portfolio manager, we provide each of our clients with free financial planning to address all of their other financial questions." Shupack adds, "Because we do not sell other products or services, we are able to minimize conflicts of interest in our recommendations to clients of what would best meet each of their unique needs. Additionally, we are happy to serve any client who is prepared to invest."

When asked what people should look for when selecting an investment advisory firm, Shupack advises the following: "There are several factors to consider before making your decision. A person should ask whether the management team has the expertise, experience, and integrity to successfully manage investments; what is the investment philosophy of the management, and does it match with your own financial philosophy, objectives, and constraints; what is the longterm record and historical performance of the firm; and have they provided you with a clear definition of the probable risk of investing in their style? Many firms are quick to talk about how well they have performed and skirt over the risk." FINANCIAL EXPERTS: The First State Investment Advisors team of Matthew Redmond, left, and Sid Shupack stand outside their office in South Tulsa. Shupack is the firm's founder, president and chairman of the board, and Redmond is the new investment analyst and assistant portfolio manager responsible for developing the company's investment models and research.

Regarding the current investment landscape, Shupack's prognosis on the economy for the rest of 2016-2017 is a high estimate for the Dow Jones Industrial Average Index (DJIA) of 19,000 by the end of the year (it is about 18,500 currently). "Our estimate for the DJIA in 2017 is 18,000 on the low side and 20,300 on the high side. We are forecasting GDP growth of 1.5 percent for the full year of 2016 and 2 percent for 2017. We estimate that unemployment will remain at about five percent for this year and next. We expect the value of the dollar next year to stay within a five percent range of the current value."

When asked if there is an art to investing, Shupack says, "The art of investing is experience. The ability to evaluate risk and reward and to consider all of the many nuances that go beyond the research and mathematical models is one that can only come from time and expert training. Each time a decision is made, that ability improves, and it takes many decisions to round out the other analytical skills of investing with this art."

Animal Intuition Impresses Local Veterinarian

By EMILY RAMSEY Managing Editor

After more than 30 years as a doctor of veterinary medicine, one truth that veterinarian Dr. Patrick Grogan has witnessed time and again during his professional years is the perceptiveness and intuition of animals.

"I have seen over and over animals do remarkable things," says Grogan, who is the father of KOTV Channel 6 meteorologist Michael Grogan. "It's been really enjoyable (over the years) to learn that."

Grogan gives the example of a Golden Retriever named Winston, who was inducted into the Oklahoma Veterinary Medical Association's Oklahoma Animal Hall of Fame Hero category in 2004.

"With no training, Winston knew to alert his owner, who was diabetic, when his owner's blood sugar was getting low," says Grogan.

Winston would alert his owner by nudging him with his nose. Later, a button that called for emergency services was installed in the man's home, which Winston would press if his owner became incapacitated or experienced a diabetic coma.

"It's amazing that with no training, the dog could tell something was wrong and he tried to intervene," Grogan says.

owner. One day, a man broke into the home and tried to rape the owner. Even though the dog was nine months pregnant, she noticed, particularly among attacked the man and chased him younger clients, is the interest in away. Later, the man was caught and arrested.

"That dog most likely saved the woman's life," he says.

Grogan, a graduate of Oklahoma State University's veterinary school, interned with Woodland Animal Hospital. He has remained his entire career with the company, which is now owned by VCA Hospitals.

Grogan serves as medical director at VCA Woodland East Animal them after their pet comes out of Hospital, and he specializes in dogs and cats and other small animals.

During his years in practice, Grogan has witnessed many changes in the industry.

Two areas currently growing in emphasis are vets' awareness of providing greater in-clinic pet comfort, called fear-free visits, and increased vet-client communication.

Vets can provide a calm experience for their animal patients through the use of calming pheromone scents in treatment

He mentions another example of rooms and through early puppy a German Shepherd who lived in conditioning so that the animal the country with her female learns early on that the vet clinic is not a place to fear, Grogan says.

The other trend that Grogan has greater communication with their veterinarian. "Clients want that knowledge; they want to be involved in their pet's treatment," he says.

Grogan uses an app that can be accessed on his devices that connects him to his client database, which allows him to provide regular client updates on pets' condition.

"I can send photos and updates to surgery, copies of their lab work, and other pertinent information,' says Grogan.

Grogan is serving as the 2016 president of the Oklahoma Veterinary Medical Association (OVMA). For the past 10 years, he has served as a district director for OVMA.

Much of what OVMA is involved with is statewide advocacy and educational efforts for animalrelated issues. In addition, OVMA oversees the operation of the birthing centers and surgical suites at the Oklahoma City and Tulsa state fairs. OVMA estimates that the birthing centers see approximately 100,000 visitors each year, says Grogan. "They're very popular."

OVMA also holds yearly veterinary seminars and events as well as networking opportunities and activities that allow vets to communicate with each other.

Grogan has served on the Tulsa

City County Board of Health since 2003.

"The rewards of my field are twofold," says Grogan. "Seeing animals respond to treatments and surgeries and go on to live longer, healthier and pain-free lives. Secondly, is the relationships with my human clients, getting to know them and their families and seeing the next generation and their pets.

With the addition of new team members and calculated investments by Newton Box, Slim Haney is a growing company with a bright and prosperous future.

HONORING EMERGING LEADERS

DREAMING AND DOING: Honoring Oklahoma's Emerging Manufacturing Leaders at the recent Dream It Do It Kick-Off Breakfast at the Tulsa Tech Lemley campus are, from left, Joe Genet, Oklahoma Manufacturing Alliance; Dr. Steven Tiger, Tulsa Tech; Stephanie Cameron, OK2Grow/Dream It Do It Oklahoma, and Phil Albert, Pelco Structural. The event is open to educators, manufacturers, workforce partners, and students with the mission to create new interest in innovative and rewarding manufacturing careers. Phil Albert was the keynote speaker. In 2005, Albert, along with partner Phil Parduhn, opened Pelco Structural, LLC, located in Claremore. Dream It Do It Oklahoma invited area manufacturing employers to nominate "Emerging Manufacturing Leaders" in their company, who are under 40 years of age and show great potential in their manufacturing career. "Part of the coalition's goal is to clear up misconceptions among millennials. We want to let them know the diversity of jobs available in manufacturing, as well as the levels of salary they can earn," says Stephanie Cameron, state director of Dream It Do It Oklahoma.

Tulsa City-County Library CEO Dr. Gary Shaffer announces that the Tulsa Library Trust has hired Sarah Jane Gillett as its new executive director. The Tulsa Library

Trust serves as the foundation, or 501(c)(3), for the Tulsa City-County Library.

Gillett was a partner with the law firm Hall, Estill, Hardwick, Gable, Golden & Nelson, P.C. until June 2016. During her tenure with the firm, she was named one of Oklahoma's Top 25 Female Attorneys. Gillett has a deep history with Tulsa nonprofits, serving on the boards and committees of Collegiate Hall Charter School, Tulsa Ballet, the Tulsa Area United Way Women's Leadership Council and the Child Abuse Network. She is a former president and remains an ongoing advisor for the Junior League of Tulsa.

When guests arrived at the gate, they received individual compostable bags containing a stainless steel cup, and a bamboo plate and spork.

Step Two

In to the stage area, drink vendors fill your cup and food vendors fill your plate. Once done, take your dish to the station for a drop off and token pickup. Use your token at the vendor stations for use of a new plate. I kept my spork and cup clean but with me throughout the event.

Let's pause to highlight the sta-Step Seven tion's success. Homegrown pur-

Giant event line-up billboards staggered throughout the grounds to forgo printing individual-use playbill packets.

This system created more chatter between festivalgoers. People talked up their favorite performers, which was like live "likes," if you vided both efficient product and will.

Step Four

New Market Naturals from Fayetteville set up filtered water spouts inside the stage area, providing free fill-up stations to all patrons.

Step Five

Green Source provided on-site recycling and volunteers on bicycles retrofitted with bins hauled recycling and waste.

Step Six

Richter Solar Energy provided panels that fed 80 percent of the electricity used by the festival back to the grid. 80 percent!

overheard conversation: MRS' Turner telling a girl that the winner of the free t-shirt will be posted, to which her co-volunteer told the girl, "She means she'll write it on the actual poster wall to your right, not something online."

Step Eight

Richter Solar also provided a free device charging station!

Another conversation overheard as we packed up on Sunday: "Now that I know this is possible, I don't know if I can handle a festival that's not managed like this one." As I gazed across the grassy field just filled with dancers, now void of human footprint, I sighed and thought, "I too feel cynical. Yet hopeful?
